Hi John,

It turns out that I have to cover the Peterson Fdn's annual summit tomorrow, where Bill Clinton once again is keynoting (in Q&A w/Gwen Ifill). Do you have any info you can share on background about who's advising him these days on fiscal/economic policy?

We had a story two weeks ago that you might have seen on p.1 that reported he's frustrated that his economic policies aren't seen so favorably through the current left & center-left prism of economic inequality.

Subject: WSJ: Interest Groups Gain In Election Cash Quest

Interest Groups Gain In Election Cash Quest

Analysis Shows Giving To Parties Has Dipped; Beyond 'Swift Boating'

By BRODY MULLINS
December 19, 2007; Page A1

WASHINGTON -- One of the defining features of the 2004 presidential campaign was the devastating attack on Sen. John Kerry by an obscure group called the Swift Boat Veterans for Truth. In the years since, such independent political groups have only grown stronger, and they are poised to play an even bigger role in the 2008 elections.

Political groups unaffiliated with the two major parties account for an increasingly large share of spending on federal campaigns -- 19% of the total in 2006, up from just 7% in 2000, according to an analysis of campaign-finance data by The Wall Street Journal. They now are horning in on crucial campaign activities once dominated by the parties, such as buying ads and getting out the vote.

In Iowa, independent groups are whipsawing voters with a range of conflicting messages. An organization called Common Sense Issues has funded automated phone calls backing former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee and criticizing his chief Republican rivals. The Club for Growth, an antitax group, is working to defeat Mr. Huckabee with attack ads.

On the Democratic side, an organization called the American Federation of Teachers AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education has spent $250,000 on radio ads in Iowa backing Sen. Hillary Clinton. An environmental group called Friends of Earth Action is running ads against Sen. Clinton.

Over the past four years, the national Democratic and Republican parties have raised and spent less on elections than during the prior four years, when adjusted for inflation. At the same time, independent political groups have more than doubled their spending, and have begun to rival the parties as an election-season financial force, the Journal's data analysis shows.

The shift, largely the result of campaign-finance laws intended to curtail big-money donations to parties, could further polarize the American political landscape. Because the Republican and Democratic parties aim to appeal to broad swaths of the electorate, they tend to be moderating forces in politics. That isn't true of the independent groups, which range from the Sierra Club and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to fringe groups like Swift Boat Veterans for Truth, which disbanded after the 2004 election. They often pursue narrower agendas or causes further out on the political spectrum.

The nonprofit groups are financed by wealthy individuals, corporations, labor unions and other interest groups. Unlike the national parties, they face no limits on how much money they can take in from contributors. They often don't have to disclose their donors' names until months after an election -- if at all.

During the 2000 election cycle, such outside groups spent at least $260 million on presidential and congressional races, one-fifth as much as was spent by national political parties, according to the Journal analysis of campaign data provided by the Federal Election Commission and two nonpartisan organizations that track political spending. During the 2006 midterm elections, these outside groups spent about $600 million, almost two-thirds as much as was spent by the Republican and Democratic parties, the data indicate. Candidates themselves still account for the biggest piece of spending -- a bit less than half.

Overall, the amount of money poured into each two-year election cycle continues to climb. Data from the FEC and several groups that track campaign finance indicate that total spending during presidential-election cycles rose from $2.8 billion in 1995-96 to $3.6 billion in 1999-2000 to $4.8 billion in 2003-04. This year and next, it is expected to hit $6 billion, political strategists say.

Nonparty political organizations date back many years. The nation's founding fathers, in fact, considered it inevitable that outside political factions would attempt to influence the government.

The growing clout of such groups is an unintended consequence of a 2002 law intended to reduce the influence of money in politics. The Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002, championed by Arizona Republican Sen. John McCain, took aim at so-called soft-money donations to political parties. Soft money had become a major source of funding for both parties, which used the donations to support individual campaigns. The law barred the parties from accepting large contributions from wealthy individuals, corporations, labor unions and other interest groups.

The law elevated the importance of "bundlers" -- fund-raisers who gather contributions from friends, employees and family and pass them on in lump sums to political campaigns. Some bundlers had previously given soft money to national parties. The law also prompted donors to turn to political organizations not tied directly to the parties, many of them offshoots of established special-interest groups.

There are several distinct classes of independent political groups, each taking its name from the section of the Internal Revenue Service code under which it is organized. Most are known as 527 organizations. Although 527 groups are recognized as political, they are prohibited from explicitly calling for the election or the defeat of candidates. Consequently, they often promote or attack candidates without instructing people to vote for or against them.

Another class of independent groups is growing even faster -- and is flying further under the radar. These groups are organized under section 501c of the tax code, which gives tax-exempt status to nonprofit groups. One category, called "social welfare," is governed by section 501(c)4. Those groups can urge people to vote for or against a candidate -- so long as campaigning isn't their primary purpose, and they don't accept money from corporations or labor unions. Labor groups are governed by section 501(c)5; business groups by section 501(c)6. These 501(c) organizations don't have to disclose their donors.

Data from two nonpartisan organizations that track campaign finance -- the Center for Public Integrity and the Center for Responsive Politics -- show that election-cycle spending by 527 organizations rose from $171 million in 2000 to $316 million in 2002 to $653 million in 2004. Spending dropped to $443 million for the 2006 midterm elections. Spending on midterm elections typically runs lower than on presidential elections.

The new groups are pulling in money that the major parties used to receive. Before the 2002 crackdown, financier George Soros donated more than $200,000 to the Democratic Party. Since then, he has given at least $20 million to the 527 organizations. American Financial Group Inc. Chairman Carl Lindner previously donated more than $1.5 million in soft money to the Republican Party. In 2006, he gave about $500,000 to a 501(c)4 group called Common Sense Ohio, which sought to re-elect several Republican senators. In the last four years, Mr. Lindner has donated $3.6 million to outside groups backing Republican candidates, according to campaign-finance documents.

Because the IRS doesn't require 501(c) organizations to detail election spending or to list contributors, it's difficult to track their political activity. The Journal analyzed data on 30 separate 501(c) groups active in elections from 2000 to 2006, culled from a variety of sources. The data show that the 30 organizations spent at least $155 million on the 2006 elections, nearly twice what they spent in 2000.

The 501(c) organizations are likely to become even more important in the 2008 election. After the 2004 election, the FEC sought to crack down on 527 organizations that violate the IRS rule against calling for the election or the defeat of any candidate. Now, several large 527 groups are setting up 501(c)4 social-welfare organizations, which are allowed to back candidates explicitly.

Scott Reed, a Republican strategist, says that for political campaigns, using 501(c)4 organizations is "now the most effective way to go because donors are safe and don't need to be disclosed."

The Club for Growth, the antitax group, used to use a 527 structure for its election work. But the FEC fined it earlier this year for stepping over the line barring explicit voting recommendations. During the current election cycle, the group is shifting the work to a 501(c)4 unit, which carries fewer restrictions. The new structure will make the organization "bigger, better and more effective," said its president, Pat Toomey, in a letter to members. "We now have a significant new ability to run advertisements that directly call for the election or defeat of candidates." Another advantage, Mr. Toomey noted, is that "unlike the past, your donations to the Club will not be disclosed to the public."

The League of Conservation Voters, an environmental-advocacy group that was also fined by the FEC for its 527 spending, has made a similar move.

Another environmental group, Defenders of Wildlife, started a 501(c)4 organization before the 2006 election, partly to help wage a campaign to defeat California Republican Rep. Richard Pombo, then the chairman of the environment committee in the U.S. House. The group spent $2 million. Mr. Pombo lost the election. Rodger Schlickeisen, the group's president, says it plans to spend $5 million this election on campaigns against four candidates, including Rep. Don Young, the Alaska Republican who once was chairman of the same environment panel.

While independent groups have been building clout, the national political parties have been losing election-spending power. In 2002, the national parties raised $591 million in soft money, which funded about half of their budgets for that year's election cycle. (Figures used in this story have been adjusted for inflation.) Over the last four years, following the ban on soft money, the national parties have had about $200 million less to spend on campaigns, an 8% drop.

During the 2000 presidential election, the Republican and Democratic parties paid for 50% of advertising in the 70 largest cities, according to a study by the Wisconsin Advertising Project at the University of Wisconsin. In 2004, that figure fell to 17%. Outside groups accounted for 20% of the advertisements in the 2004 presidential campaign, double the amount of 2000, according to the project.

Democrats have led the charge toward using independent political organizations. Soon after the 2002 law took effect, several Democratic strategists, including Harold Ickes, a former top official with the Democratic Party, and Steve Rosenthal, who had run political operations for the AFL-CIO, met for dinner at BeDuCi's restaurant in Washington. They worried that the Republican Party would adjust better than the Democrats in 2004 to the loss of soft money because it controlled the White House, and because President Bush knew how to rake in campaign cash, Mr. Rosenthal recalls.

The Democrats decided to create and coordinate a set of 527 organizations, such as America Coming Together and the Media Fund, which would essentially act like a shadow Democratic Party. The Democratic strategists raised $200 million from wealthy liberals, trial lawyers, labor unions and other traditional backers of the Democratic Party, and spent it on the campaign, according to campaign finance records. The Democratic National Committee spent $390 million on the election, according to campaign records.

All told, since the campaign-finance law took effect, the 527 organizations that support Democratic candidates have spent nearly three times as much money on elections than those backing Republicans, according to the Campaign Finance Institute. One reason for the disparity is that corporations, once the largest source of soft-money donations to the Republican Party, haven't poured much money into 527s. Campaign-finance lawyers who advise 527 organizations say that corporations are concerned about getting involved with groups that run afoul of campaign-finance rules.

Democrats are expected to hold that lead during the 2008 cycle. Last month, two Democrats launched Fund for America, a 527 group that plans to raise at least $100 million to back the Democratic presidential nominee. Republicans say they are recruiting donors to match that amount.

Because they have their own agendas, outside organizations sometimes clash with one another, the national parties, even the candidates they support. Abortion-rights advocates say Democratic Party officials sometimes bristle when they fund political advertisements in support of candidates, because the ads focus attention on an issue that can alienate some voters. Naral Pro-Choice America plans to spend $10 million on the 2008 election cycle, double its budget for 2004. It hasn't yet endorsed any presidential candidate.

Sen. Clinton has been both the beneficiary and the target of considerable spending by independent groups. Friends of the Earth Action, an environmental group backing former Sen. John Edwards, is attacking her for not taking a stand on a global-warming bill. Emily's List, an organization that backs Democratic candidates who are pro-choice, has spent nearly $300,000 so far to support her in Iowa.

On the Republican side, the antitax Club for Growth has clashed with the Republican Party several times. Last year, the group campaigned against Republican Sen. Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island because he had voted against several tax cuts. Mr. Chafee won his primary anyway, but lost to a Democrat in the general election.

This year, the group has been attacking Mr. Huckabee for supporting tax increases as Arkansas governor. "Call Mike Huckabee," one ad instructs viewers. "Ask why he supported all those taxes."

Common Sense Issues Inc., the group backed by American Financial Group's Mr. Lindner in 2006, is funding automated phone calls to Iowa voters touting Mr. Huckabee and spreading negative information about his rivals.

Mr. Huckabee said the mudslinging approach of Common Sense Issues "violates the spirit of our campaign." Patrick Davis, a former Republican Party consultant who is managing the independent campaign, says that he hasn't spoken with Mr. Huckabee, "therefore we don't know what the spirit of his campaign is."

Re: F.E.C. Can't Curb 2016 Election Abuse, Commission Chief Says There is a stalemate among Subject: the agency's six commissioners, who are perpetually locked in 3-to-3 tie s along party lines because of a fundamental disagreement over the commission's mandate.

I have no illusions about the FEC or its power. I do, however, think this article is significantly overstated. It is the product of Ann Ravel's endless desire to be portrayed in the press as a profile in courage. A few observations:

1. Earlier this year the Dept. of Justice brought a criminal case against a campaign manager for violating the coordination rules. And, even more recently, DOJ indicted Sen. Menendez based, in part, on contributions to a superpac that they believe were bribes. There is every reason to think DOJ will increasingly police the campaign finance laws.

2. The statute of limitation is 5 years and the composition of the FEC will change in the next two years due to turn over at the Commission. Remember--in 2004 people said the same thing about the FEC not policing 527s. By 2006 the composition of the FEC had changed and most of the 527s from 2004 paid sizable fines. This is not lost on the GOP lawyers advising the groups. It doesn't mean that they won't push the line, but I have not seen any conduct that suggests the law is simply being ignored.

3. Every time a GOP candidate does something even close to the line, they are hit by a complaint. Multiple complaints have been filed against Jeb Bush over his relationship with superpacs. Most recently Sen. Paul was hit with a complaint over receiving an advance briefing on the hit-job book. These come from a variety of sources — good government groups, CREW, and a new group set up by David Brock.

4. Per John's question below — there is one legal tool we could use that might slow them down. The law has a little noticed or used provision that says that if a complaint has been filed and it is either dismissed or not acted upon within 120 days the entity that filed the complaint can sue the FEC to force it to proceed with enforcement. If the FEC fails to move forward, then the complainant is permitted to bring their own lawsuit to enforce the law directly. IF it were announced that this was the path we intended to take, it would both make news and perhaps give pause to the groups. Is this something we want to push forward? If so, would we want the DNC to do it? The campaign? Or would we prefer it be done externally? It would be hailed by the reform groups, but is a significant step in legal escalation and will certainly result in similar action against Priorities et al.

Let me know if you want to discuss any of these options.

Adding Elias.

I agree with you, John. I think we focus hard on raising as much as we can and then throw the kitchen sink at everyone who we believe steps over the line, understanding that has limited impact.

Todd Akin is back talking about rape in his new book and Republicans have a message for him: Shut up.

The Missouri Republican’s memoir offers no apologies for his comments on “legitimate rape,” his bruising loss to Sen. Claire McCaskill or the effect many Republicans say his remarks had on the 2012 field — when the Senate slipped through their fingers.

Several operatives, consultants and politicians didn’t waste any time responding to attacks in the book, “Firing Back: Taking on the Party Bosses and Media Elite to Protect Our Faith and Freedom,” set to be released July 15. A copy was provided to POLITICO early.

"It's frankly pathetic that just like Sharron Angle and Christine O'Donnell in 2010, he refuses to take any responsibility for sticking his foot in his mouth, alienating voters and costing Republicans a critical Senate seat. Worse, he's now trying to make money off his defeat. The sooner he leaves the stage again the better."

The GOP has vowed to prevent the stumbles on social issues that plagued Republican candidates on the trail last cycle. So its overwhelming reaction to Akin: his five minutes of fame need to be over.

In his book, Akin serves up harsh words for Mitt Romney, Sen. Roy Blunt (R-Mo.) and GOP operative Karl Rove for abandoning him following his now infamous line about rape and pregnancy, that "the female body has ways to try to shut that whole thing down."

Akin puts Romney in his cross hairs over the 2012 presidential candidate's decision to not defend him. He argues that Romney should have pivoted on the issue to attack Democrats and former President Bill Clinton in particular.

But former Romney aides say it sounds like a lot of sour grapes from Akin.

"Todd Akin has no one to blame for his loss but Todd Akin," said Kevin Madden, a former senior adviser to Romney.

"Anyone looking at the question reasonably would conclude it doesn't make any sense for a former candidate to just assign blame to a long list of rattled off names. Mitt Romney, from Massachusetts, won Missouri by 10 points. Todd Akin lost by 16 points. It's fairly simple."

Akin writes that Romney should have defended him by using Clinton's sexual indiscretions and an alleged comment that one woman "put some ice on that" as Clinton was set to give a keynote speech at the Democratic National Convention.

Clinton allies also see Akin bringing up the former president as desperate.

"Todd Akin's discreditable jabs are coming from a former right-wing politician who spent his entire time in public service opposing equal pay laws and choice, and who in his new book reiterates his strong belief that women's bodies have the ability to shut down during what he calls legitimate rape," said Adrienne Elrod, communications director for Correct the Record. "Akin's cheap shots at the Clintons are nothing but a desperate and failed attempt to stay relevant."

Akin's defense of his controversial comments in the book only shows that Rove and his Crossroads outfits made the right decision by pulling out of the race, said Paul Lindsay, spokesman for Crossroads.

"Todd Akin's increasingly intricate theories of legitimate rape only deepen our conviction that we made the right call in 2012," he said. "His failed campaign ultimately helped convince us to get involved in primaries this cycle to help the party avoid squandering more opportunities in winnable seats."

American Crossroads spent about $65,000 opposing McCaskill in 2012.

For Blunt's part, the Missouri Republican appears to not be paying his criticism any heed. Akin wrote that Blunt left a "bloody war club with his fingerprints all over it" to get him to quit the Senate race.

"Sen. Blunt appreciates the service Todd Akin has given to our country and the service his sons continue to give," said Blunt spokeswoman Amber Marchand. "He thinks Congressman Akin is a good man and well-intentioned, but based on what he has heard about the book, Sen. Blunt has decided not to read it."

By attacking Blunt and others, Akin is pointing fingers at everyone but himself, said David Barklage, a Missouri-based Republican consultant.

"This type of name-calling is to hide the fact that party leadership has a responsibility to protect the party label and its interests," Barklage said. "People talk about personal responsibility in the party. He's still not admitting how much of a distraction this was for the election and the Republican Party."

Even though Akin's book comes as the GOP tries to capitalize on its chance of taking back the Senate in November, Barklage said Akin's comments will not hurt the party's image like it did in 2012.

"It shows that the Republican Party has high standards. His story illustrates that the Republican Party is its own best watchdog."

Randy Gutermuth, a GOP strategist who has worked for several Missouri politicians including Blunt and former Sen. Jim Talent, also said Akin's attacks were unwarranted, especially since there's no way for the former congressman to turn around his political career.

"It's disappointing given the efforts the entire state delegation and Sen. Blunt made to help him raise money and organize," Gutermuth said.

"I'm not sure what a pathway to a comeback would be for him."

July 10, 2014

Summer is finally here – the busiest travel season of the year, when tourists from all over the world flock to the United States, and particularly here in New Hampshire, to enjoy all that our great nation has to offer.

Growing up in Durham, I witnessed the power of foreign tourism first hand, spending my summers working on whale-watching boats out of Portsmouth.

The money spent by foreign tourists fuels economic growth and supports hundreds of thousands of American jobs.

In 2013 alone, international visitors spent $180.7 billion on U.S. travel and tourism-related goods and services.

According to the U.S. Department of Commerce, for every 65 international visitors, one American job is created, a job that cannot be exported. Over this past July Fourth weekend, 880,000 tourists came to the Granite State, strengthening tourism here as the No. 2 industry in the state.

In fact, over the course of the summer, the total number of visitors who will come will equate to more than 10 times the state's population.

Just last year, the New Hampshire ski industry added a record $1.15 billion in direct and secondary sales to the state.

At the time both Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and I were sworn into office, the United States government wasn't fully taking advantage of the international tourism industry's economic trade opportunities, and our share of the market had decreased throughout the past decade. After 9/11, our nation had to basically "pull up the welcome mat" to foreign visitors. But after making many changes to our national security system and creating the Department of Homeland Security – where I served as an assistant secretary from 2009 until 2013 – our nation made incredible progress to enhance our national security and keep America safe.

Our economic security, on the other hand, had declined. America was dealing with the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression.

With millions of Americans out of work, forced out of their homes, and struggling to make ends meet, we needed to do everything possible to help them and protect the security of the world's largest economy.

Clinton understood that there was no need to make a false choice between economic and national security and that we can – and must – have both. There is no better example of this than in the support of international tourism to the United States.

I worked alongside Clinton's team to promote international tourism when I served as the DHS representative on the president's Travel and Tourism Advisory Board.

We implemented a variety of policies to increase international tourism to the United States, and the number of international tourists to the United States increased from 55 million in 2009 to 70 million in 2013 – which gave the American economy a boost when it needed it the most – while never compromising America's national security. This was no easy task.

A number of federal agencies were involved in the process, including the departments of Homeland Security and Commerce, along with foreign governments and members of the private sector tourism industry – all of whom had different interests at stake.

Clinton coordinated with each of these moving parts to increase international tourism, grow our ailing economy, create jobs for hardworking Americans and keep our borders safe.

The increase in foreign travelers under Clinton's watch spurred economic growth and created jobs at a time when America needed it most.

This kind of smart, pragmatic leadership is just what Americans want and just what America needs from its leaders.

Hillary Clinton has responded to criticism of her six figure speaking fees by noting much of the money has gone to her family's foundation. This has led some Republicans to wonder whether the foundation funds political operations for Clinton, who is considered the Democratic frontrunner in the 2016 presidential election. However, a source close to Clinton told Business Insider she "personally" pays for her staff.

"The Secretary's personal staff is paid for by her personally," the source said.

The source also noted Clinton draws no salary from the foundation.

On Tuesday, the conservative America Rising PAC published a blog post featuring five "burning questions" about the finances of the Bill, Hillary & Chelsea Clinton Foundation. One of the group's questions was about Clinton's staff, which includes spokespeople and other aides.

"Is the Foundation paying for Clinton's political staff or being used as a holding ground for future Clinton Presidential staff?" the group asked.

Republican National Committee Press Secretary Kirsten Kukowski also questioned the Foundation's finances in an email sent Wednesday in response to a New York Times article published earlier that day. The newspaper article noted Chelsea Clinton gives all of her income from speaking fees to the Bill, Hillary & Chelsea Clinton Foundation. Kukowski's email noted "there aren't any documents to prove" Hillary Clinton gives speaking fees to the foundation.

"Might be time for some transparency from the Clinton Foundation," she wrote.

New York Times: "A Provocateur's Book on Hillary Clinton Overtakes Her Memoir in Sales"

By Amy Chozick and Alexandra Alter

July 10, 2014

Of all the headaches of her current book tour — the declining sales, the constant travel, the interviews that generated unkind headlines about her family's wealth — this one may sting Hillary Rodham Clinton the most: Her memoir, "Hard Choices," has just been toppled from its spot on the best-seller list by a sensational Clinton account by her longtime antagonist Edward Klein.

It is a powerful statement about today's publishing realities that Mr. Klein's book, a 320-page unauthorized and barely sourced account full of implausible passages, including one about a physical altercation between Mrs. Clinton and President Obama, has landed atop the New York Times best-seller list, knocking "Hard Choices" to No. 2.

Despite criticism from some right-leaning commentators, Mr. Klein is capitalizing on the confluence of two potent market forces: the conservative book-buying public, which has continued to generate sales despite the industry's overall slump, and the seemingly insatiable appetite for intimate details about the Clintons' family lives, even when the details themselves are factually suspect. (In one section in Mr. Klein's book, former President Bill Clinton demands that his wife get a face-lift. When she refuses, he gets one instead.)

In the week that ended July 5, Mr. Klein's book, "Blood Feud: The Clintons vs. the Obamas," had sold 20,105 copies, an 18 percent increase from the previous week, compared with 16,646 copies sold of Mrs. Clinton's book, a 36 percent decrease from the previous week. On Thursday, "Blood Feud" held the No. 11 spot on Amazon's best-seller list, while "Hard Choices" came in at 103. "Hard Choices" was released on June 10 and is still leading in overall sales over "Blood Feud," which came out on June 23.

While conservative readers may form the foundation of Mr. Klein's sales, some publishing industry insiders say liberals — and readers who are simply looking for irresistible entertainment — are picking up the book, too.

The suspenseful page-turner paints a Shakespearean (if unbelievable) portrait of power, lust and clashes between and within the two first families. In one passage, Mr. Clinton says: "I hate that man Obama more than any man I've ever met, more than any man who ever lived." In another, Michelle Obama refers to Mrs. Clinton as "Hildebeest." Other stretches of Mr. Klein's writing are devoted to marital tensions. Mr. Klein quotes an anonymous friend of Mr. Obama as saying: "Barack gets so fed up with her behavior that he actually encourages Michelle to take separate planes when they go on vacation, so he doesn't have to fly with her."

Of "Blood Feud," Rush Limbaugh, the popular conservative radio talk-show host, said he wasn't "alleging it doesn't exist, it isn't true," but he added that “some of the quotes strike me as odd, in the sense that I don’t know people who speak this way.”

In a telephone interview on Thursday, Mr. Klein said he stood by his reporting and likened his reporting techniques to those of the Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward.

Continue reading the main story Continue reading the main story

Continue reading the main story

“I don’t make this stuff up,” Mr. Klein said on a break from a media blitz to promote the book. “The quotes come from sources who were present when the statements were made or who were told about the statements shortly after they were made.”

Nick Merrill, a spokesman for Mrs. Clinton, disagreed.

Conservative books have been a booming category in publishing, tracing back to the rise of conservative talk radio and cable channels in the 1980s. Mainstream publishers have embraced the trend and introduced imprints aimed at conservative audiences. Simon & Schuster’s Threshold Editions, which was created in 2005, publishes books by Glenn Beck and Mr. Limbaugh. Penguin Random House has two imprints dedicated to conservative books. And in 2011, HarperCollins started Broadside Books, which has published works by Donald Rumsfeld and Sarah Palin.

“Blood Feud” was originally acquired by HarperCollins’s William Morrow imprint, but this past spring, Mr. Klein broke with HarperCollins and moved to Regnery Publishing, a conservative imprint that published Mr. Klein’s 2012 anti-Obama book, “The Amateur.” Rupert Murdoch, whose News Corporation controls HarperCollins, is quoted on the back of “Blood Feud” as saying “every voter should read” “The Amateur.”

Some publishing industry executives say that the legal department at HarperCollins was uncomfortable with the material and wary of inviting a lawsuit, but Mr. Klein said he broke with the publisher over “editorial differences” that arose from his book on Mr. Obama. “I felt they didn’t understand how to market the book properly, so I decided to move to Regnery,” he said.

Regnery has a history of publishing books critical of the Clintons, and it timed the publishing of Mr. Klein’s latest book to coincide with the release of Mrs. Clinton’s memoir.

“We thought, what better way to take advantage of the fact that Hillary and the Clintons would be in the national conversation than to come in right afterwards and say, ‘That’s one point of view, here’s another side of the story,’ ” said Marji Ross, Regnery’s president and publisher.

To date, Regnery has printed 225,000 copies of “Blood Feud” and has shipped more than 200,000. Sales are strong in a range of retail outlets, including Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Walmart and Costco.

While the work of Mr. Klein, a former editor at Newsweek and The New York Times Magazine, continues to rise, some Clinton allies have become sensitive about falling sales for “Hard Choices.”

By normal nonfiction standards, “Hard Choices” has sold extremely well. But Mrs. Clinton’s multimillion-dollar advance and status as a probable 2016 Democratic presidential candidate have put added pressure on the publisher, Simon & Schuster.

Current sales figures of 177,234 copies not including e-books, according to Nielsen BookScan, mean Simon & Schuster is unlikely to recoup Mrs. Clinton’s advance and could fall far short of the one million copies shipped to bookstores, industry executives said. Cary Goldstein, a Simon & Schuster spokesman, said the publisher was delighted by the sales of “Hard Choices” and expected it to sell for years to come.

Mrs. Clinton’s supporters, concerned that soft sales would be interpreted as a lack of enthusiasm for her potential presidential candidacy, have tried to position “Hard Choices” as a hit.

At a meeting with supporters of Ready for Hillary, a "super PAC" that supports Mrs. Clinton, Harold M. Ickes, a former deputy chief of staff to Mr. Clinton, told potential donors that, despite reports to the contrary, "Hard Choices" was a success, said one person who attended the event. A spokesman for Ready for Hillary declined to comment.

By Nick Gass

July 10, 2014, 8:55 p.m. EDT

Hillary Clinton still leads the Democratic field in the race for 2016, but her advantage might be slipping in New Hampshire, according to a new poll.

Fifty-nine percent of 257 likely Democratic voters in the state say they would vote for the former secretary of state in the presidential primary, per the latest WMUR Granite State poll released Thursday. While Clinton still holds a 45-point advantage on Vice President Joe Biden, the results mark a drop of six percentage points in the Granite State since April and an overall drop of 15 points in the last six months.

Other potential candidates grabbing votes include Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren (8 percent), Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders (5 percent), New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo (3 percent) and Virginia Sen. Mark Warner (1 percent).

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie leads a crowded GOP field among 251 likely primary voters with just 19 percent. But voters indicated that if Mitt Romney were to jump in the race, he would lead the field by a significant margin. Romney grabbed 39 percent of the hypothetical vote, leading the runners-up Christie and Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul, by 32 percentage points.

The University of New Hampshire Survey Center conducted the poll between June 19 and July 1, surveying 669 New Hampshire residents, including likely GOP and Democratic voters. The margin of error among Democratic voters is 6.1 percent and 6.2 percent among Republicans. The overall sampling error is 3.8 percent.

Associated Press: "Officers Say No 'Stand-Down Order' For Benghazi"

By Bradley Klapper and Donna Cassata

July 11, 2014, 6:11 a.m. EDT

Military officers testified that there was no "stand-down order" that held back military assets that could have saved the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans killed at a diplomatic outpost and CIA annex in Benghazi, Libya. Their testimony undercut the contention of Republican lawmakers.

The "stand-down" theory centers on a Special Operations team - a detachment leader, a medic, a communications expert and a weapons operator with his foot in a cast - that was stopped from flying from Tripoli to Benghazi after the attacks of Sept. 11-12, 2012, had ended. Instead, it was instructed to help protect and care for those being evacuated from Benghazi and from the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli.

The senior military officer who issued the instruction to "remain in place" and the detachment leader who received it said it was the right decision and has been widely mischaracterized. The order was to remain in Tripoli and protect some three dozen embassy personnel rather than fly to Benghazi some 600 miles away after all Americans there would have been evacuated. And the medic is credited with saving the life of an evacuee from the attacks.

Transcripts of hours of closed-door interviews with nine military leaders by the House Armed Services and Oversight and Government Reform committees were made public for the first time on Wednesday.

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., chairman of the oversight panel, has suggested that Hillary Rodham Clinton gave the order, though as secretary of state at the time, she was not in the military chain of command.

Despite lingering public confusion over many events that night, the testimony shows military leaders largely in agreement over how they responded to the attacks.

The initial, Sept. 11 assault on the diplomatic post, which killed Ambassador Chris Stevens and another American, prompted immediate action both in Benghazi and in Tripoli. Though not under any known further threat, the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli, the Libyan capital, was evacuated early in the morning of Sept. 12, its sensitive information and computer hard drives destroyed. Diplomats and military officials left in armored vehicles for a classified U.S. site several miles away. Upon arrival there, the head of a small detachment entrusted with training Libyan special forces told his higher-ups he wanted to take his four-member team to Benghazi.

Military officials differ on when that telephone conversation took place, but they agree that no help could have arrived in Benghazi in time. They put the call somewhere between 5:05 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. local time. It would take about 90 minutes to fly from Tripoli to Benghazi. The next U.S.-chartered plane to make the trip left at 6:49 a.m., meaning it could have arrived shortly before 9 a.m., nearly four hours after the second, 11-minute battle at the CIA facility ended at about 5:25 a.m.

Republicans investigating Benghazi have clashed over whether military superiors, in effect, ordered the team to stand down. Rep. Howard "Buck" McKeon, R-Calif., the Armed Services Committee chairman, has cited previous testimony from military officers that ordering the foursome to stay in Tripoli and protect embassy personnel there didn't amount to "standing down."

Others, such as Issa and Rep. Jason Chaffetz of Utah, have said a stand-down order was given.

"We had proximity, we had capability, we had four individuals in Libya armed, ready to go, dressed, about to get into the car to go in the airport to go help their fellow countrymen who were dying and being killed and under attack in Benghazi, and they were told to stand down," Chaffetz said more than a year ago. "That's as sickening and depressing and disgusting as anything I have seen. That is not the American way."

Beyond questions of timing, the testimony of Rear Adm. Brian Losey, who was then Special Operations commander for Africa, also challenged the idea the team had the capacity to bolster security in Benghazi.

Losey said there was "never an order to stand down." His instruction to the team "was to remain in place and continue to provide security in Tripoli because of the uncertain environment." Earlier on Sept. 11, the U.S. Embassy in Cairo had been breached as well.

Losey questioned what the four could have done to aid the situation in Benghazi, where American personnel were preparing to evacuate as soon as possible. He said assigning the small team to defend a perimeter wouldn't have been appropriate and would have meant the military's losing its command operation in Tripoli "for the benefit of four riflemen who weren't even riflemen."

"The guy's command and control, he's communications, medical," Losey recounted. "I've got one weapons guy with his foot in a cast. Didn't make a lot of sense."

The Special Operations detachment leader's name is omitted from the testimony transcript, but he previously has been identified as Lt. Col. S.E. Gibson. More than a year-and-a-half later, Gibson, who is now a colonel, agreed that staying in Tripoli was the best decision.

"It was not a stand-down order," he testified in March. "It was not, 'Hey, time for everybody to go to bed.' It was, you know, 'Don't go. Don't get on that plane. Remain in place."

"Initially, I was angry," Gibson said. "A tactical commander doesn't like to have those decisions taken away from him. But then once I digested it a little bit, then I realized, OK, maybe there was something else that was going on. Maybe I'm needed here for something else."

His contingent would indeed prove useful in Tripoli, according to the testimonies.

When the Americans from Benghazi arrived, among the wounded was one person with a unique blood type. Gibson and others credited the medic in the team with saving a life.

Representative Trey Gowdy was cutting the grass in the front yard of his Spartanburg, S.C., house when Speaker John A. Boehner called with a special assignment.

Mr. Gowdy, a South Carolina Republican and a former prosecutor whose peculiar hairstyle has generated almost as much news media coverage as his voting record, has made a name for himself over his barely two terms in office with his tenacious questioning of Obama administration officials in committee rooms. Yet his relationships with Democrats on Capitol Hill are far more nuanced than many of his conservative brethren.

Which made him the speaker's ideal choice for leading a new politically charged congressional committee investigating the 2012 attack on the diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya. Despite skepticism in many quarters, Mr. Gowdy promises a process — which began Wednesday when his full committee met for the first time — that will be both plodding and fair.

"This will not be what people on the left fear it is going to be," Mr. Gowdy said over lunch at the Capitol Hill Club, a dining room for Republicans where he has the same dinner — varying species of fish as well as fresh fruit — every night that Congress is in session, most often with his fellow South Carolina Republican, Senator Tim Scott.

Nearly two years after the attack in Libya that killed the United States ambassador there, J. Christopher Stevens, and three other Americans, Democrats are increasingly angry that Republicans are not relenting in their criticism of the administration over Benghazi, which has already been examined by six congressional committees. To them, the issue has devolved from national tragedy to partisan farce.

"The day the committee was announced, Republicans began fund-raising off it," said Representative Steve Israel of New York, who also leads the committee to elect House Democrats.

Yet many lawmakers on both the Oversight and Government Reform Committee and the House Judiciary Committee who serve with Mr. Gowdy — as well as some Obama administration officials who have entered his jurisdictional cross hairs — say he may be the most favorable Republican for the job. (For one, they say that he has not been fund-raising off his work on the committee and that he is critical of the practice.)

"Trey has a real existential moment of what imprint he wants to make," said Representative Gerald E. Connolly, Democrat of Virginia, who serves with Mr. Gowdy on the oversight committee. He can be, Mr. Connolly said, "another partisan flare who came and went, or acquit himself as an honorable person, which I think he is."

"If he does that, he will be a very serious player in the United States Congress," Mr. Connolly said.

Richard W. Vieth, a criminal defense lawyer who worked with Mr. Gowdy as a prosecutor and later against him in courtrooms, echoed that assessment. "He was someone I knew I could trust," he said. "But I knew in the courtroom he'd be very combative."

Mr. Gowdy's habits of tearing up during floor speeches, ripping into witnesses and general acts of excoriation find their roots in his 16 years of prosecutorial work in South Carolina, where his record of convictions in more than 100 cases was nearly unblemished.

His style was foreshadowed in his emotional closing arguments, as in a 2008 case of the murder of a married couple. "Sometimes death walks slowly and knocks gently," he said, describing the crime to the jury. "Sometimes it kicks in the front door."

He has set no deadline for the committee, composed of seven Republicans and five Democrats, to complete its work. His annual budget for the committee is $3.3 million.

Mr. Gowdy's passion for debate surfaced early in life, when he would argue politics with his parents and three sisters at the dinner table, said his mother, Novalene Gowdy. "If he were still in the law and I committed a crime, he'd prosecute me," she said. "He is very law oriented."

At Baylor University in Texas, Mr. Gowdy, 49, was a cheerful student who devoured episodes of "Miami Vice," said Robert Thornton, his fraternity brother in Kappa Omega Tau.

A quick wit, love of metaphors and penchant for quoting philosophers were Mr. Gowdy's hallmarks. "I might be showing him a house," said Mr. Thornton, a home builder in Texas, "and he will drop a reference to Kierkegaard."

Mr. Gowdy graduated from college in 1986 with a degree in history, went on to the University of South Carolina School of Law and clerked for two judges. After a family friend was murdered in Charlotte in 1994, he said he "felt a strong pull to be a prosecutor."

He worked as an assistant United States attorney until 2000, then took on a sitting solicitor and won, continuing to prosecute for the next decade. In 2010, he routed Representative Bob Inglis in the Republican primary, then easily won the seat that fall in his heavily Republican district.

For some Republicans, Mr. Gowdy's predilection for picking off members of his own party has made him akin to Inspector Javert in "Les Misérables" — devoted to the law but not always to mercy. "I'm sure he has some rationale for the things he has done," Mr. Inglis said in a phone interview.

Mr. Gowdy responded: "The graveyard is full of people waiting on open seats. I have this belief that if you are qualified and you believe that you would do a good job doing something, there is no reason you shouldn't run." He once vowed to retire after two terms. This summer, he officially unretired to run for a third term.

Some Democrats on the committee have longstanding relationships with Mr. Gowdy, among them Representative Elijah E. Cummings of Maryland, the committee's ranking Democrat. Mr. Cummings went to Mr. Gowdy to seek his reassurances that there would be "no surprises" before agreeing to serve with him.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for Gowdy," Mr. Cummings said. "He has always treated me with the highest level of respect."

On Wednesday, Mr. Gowdy's committee received a classified briefing from various agencies about Ahmed Abu Khattala, the Libyan militia leader charged in connection with the killing of the four Americans in Benghazi. The committee will continue to meet this month, with public hearings weeks if not months away.

Some believe that Mr. Gowdy might take the investigation into at least one area that binds both parties.

“There is the question of what you do to bring the perp to justice,” said Matthew Miller, a former spokesman for Eric H. Holder Jr., the attorney general who once roasted under the Gowdy boiler during hearings on the botched gun-trafficking case called Operation Fast and Furious. “You would think Gowdy might respect, as a prosecutor, the need to let the government do its job.”

By Kate Bratskeir

Former president Bill Clinton has a very particular set of skills -- skills he has acquired over a very long career.

He created tens of millions of jobs. He perfected the art of charisma. He even adopted a plant-based diet. And soon, Clinton will take on the monumental, onerous task of being a grandfather.

This is a lifetime commitment that requires a certain amount of dedication and grit, and the will to get one's hands dirty (in dirty diapers and spit-up, to start). But worry not, Clinton already knows how to handle a baby. From these signs below, it appears Clinton is practiced enough to take on the role as a full-time job.

The AGB articles do provide some helpful context and guidance, however, I found the book "Whistling Vivaldi: How Stereotypes Affect Us and What We Can Do" (from Amazon at <http://www.amazon.com/Whistling-Vivaldi-Stereotypes-Affect-Issues/dp/0393339726>) which was mentioned in one of Teresa's later emails, to be eye opening; it gave me a whole new perspective on learning challenges. It was my first introduction to the concepts of "stereotype threat" and "identity threat", terms relatively well known in social psychology; Dr. Steele made a compelling (empirically-based) case of how they impact academic performance and raised some questions concerning the effectiveness of traditional approaches to helping various affected groups.

I know that there is a group on campus reading this book as part of their preparation for campus wide conversation in January, this book will help me be better able to engage in any discussions between the Board and the rest of the Knox community.

Dear Trustees,

At last week's call, I mentioned an AGB resource that I think may be helpful to the Board by providing some context. If you haven't already looked at it, you can find it here . There are other articles in that issue of note as well. Thanks again for your time and thoughtful comments on Thursday's call.

Hi guys

I just spoke with IAM, they have confidentiality shared with us that Buffenbarger will be moving his board to take a endorsement vote on August 14th in NYC. Only three officers at IAM are aware of this, so its being tightly held so that they don't have any issues on the board with timing.

They will be requesting that the Secretary attend a retirement dinner for Sec/Treasurer Robert Roach at the Hilton NYC the evening of August 14th. The vote will have happened earlier that day and all of Buffenbarger's board will be in attendance at the dinner. I wanted to flag this for scheduling.

The IAM endorsement is usually made at their Convention. But their next Convention is not until 2016. Buffenbarger didn't want to wait. Great news.

Kasich's Charter Accountability Office Failed to Police Imagine Charters Accountability Chief David Hansen Served as Board Member for Imagine School

Oct. 12, 2014

COLUMBUS – After taking millions in campaign contributions from charter schools and their allies, Gov. John Kasich failed to take steps to crack down on abusive lease arrangements between Imagine schools and its subsidiary. The leases leave little money for classroom instruction.

According to a Sunday report in the Columbus Dispatch, five Imagine schools in Franklin County received a combined $20.2 million in the 2012-13 school year. A quarter of that money — more than $5.1 million — was spent on rent, all under long-term leases with Imagine subsidiary SchoolHouse Finance. A sixth school, Imagine Integrity Academy, spent 81 percent of its $440,009 in state aid on rent.

ProgressOhio Executive Director Brian Rothenberg will release information on leases in place at Imagine schools in Akron, Canton, Cleveland, Dayton and Toledo, and will call for changes at the Office of Quality School Choice and Funding, now headed by David Hansen.

Subject: RFK Dinner

The RFK center is hosting a big dinner next Tuesday evening in NYC honoring Tim Cook. As Apple's lead bank, we bought one of the head tables. Any interest in joining? Not sure it's any better or worse than most of these events but at least it's for a good cause.

Love the email dumps but they seem to be getting more insidery every time. How much can they write about Lanny's naked brown-nosing?

Subject: Truman - Thank you

John,

My family told me they saw you at Holy Trinity Sunday. I'm sorry I couldn't thank you in person, but as you probably know I was attending the Truman National Security Project orientation. Thank you again for taking the time to write a letter on my behalf and for your phone call to Mike Breen. This weekend I experienced first hand what a capable and strong leader he is. While his team is relatively young, they are very professional and they put together a fantastic program. I learned a lot from the training, but most of all I was struck by how accomplished yet humble the members were. I was surrounded by published authors, PhDs, senior military officers, hardened combat veterans, and other incredibly impressive individuals. They are really on to something special, and I'm grateful to be part of such a motivated group. They told us to look out for future members, and I thought of Gabe and sent him an email this morning.

Thank you again for your support and for all the hard work you devote to our country.

Sincerely,
John

Japan Restored: How Japan Can Reinvent Itself and Why This Is Important for America

By Clyde Prestowitz

Labor economist Prestowitz (Rogue Nation) projects visions of Japan's future in this well-handled study of sensitive politico-economic issues disguised as a love letter to the country. Japan's economic decline after the 2011 tsunami spurred this peek into a crystal ball. Prestowitz opens with a snapshot of the nation in 2050 as a world leader in technology, medicine, athletics, and education. These strides follow a series of potential crises in 2016 that prompt the government to appoint an Extraordinary National Revitalization Commission. The commission introduces changes that strengthen Japan's regional power and promote women into management positions, as well as transforming it into an English-speaking nation like Singapore. Finally, the 20th-century zaibatsu model that guaranteed citizens jobs for life is replaced by the profit-driven model that turned Nissan around in 2001. While there's nothing in this big-themed fabulist tale that seems out of reach, it remains to be seen whether Prestowitz's well-intentioned advice will make an impact among Japan's decision makers. Subject: Closing the books

Dear John D.,

I'll keep this short. We have just a few days left before the books close at the end of 2015. I know you're getting a lot of emails, but there are four Senate candidates that really need your help if we are going to take back the Senate in 2016.

Maggie Hassan in New Hampshire

Russ Feingold in Wisconsin

Michael Bennet in Colorado

Tammy Duckworth in Illinois

These are all must-win races for us—and every one of them is facing an onslaught of spending from Super PACs determined to force a right-wing agenda through the Senate.

The last few months have shown us just what kind of agenda the GOP is proposing for America. I need your help to make sure we can stop that agenda in the Senate.

Marlon, Adrienne and I just had a really good call with Jaime. We read him into our existing play and he was beyond pleased and excited about what we are working on for South Carolina. Below are additional points from the conversation:

- Jaime mentioned that he is hearing grumbles that HRC hasn't been to the Pee Dee Region. We let him know that it is a top priority for us that HRC or WJC go to the Pee Dee Region. He was happy to hear it was on our radar.

HBCU Tour//Young People//Af Am Women

- Jaime mentioned that we needed to bring some younger people into SC as surrogates - not older/only people that are known throughout the political world. We agreed and briefed him on the long list of people we currently have asks into to travel to South Carolina (below is a small selection).
 - Usher
 - Nelly
 - Anthony Anderson
 - Alonzo Mourning
 - Tatyana Ali
 - Jamie Foxx
 - Grant Hill
 - Gabrielle Union
 - Hill Harper
 - Lance Gross
 - Big Tigger
 - Sean Patrick Thomas
 - Nick Cannon

Willing to join HFA internal calls

- Marlon invited Jaime to any of our internal SC conversations. We let him know that we would love his feedback and advice on what we should be doing.

We have a South Carolina specific tracker that we go over daily. This is the same system we used for Iowa - I feel confident we will be able to increase the amount of surrogates we have in South Carolina - more importantly the RIGHT kind.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Notification: Planter Box Replacement Project

During spring break the Law Center will begin replacing the existing dilapidated exterior wooden planter boxes with new PVC boxes on the patio decks of McDonough Hall and EBW Library. You may notice certain deck areas cordoned off when the work is being performed, and intermittent pathways will be temporarily blocked for removal of debris and installation of the new planter boxes. The impact to the Law Center community should be minimal, though there is chance equipment engine noise may be heard during the installation. Please see the attached project schedule and site plan showing the work zones. Should you have questions or concerns please let us know.

Dear John and Mike:

In honor of your incredible public service, and in particular your leadership efforts on fighting climate change and protecting our environment, leaders in the Climate Action Campaign and the broader environmental community would love to honor the two of you with a going away party at a time that works best for both of you. Ideally this would be an evening reception at some point in the next couple of weeks or so. My assistant Rachel Kriegsman and George Rakis from CAC, cc'ed above, will work out all the details, once you agree to be honored and you put us in touch with your schedulers.

This is, of course, an offer that you MUST accept. We look forward to hearing from you soon.

Subject: What is the future of your favorite federal program?

Regardless of ideology, most Americans have at least one or two federal programs they really, really care about.

It might be the National Forests essential to many of their leisure time activities or the regional cancer center that is helping them beat a life threatening disease.

It might be the efforts of the Labor department to make mine operators more diligent in complying with best practices in protecting miners or it might be the support that the preservation and interpretation of our national historical treasures such as civil war battlefields or the homes and artifacts that belonged to our founding fathers. .

It might be the Hubble space telescope or the variety of efforts by the federal government to help localities do a better job of extending quality early childhood education to more children.

It might be our efforts to better understand and treat autism or support given to help local symphony orchestras or art museums.

Whatever the government does that is important in your life, how will that activity be affected by the budget debate taking place in Washington? You may be surprised to learn that the impact could be much more dramatic than you think. You could get a clearer picture of the challenges facing such programs from this article that was just posted by the Center for American Progress:

Subject: Tech Weekly Report (Dec 21 to Jan 4th)

Welcome to the first tech report of 2016. This covers the last two weeks. Next week's report will include a tracking spreadsheet for Q1 projects.

As always, send feedback to me (hannon@) and Ahna (arao@).

Weeks starting December 21st & December 28th

Archive of previous Weekly Reports

Wins:

- Operationalize our mailer: Balloon , a mass mailer built and supported by HFA, is now self-service. This allows the email team to build emails themselves instead of relying on engineering to do so. This will serve as a backup for them to send email in the event Silverpop goes down, or in cases where faster sends leads to more money raised.
- Homepage Experiment: We increased donations for visits to the homepage 7% by bringing the donation module higher up on the page, just under the picture of Hillary Clinton at a rally. This change has now been made for all visitors to the homepage.
- Custom Lightboxes: We have doubled signup conversions on the Feed with custom lightboxes. Headlines on each lightbox are now customized to match the content of the Feed post (ex. gun violence prevention post is paired with a custom lightbox that says "Enough is enough: Let's end gun violence."

Updates:

- Q1 planning: Planning for Q1 started 5 weeks ago with stakeholder brainstorms. We will complete Engineering effort estimation and release/dependency planning this week, present proposed plans to stakeholders (Thurs Jan 7 @ 3:30pm) and review the proposed plan with Robby (Friday, Jan 8). If you are not on the Thursday invite but would like to be, please email Steph (hannon@).
- Donate: We have made good progress on improving the sign-in/sign-up flow related to Quick Donate and will be A/B testing the new flow by Saturday. We also completed the Silverpop tracking events which allows

Team Email to send special emails to abandoned donors reminding them to come back and finish their donation. The majority of email traffic and all of ads traffic is now directed to New Donate, and our goal is to be completely off of Wagtail by February.

- Airwolf/Automated email: The organizing engineering team is working on the next round of changes to our VAN chrome extension that will allow field organizers to turn on automated emails like event RSVP reminders. We have some prototype emails (#1: attempt to reconnect with a volunteer after 10 failed attempts, and #2 a principal event thank you email) that we should be wrapping up work on very soon.
- Gerard visits Vegas! Last Tuesday and Wednesday, Gerard attended the Nevada GOTC training to get field organizers across the Silver State trained up on how to use Reporter, our caucus night app. We're hoping to get the Nevada version of the app done this week so we can roll the app out to Nevada organizers.
- DNC Update: We have been setting up monitoring tools on the HFA cluster. We'll be implementing some system improvements to the network and disk usage in this cluster over the next 2 weeks, which we're hoping will create significant performance improvements. We'll also be increasing the number of nodes in use, which should improve system stability.
- Facebook share: We released the sticky share Facebook footer on mobile. It is a Facebook share button that follows as the user scrolls down the Feed post.

Outages:

- Fastly outage: From 4:55 p.m. to 5:43 p.m. ET on Dec 31, users experienced intermittent issues connecting to our website and completing donations, signups, or other actions. Our error logs indicate that fewer than 100 individuals received error pages on our website, and fewer than 30 donations were affected. Remediation items on our side include exploring a lightweight donation page that doesn't rely on Fastly's infrastructure to redirect traffic to in the case of a widespread, prolonged outage. Full post-mortem can be found here .

Hiring update:

- Welcome Beth: We are excited to welcome Beth, a frontend engineer, to the donate agile team! She comes to us from Twitter in Boston.
- Welcome Derek: We are also thrilled to welcome Derek Parham, new Director of Engineering. Derek pioneered Google Apps for Work and led engineering from 1 to 100 engineers. He spent the last four years building startups and advising / investing.
- Evolving agile teams (see diagram here) : Going forward, Derek and Kyle will share responsibility for co-leading the engineering team and they will each sponsor / support specific agile teams. Kyle will continue with Donations, CMS, both Organizing teams and Uniform. Derek will take on Data Infra, Ops, Ema, Mobile, and Platform Services.

On the message document reaction, it looks like all the elements you have said are essential are present.

My overarching reaction (besides the obvious diversity challenge) is that on paper, it appears more segmented than I would have thought. I had taken from your discussions regarding the ideal process that this group needed to work in a very integrated way.

If that remains true, it puts a premium on folks being co-located during this process to foster the coordination, synergy and best input/outcomes you wanted.

Are you going to be seeking that for the period of the development of the message?

We had a good meeting today to ratify the research plan and discuss staffing structure and talent. Few things to report out:

1. We seem to have a settled on a team for the research project--we just need to lock in the media people. Attached is the latest draft of the one pager. I'm hoping to get the team discussing and editing the project design over the holiday so we can present a proposal to HRC at the beginning of Jan. Fingers crossed.

2. Good discussion about digital and tech. I think we have some good digital options...she approved setting up an interview process for CTO candidates, since we want someone outside politics for this role and we need outside advice on candidates.

3. Self research: Cheryl, she wanted to keep Heather and the team going from DC. I flagged that we will likely need to expand the team to 5-10 people, which she seemed fine with. I also flagged that self research is so integral to rapid response, vetting, content, etc that we'd probably want a contingent in HQ to prevent bottlenecks. We agreed I'd loop back with you to discuss options--I think a hybrid model may work. Let's discuss.

4. We had a good discussion about communications. John there are some WH people I'd like to discuss. I'll follow up. Any names welcome!

NSN STATEMENT: Ryan Pick Shows Doubling Down on Politics Over Security

"A Disappointment with Dangerous Implications"

In response to today's announcement of Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) as Governor Romney's vice presidential pick, NSN Executive Director Heather Hurlburt issued the following statement:

"Mitt Romney's choice today to name Paul Ryan as commander-in-chief-in-waiting is at best cynical, at worst reckless -- with consequences in lives and livelihoods. In his time in Washington, Ryan has proven himself to be less a courageous budget maverick and more a creature of politics - pitting himself against America's military, diplomats and veterans.

Ryan's flip-flopping on Pentagon spending -moving from agreement with the core of President Obama's plan in his 2011 budget to a 2012 budget that imposes monies and programs on the military that they do not want - while being consistent about gutting veterans' programs and diplomacy, shows that he lacks strategic vision for U.S. security. His choice this year to accuse the Pentagon's uniformed leadership of lying to Congress about their needs suggest he is unready to be commander in chief, should that be required.

Like Governor Romney, Ryan seems to compensate for a lack of fully-formed national security views with rhetoric and, ironically for a budget hawk, dollar signs.

America faces the challenges of cementing our place in the 21st century, and recognizing -- as Chairman Dempsey has -- that America's defense is only as strong as the economy and diplomacy behind it.

Willingness to choose politics over strategy and servicemembers will not get us where we need to go as a nation. The Ryan pick is a disappointment with dangerous implications."

Dear John,

I sent you an email several weeks ago but you might have missed it, so I thought it would make sense to just email you once more, and cc Jen. Long story short, I have been discussing the idea of writing a third book with my agent and my editor at Knopf/Pantheon. In the course of those discussions, I have tentatively settled on the idea of a book that would look at the role you have played in the Democratic Party over the course of the last few decades. This would allow me to examine pivotal moments in two presidencies and one presidential campaign, as well as key ideas (including what does it mean to be a progressive and key environmental decisions).

As I'm writing up my proposal, it would be helpful to know whether you'd be willing to cooperate with such a book. I would imagine you would have reservations about a book that would be akin to a biography, but that's not really what this would be. I'm aiming to write a book that helps explain how Washington works, by examining how someone behind the scenes has helped moved the levers of government and operated the machinery of campaigns. And of course, if the book doesn't garner a good advance I won't write it, because I've got plenty of other things on my plate. But I think it could be an interesting project, and it would be great to know to what extent you'd be open to talking to me about this.

I know both of you are very busy, but just drop me a line when you get a chance. I will be traveling in Canada from Friday to Tuesday, but will be reachable all of the usual ways.

Can you get ahold of them? I heard from Larissa on the first email saying she'd get back to me on preferred legs, but I haven't heard a peep since in any of my follow up emails.

Deadline for new runners (without a $15 penalty) is in 20 days, so I just want to make sure we get them in before that, or get replacements if they decide they don't want to do it (though I hope they do! They're such pleasant people and I had fun getting to know them last year).

Start times also open in 6 days, and change requests close on the 27th.

Thanks!

REMARKS AT WHITNEY BROTHERS

KEENE, NEW HAMPSHIRE

MONDAY, APRIL 20, 2015

I'm delighted to be here at Whitney Brothers, a great family-owned and operated small business in the classic New Hampshire tradition. I just had a chance to see some of the high-quality, high-skilled work here, marrying new technology with 100 years of dedication and craftsmanship.

And of course I love that you're designing furniture specifically for the needs of our youngest children and their parents. When I had Chelsea, a crib was just a crib. But today, as I've learned since my granddaughter was born, so much more care and expertise goes into everything for our babies. So thank you for being pioneers in an area that's so important to every new family.

I wanted to come here on my first day in New Hampshire because small businesses like Whitney Brothers are the backbone of this state's economy and a key to jumpstarting growth and innovation across our country. [Small businesses employ more than half of all of New

Hampshire's private sector workers – and they create two out of every three new jobs in the state.]

When I was growing up, my father ran a small business in Chicago – and I mean very small. He printed fabric for draperies and then he went out and sold them. Sometimes he could hire a few day laborers to help, sometimes my mom and my brothers and I pitched in. But mostly he was doing everything himself. He was a real waste-not want-not, pay-as-you-go, no complaining kind of guy. So I learned early on just how tough it is to make a business like this work.

I'm sure you all have your own stories and experiences about this. When I was in Iowa last week, a young man told me about what it was like trying to buy the bowling alley where he had worked as a teenager.

He had experience, talent, a college degree, and a plan to build a great business. But he also had a lot of student debt. Not because he was irresponsible and living beyond his means. Because he did was he was supposed to do. He got an education. He invested in his own future. But all the banks saw was debt. So it was a real struggle.

And that's the opposite of what we want to see in this country – which is more young people being able to start businesses, create jobs, and live their dreams.

Here in New Hampshire and across our country, Americans have come back from tough economic times. Our economy and our country are in much better shape because families did whatever it took to make it work.

Unemployment is down, and in most places homes are worth something real again. Americans are starting to think about the future again. Going back to school. Changing jobs. Starting a business. Doing the right things to get ahead.

But as that young man in Iowa experienced, all the breaks still seem to go to those already at the top. There's something wrong when it's so easy for big corporations to get a tax break but so hard for small businesses to get a loan.

America ranks 46th in the world in how hard it is to start a new business. We should be number one. It takes longer to start a business in the United State than in France.

Now, New Hampshire is one of the best places in the country to start a business. You've got fewer onerous regulations that defy commonsense, like excessive occupational licensing that keeps young people from entering new fields. And your terrific governor, Maggie Hassan, created a program to help people who lost their jobs in the recession get back on their feet and start new businesses. That's an idea we should be looking at expanding across the country.

So I want to hear directly from all of you about your own experiences and your own dreams -- about the obstacles and the successes that you've encountered and what we can do to help more small businesses thrive.

I'm running for President because you and Americans everywhere need a champion. And I want to be that champion. So you can do more than just get by -- you can get ahead and stay ahead. And starting a small business seems less like a gamble and more like an opportunity.

I'm taking on four big fights:

First, we need to build an economy for tomorrow, instead of yesterday, where being middle class means something again. And that starts right here with small businesses like Whitney Brothers, creating good jobs and helping people get ahead.

Second, we need to strengthen our families and communities, because when families are strong, America is strong.

Third, it's time to fix our broken political system. I want to get things done, so I'll work with anyone who has a good idea. But I'll also take on the powerful forces trying to take us backwards. We need to get rid of all the unaccountable money, even if it takes a constitutional amendment.

Fourth, I'll protect our country from the threats that we see, and the ones that are on the horizon.

All four of these fights will put us up against some pretty powerful opposition. But I've spent my whole life fighting for children, for families, standing up for America. And I think people know... I don't quit.

For me, this really is about doing everything I can to make sure that every child -- not just my grandchild, but every child -- has a chance to live up to his or her God-given potential. That's what I was raised to believe by my church and my family, and that's what I'll be fighting for in this campaign.

I'm going to work my heart out to earn every vote -- starting with yours.

Thank you for helping me start this campaign here in New Hampshire. Now, I'm eager to hear from you how these challenges are impacting your lives and your businesses, to share some of my ideas, to ask you some questions, and to answer some of yours.

Barack,

Good meeting yesterday. When we got off on the idea of creating an emergency national economic council, we left unresolved two questions that were contained in my 2 page cover memo. First, should Daley or Tarullo run the interim economic staff team in the early days of the transition (with the expectation that once appointed the National Economic Advisor would take over)? These are presented as options 2 and 3 on page 2 of the memo. I lean towards option 3, with Tarullo in charge, but either would work. That needs resolution today or tomorrow so we can execute on Wednesday. Second, we need to decide on who should be on the interim outside council. There is a list of suggestions on the bottom of page 2. You added Warren Buffett to the potential list. How do you want to proceed? Pick from the list? have further discussion? Let me know.

John

Naturally, Boehner, Cantor and House Republicans are standing firmly in the way of President Obama's plan to end reckless giveaways to millionaires and billionaires.

Will you help prove that President Obama's plan has the support of the American people?

If they do a mandatory 90 day window for new employees (as most companies do), assuming an approx. April 15th-ish announcement, that puts me at July 15th, a month before my due date. So we have some room to play here, I hope. FMLA can't cover anyone until April 2016, I believe, because of the year of employment requirement. Just wanted you to know that's the only slight worry on my mind. The rest seems relatively easy in comparison, and I'm actually really excited about it.

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS ON COLLEGE AFFORDABILITY AND STUDENT DEBT
EXETER, NEW HAMPSHIRE
MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 2015

It's wonderful to be back in Exeter. Thank you, Danny, for that introduction. And thank you all for coming out today. I've been traveling all over New Hampshire, and everywhere I go – from Dover to Nashua to Glen to Windham – people ask great questions. It must come from being the first primary state. So today, I want to talk for just a little bit, and then I want to hear what's on your mind.

This election is about the choices we have to make as a country, and how they'll shape our children's and grandchildren's futures. I believe that, in America, if you work hard and do your part, you should be able to get ahead and stay ahead. That's the basic bargain that's always set our nation apart. And I want to make sure we keep that bargain and strengthen it, so it holds true for this generation and the next.

Thanks to your hard work – and the hard work of people across the country – America has come back from the worst recession of our lifetimes. We're standing again. But we're not yet running the way we should. Corporate profits are near record highs – but most paychecks have barely budged. Costs for everything from childcare to prescription drugs are rising faster than wages. It's no wonder so many Americans feel like the deck is stacked in favor of those at the top.

We've got to do better. We've got to get incomes rising again, so more hard-working families can afford a middle-class life. We need strong growth... fair growth... and long-term growth. That's how we'll achieve lasting prosperity – by building an economy that we all have a stake in, and that works for everyone.

Today, I want to talk about one way we do that: by making college affordable and available to every American.

For millions of Americans, a college degree has been the ticket to a better life. My grandfather worked his entire life in a lace mill – but my dad made it to college and was able to start his own small business, and that made a huge difference in our lives. Then my parents scrimped and saved for years, so they could send me to a school across the country. They knew that they were setting me on the path to a better future. College still holds that promise today. A lot has changed in this country – but that hasn't.

Across America, parents are starting college funds the day their kids are born. High-schoolers – even middle-schoolers – are taking college prep courses and studying for the SAT. Full-time workers are going to night school, even if that means heading straight from an eight-hour shift to a pile of homework. If that's what it takes to get a better job – to give their kids better than they had – then they'll do it.

But here's the problem. States are slashing education budgets. Colleges keep raising prices. In-state tuition and fees for public colleges increased by 55 percent between 2003 and 2012. But your incomes didn't rise by that much, did they? So families are left facing a painful choice. Either you say, "We just can't afford it," and pass up on all the opportunities that a degree can offer – or you do whatever it takes to pay for it, even if that means going deeply into debt.

And more and more, that debt is holding people back. Forty million Americans have student loans. Together, they owe more than a trillion dollars. New Hampshire's students are carrying the highest debt in the country. And millions of Americans are delinquent or in default. Even if they're doing everything they can to pay their loans, they just can't keep up.

The cost of this debt is real – not just on balance sheets, but in people's lives and futures. I've talked to people who have so much student debt, they've put off buying a house, changing jobs, starting a business – even getting married. I've met parents and grandparents who've co-signed loans and end up draining their savings or ruining their credit – all because they did what parents and grandparents are supposed to do – help out the next generation.

There are students who take out loans to pay for an expensive degree from a for-profit institution – then graduate and discover that, when it comes to finding a job, their degree isn't worth what they thought it would.

And the 40 percent of students who never finish college are left with debt and no degree to show for it – the worst of both worlds. And that non-completion rate should trouble to all of us. It's the highest in the developed world.

College is supposed to help people achieve their dreams. But more and more, it's pushing people's dreams further out of reach. And that's just wrong. It's a betrayal of everything college is supposed to represent – and everything families have worked so hard to achieve.

This is also about our national competitiveness. The rest of the world is working as hard as they can to out-do us. China plans to double the number of students enrolled in college by 2030, which means they'll have nearly 200 million college graduates. That's more than our entire workforce! American workers can out-work and out-innovate anyone in the world – as long as they get the training and education they need to compete.

So we need to make some big changes. We need to transform how much higher education costs – and how those costs get paid. For too long, families have had to bear the burden of soaring prices, underinvestment, and too little accountability.

It's time for a new college compact, where everyone does their part. We need to make a quality education affordable and available to everyone willing to work for it.

I've been traveling the country for months, talking to students and families, educators, legislators, and experts of every stripe – including young progressive activists who've put the issue of debt-free college and college affordability at the top of the national agenda.

And today, I'm announcing my plan to put college within reach for everyone. We're calling it the New College Compact. And we're posting it on our website, Facebook, Medium, Snapchat – just about everywhere we can think of. I hope you'll check it out. But for now, here are the basics.

Under the New College Compact, schools will have to control their costs and show more accountability to their students.

States will have to meet their obligation to invest in higher education.

The federal government will never profit off student loans.

No family – and no student – should have to borrow to pay tuition at a public college.

And everyone who has student debt will be able to refinance it at lower rates.

That's my plan. It's ambitious – and we should be ambitious. But it's also achievable. And it would make a big difference in people's lives.

My College Compact comes down to two main goals.

First, we'll make sure that cost won't be a barrier.

Under my plan, you'll never have to take out a loan to pay for tuition at an in-state public university. We're going to make community college free – that's President Obama's plan and we're making it ours too. We're reforming Pell Grants, so students can use them for living costs as well as tuition. We're offering special help to college students who are parents, because when you help a parent get an education, you're helping their kids, too.

We're going to work with historically black colleges and universities, because they serve some of America's brightest students, who need the most support and too often have gotten the least of it. And we're going to help pay for college for students who agree to national service. If you're willing to tutor America's kids or clean up our parks, the least we can do is support your education.

And second, we'll make sure that debt won't hold anyone back.

Under my plan, every borrower in America who already has student debt will get the chance to refinance at lower interest rates. If you can refinance your mortgage or your car loan, you should be able to refinance your student loan.

If you do still end up taking out a loan – for example, to go to a private college – we'll cut your interest rates, so the government never makes a profit off your loan.

We'll make it easier to enroll in income-based repayment programs, so you'll never have to pay more than 10 percent of what you make.

We're going to help borrowers who are in default get back on their feet. And we'll crack down on predatory schools and lenders and bill collectors. If you defraud students, overcharge veterans, or mislead borrowers, we're going to do everything we can to stop you.

There's a lot more in my College Compact – from encouraging innovations like online learning and apprenticeships, so students can earn their degree in less time and move straight into a job... to strengthening the G.I. Bill, so more of our veterans can get their degree... to making sure colleges spending federal dollars on things that benefit students, like teaching and research – not marketing campaigns or big salaries for administrators.

I plan to make college affordability a major issue in this campaign – because it's a major issue for millions of American families. Here's the bottom line. An education shouldn't be something just for those at the top. And it shouldn't be a burden. An education should be affordable – and available – to everyone.

I remember how proud my parents were when I graduated college. I remember how proud Bill and I were to see Chelsea graduate – I'll never forget how grown-up she looked that day. And even though my new granddaughter is already growing up faster than I'd like, I can't wait to see her walk across a stage someday and receive her diploma. And I know that mothers and fathers and grandparents across the country feel the exact same way.

I want every young person in America to have their shot at that moment. I want every hard-working parent out there to get the chance to see his or her child cross a stage – or to cross it themselves. America should be a place where those achievements are possible for anyone who's willing to work hard to do their part. That's the country I want to help build – for this generation and all the generations to come.

Thank you very much. And now, let's hear from you.

Martin O'Malley: Zero out fossil fuels by 2050

<http://www.usatoday.com/story/opinion/2015/06/18/pope-francis-encyclical-clean-energy-technology-campaign-column/28859409/>

Martin O'Malley9:19 a.m. EDT June 18, 2015

Today, Pope Francis published his first encyclical —an official teaching document to all 1.2 billion Catholics — on the moral imperative of addressing climate change. He is not alone among leaders of world faiths making such a clarion call for action.

We have come a long way as a nation in making ourselves more energy independent. Now is the time to take this progress to the next level — the future of our country and our planet depends on it.

New technologies now put an independent clean energy future decidedly within our reach as a nation.

But reach for it we must.

Clean energy represents the biggest business and job creation opportunity we've seen in a hundred years. And reliance on local, renewable energy sources means a more secure nation and a more stable world.

Given the grave threat that climate change poses to human life on our planet, we have not only a business imperative but a moral obligation to future generations to act immediately and aggressively.

This is why protecting the United States from the devastating impact of climate change — while capitalizing on the job creation opportunity of clean energy — is at the center of my campaign for president .

All of us can acknowledge that with an "all of the above strategy," President Obama has made the United States more energy independent in every category of fuels, including oil and gas.

But America did not land a man on the moon with an "all of the above strategy." It was an engineering challenge.

Making the transition to a clean energy future is also an engineering challenge.

We cannot meet the climate challenge with an all-of-the-above energy strategy, or by drilling off our coasts, or by building pipelines that bring oil from tar sands in Canada.

Instead, we must be intentional and committed to one over-arching goal as a people: a full, complete transition to renewable energy — and an end to our reliance on fossil fuels.

Saving the world is a goal worthy of a great people. It is also good business for the United States of America.

I believe, within 35 years, our country can, and should, be 100% powered by clean energy, supported by millions of new jobs. To reach this goal we must accelerate that transition starting now.

As president, on day one, I would use my executive power to declare the transition to a clean energy future the number one priority of our Federal Government.

I would create a new Clean Energy Jobs Corps to partner with communities to retrofit buildings to be more energy efficient, improve local resiliency, create new green spaces, and restore and expand our forests so they can absorb more greenhouse gases.

I would retrofit federal buildings to the highest efficiency standards and require new federal buildings to be net-zero, require the federal fleet to be subject to low- or zero-emissions purchasing agreements, and require all federally-funded infrastructure projects to meet climate resiliency standards .

As president, I would direct the Environmental Protection Agency to take aggressive action to limit greenhouse gases: expanding rules to other large sources of emissions beyond power plants, adopting a zero-tolerance policy for methane leaks from current oil and gas production, and setting higher energy efficiency standards for new buildings while requiring energy costs to be transparent to building tenants and purchasers.

And I would reject projects like Keystone XL and drilling off our coasts and in Antarctica and Alaska . Furthermore, I would keep domestically produced oil and gas in the U.S., instead of selling it abroad — unless there is a clear strategic security rationale.

Beyond executive actions, I would make clean energy deployment — and employment — a first-order priority.

I would set a national, cross-sector Renewable Electricity Standard so our nation is powered by 100% clean energy by 2050, and a national goal of doubling energy efficiency within 15 years. Many states like California and Maryland are already leading the way forward for the United States.

I would fight for federal legislation for a cap on carbon emissions from all sources, with proceeds from permits returned to lower and middle-class families, transition assistance, and new jobs with the Clean Energy Corps.

As president, I would support a Clean Energy Financing Authority to support projects to increase efficiency and resiliency upgrades in cities, towns, and rural communities nationwide.

I would prioritize modernizing our electric grid to evolve to support localized, renewable energy generation, reduce electricity waste and increase security from sabotage or attack.

And I would increase our investment in basic clean energy research so the U.S. can reclaim the lead on energy innovation, including advancing development, deployment, transmission and storage for renewable energy and new efficiency technologies.

The fact is, there is no either/or choice between our prosperity and protecting our planet — we can create a future where there are more jobs, and a future with a livable climate. And there is no future for humankind without a livable climate.

The reality, as I learned in Maryland, is that the two goals are indivisible. Driven by ambitious targets, we created thousands of new jobs while deploying clean energy technology and reducing greenhouse gas pollution by nearly 10% over just seven years.

As the nation, we can do far more — with a bold vision for America's clean energy future and the strong leadership needed to get it done.

Martin O'Malley has served as the governor of Maryland, mayor of Baltimore, and a city councilor — earning a reputation as a bold, progressive, and pragmatic executive who is willing to take on our toughest shared challenges.

Friend,

In a race this close, some people watch polls -- but I watch votes.

Every day, my team compiles the list of everyone who has already voted, so volunteers know which supporters they still need to talk to.

As of yesterday, 477,943 people have already voted in this election. That's on pace to shatter the record from 2010.

Take a second and let us know if you've voted:

Yes, I voted early. What else can I do to help?

I haven't voted yet -- I'll make plans now.

There's still time to vote early. In addition to Thursday and Friday hours, most locations are open Saturday, and some are even open Sunday.

Right now, voting early is one of the best ways you can help this campaign.

John—I just wanted to make sure you saw this email I sent you the other day.

Dear John,

Some time next year, the Supreme Court will decide whether states can effectively end safe and legal abortion by simply forcing clinics to shut down.

And if we lose, here's what we could be left with:¹

- 9 abortion clinics left in Texas
- 2 clinics in Louisiana
- 2 clinics in Alabama
- 1 clinic in Oklahoma
- ZERO clinics in Mississippi

With so much at stake, we're aiming to raise $200,000 by January 1 to make sure we have the resources we need to defend abortion rights in the coming year.

Will you make a year-end contribution today? All year-end donations will be MATCHED by a few generous NARAL Pro-Choice America donors.

How can abortion be considered safe and legal when there are no abortion providers left? The answer is: It can't.

This has been the anti-choice game plan for years. Since they can't outright ban abortion, they're simply making it impossible to access by passing waiting periods of up to 72 hours and clinic shutdown laws that force women to travel hundreds of miles.

But 7 in 10 Americans support safe and legal access to abortion, so if we're organized and fight hard, we will win.

Will you make a year-end donation? All year-end donations will be DOUBLE-MATCHED if you give today.

Thank you for helping to make reproductive freedom real for all women.

Subject: [big campaign] Newsweek: [...] Fewer Jobs, Larger Deficits If Republicans Were in Charge

This is the narrative we need to hammer home for the next 62 days!

http://www. newsweek .com/blogs/the-gaggle/2010/08/26/on-jobs-and-deficits-republicans-are-worse-than-obama.html

Estimates Say Fewer Jobs, Larger Deficits If Republicans Were in Charge

by Andrew Romano

August 27, 2010

Nothing is more important to Republican politicians these days than jobs and the deficit—at least according to Republican politicians. As House Minority Leader John Boehner put it in a "major economic address " Tuesday, " President Obama is "doing everything possible to prevent jobs from being created" while refusing to do anything at all "about bringing down the deficits that threaten our economy." Elect Republicans in November, Boehner assured his audience, and we will put an end to this insanity.

There's only one problem with Boehner's message: so far, the things that Republicans have said they want to do won't actually boost employment or reduce deficits. In fact, much the opposite. By combing through a variety of studies and projections from nonpartisan economic sources, we here at Gaggle headquarters have found that if Republicans were in charge from January 2009 onward—and if they were now given carte blanche to enact the proposals they want to enact—the projected 2010-2020 deficits would be larger than they are under Obama, and fewer people would probably be employed.

The math is pretty straightforward. Let's start with the deficit. According to the CBO, Obama's stimulus plan is projected to increase budget deficits over the next decade by $814 billion. That's a big number. But Republicans opposed the legislation, refused to provide an alternative, and now insist that it's been a total failure. So let's be generous and subtract it from their side of the equation. Obama deficit, $814 billion. The GOP deficit, $0.

Next up is health-care reform. Obama passed it; Republicans want to repeal it "lock, stock, and barrel ." The reason, as Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell explained in July, is that "we all know that it's going to increase the deficit." Unfortunately for the GOP, though, nonpartisan experts tend to disagree. Just this Tuesday, for example, the Congressional Budget Office released a letter saying that Obama's health-care reform legislation would "reduce the projected budget deficit by $30 billion over the next 10 years," while repealing the law would generate "an increase in deficits ... of $455 billion ... over that [same] period." Factors those figures into the equation and the Obama deficit falls to $784 billion. The GOP deficit, meanwhile, rises to $455 billion. Getting warmer.

The final piece of the puzzle is the Bush tax cuts. Obama wants to extend them for the 95 percent of taxpayers making under $250,000 a year; Republicans want to extend them for everybody. How will these extensions affect the deficit? Glad you asked. According to data compiled by the Washington Post, "the Democratic proposal would add about \$3 trillion to the deficit during the next decade, while the GOP plan would cost \$3.7 trillion." That brings the total Obama deficit to $3.784 trillion over ten years, and its GOP counterpart to—drumroll, please—$4.155 trillion.

That's right. Even if we assume that the Republicans would've spent $0 to stimulate the economy in the wake of the largest economic collapse since the Great Depression—an unlikely scenario, given the very real risks of inaction—their proposed policies would still produce a deficit $371 billion larger than President Obama's.

(Or $335 billion; Boehner also says he'd like to freeze non-defense discretionary spending at 2008 levels, which would save a grand total of \$36 billion .)

On jobs, it's a similar story. So far, Republicans have only said they'd do—or that they would've done—two large-scale things the Democrats haven't: 1) scrap the stimulus and 2) extend the Bush tax cuts for Americans earning over $250,000 so as not to (in Boehner's words) "impose job-killing tax hikes on families and small businesses."

How would these measures affect employment? Regarding the stimulus, the answer is pretty clear. In a report out this week, the CBO estimates that between 1.4 and 3.3 million fewer people would be employed right now if the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act had never made it through Congress. Split the difference, and the pro-stimulus Obama moves ahead of the anti-stimulus GOP by about 2.35 million jobs. (A more dramatic estimate by the economists Alan Blinder and Mark Zandi [a McCain 2008 adviser] puts the number at 2.7 million, but we'll stick with the CBO stats for now.)

The effect of tax cuts on job creation is a little trickier to tally. Extending all of them, according to the CBO, would lower unemployment by 0.3 to 0.8 percent over the next year or so; extending them solely for people making less than $250,000 would produce a somewhat smaller effect, for a difference of roughly 200,000 to 500,000 people. The problem, as economist William G. Gale of the Brookings Institute has noted, is that "of 11 potential stimulus policies the CBO recently examined, an extension of all of the Bush tax cuts ties for lowest bang for the buck." In fact, he continues, "letting the high-income tax cuts expire and using the money for aid to the states, extensions of unemployment insurance benefits [or] tax credits favoring job creation ... would have about three times the impact ... as continuing the Bush tax cuts."

In addition, it's unlikely that extending the cuts for the richest Americans would have much of an effect on small-business hiring, which is a claim that Republicans make with some regularity. Why? Because only two percent of taxpayers in the top two income brackets actually run small businesses. The other 98 percent of small-business owners make less than $250,000 a year and wouldn't pay higher taxes under Obama's plan.

History isn't on the GOP's side, either. If keeping the top marginal tax rate at 35 percent--the rate under Bush, and the rate that Republicans are fighting to preserve--spurs so much hiring, why didn't America experience any job growth at all during Bush's time in office? And if a top marginal tax rate of 39.6 percent--the rate under Bill Clinton, and the rate that Democrats are fighting to restore--is such a job-killer, why did payrolls grow by 20 percent during the 1990s?

The implication here isn't that higher tax rates equal more jobs. Far from it. But there's simply no evidence, either in the history books or the latest projections, to suggest that extending all of the Bush tax cuts would provide an employment boost large enough to offset the number of jobs that would've been lost if the GOP had succeeded in blocking the stimulus--let alone lasting enough to justify adding another $700 billion to the deficit.

The bottom line, then, is that recent GOP proposals would produce fewer jobs and far larger deficits than the plans Obama has already passed or currently wants to pass. This isn't to say that the Republicans couldn't create jobs or cut the deficit if restored to power--just that right now, they've chosen to support policies that would prove less effective in both respects than the Democratic programs they so vehemently criticize.

On the trail, it's easy to talk about cutting pork, slashing taxes, and reducing "uncertainty." But if the party wants to provide voters with real alternatives on jobs and deficits, they should start talking about the sort of deep spending cuts and targeted tax incentives that might actually make a difference someday: reforming Medicare and Social Security; cutting defense spending; reducing payroll taxes; creating tax credits for job creation. Otherwise, they're worse than what we have now.

Hi John,

I hope you had a chance to see my email from earlier today. We have done so much together this past cycle and the only way to continue our success is by not resting on our laurels.

And the response from our supporters has been incredible - we are only $1,258 away from fully funding a great program.

Can you make a contribution of \$ 10, \$25, or \$100 before heading out to celebrate the New Year?

Thank you so much for your support. See you in 2015! I hope you have a safe and prosperous New Year!

Dear Faculty,

I am writing to request syllabi for the 2014-2015 academic year. Having access to current syllabi is a helpful tool for the academic advisors in this office when they meet with students. Would you please email me (brownd2@law.georgetown.edu) your Fall 2014 and/or Spring 2015 syllabi? If you only have a draft syllabus for the Spring 2015 semester, I would appreciate receiving the final version when it is ready.

Subject: [big campaign] CO Statesman: Norton under fire for remarks about Social Security

EXCERPT:

Americans United for Change, the group formerly known as Americans United to Protect Social Security that led the national campaign to beat back President Bush's effort to privatize Social Security in 2005, called on Norton this week to elaborate on her "shocking remarks" linking Social Security to a Ponzi scheme.

Tom McMahon, acting executive director of the organization, said that Norton "may not be aware that Social Security has operated successfully as the same pay-as-you-go system it always has since FDR signed it into law nearly 75 years ago. If Norton believes Social Security, which has been credited with pulling millions of seniors, survivors and disabled Americans out of poverty, is a 'Ponzi scheme,' she owes the people of Colorado a straight answer on what specifically she would change about the system or replace it with."

Norton under fire for remarks about Social Security

3/12/2010

From Staff Reports

THE COLORADO STATESMAN

Former Lt. Gov. Jane Norton, the frontrunner in this year's contest for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate, attracted a barrage of local and national attention this week — and most of it not very complimentary. The mounting criticism stemmed from remarks made by Norton at a Colorado Springs event Tuesday night — hosted, in part, by several local Tea Party chapters. Norton was asked to identify which programs she deemed unconstitutional and should not be funded by the federal government.

"The federal government is fundamentally out of control," Norton answered. "They are seizing control of things like car companies, banks, insurance companies. They're encroaching in areas of education, of the EPA and its endangerment finding, circumventing the rule of law, circumventing legislative processes. They are absolutely out of control."

And then came the part that's gotten her into such political hot water this week.

Norton added, "With regard to Social Security, it has been turned into a Ponzi scheme. The money that people paid into it should be there for those who need it for their retirement."

Her remarks immediately sparked controversy both in Colorado and nationwide from critics upset over the analogy.

Pat Waak, the state Democratic Party chairman, pounced on Norton's comments in a conference call to reporters this week.

"I'm not sure whether she knows what a Ponzi scheme is or not, but clearly she is a candidate (who) is out of step with Colorado and out of step with the issues she is trying to raise as she moves around the state," said Waak.

"To take something like Social Security that people have paid into for years and years and are getting their Social Security benefits from, and to turn around and say it's like a Ponzi scheme — I don't get it," she stated.

"Coloradans have paid into the program for years and many Coloradans who have paid in are now receiving their benefits.

"What do the beneficiaries think of Norton's remarks? Is she going to tell us what she meant by that? I would like to know," the Democratic Party leader added.

This isn't the first time that Norton has come under fire for remarks to Tea Party supporters. With the advent of YouTube and instant coverage caught on video, it's become increasingly more difficult to shield candidates from detractors trying to document a particular candidate's impromptu remarks for the record.

Norton was similarly criticized earlier in the campaign for allowing an attendee at a coffee shop event to go unquestioned when she complained about President Obama being a Muslim.

At another Tea party function, Norton reportedly said the president cares more about protecting the rights of terrorists than protecting the American people.

Waak mentioned these occurrences during her conference call this week, including another instance when Norton said the president cares more about protecting the rights of terrorists than protecting the American people.

Americans United for Change, the group formerly known as Americans United to Protect Social Security that led the national campaign to beat back President Bush's effort to privatize Social Security in 2005, called on Norton this week to elaborate on her "shocking remarks" linking Social Security to a Ponzi scheme.

Tom McMahon, acting executive director of the organization, said that Norton "may not be aware that Social Security has operated successfully as the same pay-as-you-go system it always has since FDR signed it into law nearly 75 years ago. If Norton believes Social Security, which has been credited with pulling millions of seniors, survivors and disabled Americans out of poverty, is a 'Ponzi scheme,' she owes the people of Colorado a straight answer on what specifically she would change about the system or replace it with."

Nate Strauch, Norton's campaign press secretary, responded that Norton stands by her description. "In a Ponzi scheme, new investors are used to pay old investors, which is exactly the way social security works," Strauch said in an email to reporters.

"A Ponzi scam ends when the money runs out. Social Security is headed toward bankruptcy in its current form, meaning later investors won't get paid, just like a Ponzi scheme," he said.

Eric Schultz, communications director for the admittedly partisan Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, wasn't buying Strauch's explanation.

"She thinks Social Security is a Ponzi scheme. Notice how that came kind of at the end of her big statement about how liberals are taking over America and we can't turn this thing around," Schultz said on The Ed Show on MSN cable television.

"She just got on a roll and really got after Social Security, which has been the most successful and reliable government program for more than 70 years. Period.

"Now, watch out Colorado," Schultz intoned.

"The woman who wants to be your next senator sounds like she's reading right out of the Michele Bachmann playbook. Norton is courting the crazy book and so far it's working," Schultz added, mentioning that in a recent hypothetical match up she is leading Democratic Senator Michael Bennet.

"We're going to keep an eye on this one in Colorado because anyone who calls Social Security a Ponzi scheme belongs in psycho talk," Schultz said.

The RFS option is only meant to tee up the question of whether HRC should take an unexpected position on ethanol. Consultants were looking for a range of ideas that cut against grain. This was one.

Would love to discuss further.

On B corps, yes. We have looked at incentives for states to establish/expand B corp regimes and for corporations to participate. We haven't worked up a specific proposal but will do so.

Team -- greetings from snowy New England. Hope you all are doing well.

In the next couple of hours, Ethan will be sending around our memo providing inputs for the policy poll.

Please be warned: it is an extensive document -- more than 40 pages -- covering a significant number of proposals in a significant number of policy areas.

But please rest assured: It is a user-friendly document with a table of contents, clear sections, and very brief capsules on each policy item. We followed the Benenson categories and the Benenson model for presenting the proposals. Even a quick scan will give you a good sense of the options.

The reason it is so long is that we have erred on the side of inclusivity, to give you a range of choices as you construct the poll. We have also identified -- at the front end of the memo -- those proposals that we think it makes the most sense to test. If you would prefer a briefer input memo with fewer choices, say the word and we will turn that around quickly.

We look forward to the phone conversation tomorrow.

Best,
Jake

John, here are more details regarding the finance meeting on the 14th and how it meshes with the Georgetown Law event. We also included Friday for your reference so you could make some decisions about whether it's worth it to go up on Thursday and stay over for a portion of Friday morning. See below, and let us know what questions and concerns you have. Offline for dinner from 8-9 pm EDT (7-8 pm your time) but free after that.

200 Hillstarters gathering in Brooklyn

Timing: 2:00-6:00 PM (HRC from 2-5 pm, most likely, with evening reception 5-6 pm – finance staff is pretty confident that the reception will go long, as late as 7 pm, but HRC is not scheduled to attend that. And, of course, we've been warned the entire timeline could change if HRC's calendar dictates it.)

Location: In Brooklyn: Liberty Warehouse: 260 Conover St, Brooklyn, NY 11231

Here is the tick-tock for the Georgetown event. They are expecting you to stay until 1:50 pm. Below that is your flight option:

12:00 PM – Guests arrive and head to the alumni reception on the outdoor patio (Astor Terrace), located through the Salon. *Reception will be held inside the Salon in the case of inclement weather.

12:35 PM – Alumni and Guests are seated for the luncheon. Salads are pre-set.

12:40 PM – Dean Treanor welcomes alumni to the St. Regis and on behalf of Georgetown Law, thanks them for attending, and advises them that lunch will be served and then he will return to the mic to give an update on the Law Center and introduce John Podesta toward dessert.

1:15 – 1:20 PM – Dean Treanor makes remarks about the Law Center, introduces John Podesta (L'76), and invites John to join him on the stage.

1:20 - 1:40 PM – Conversation between the Dean and John Podesta.

1:40 – 1:50 PM – Questions from the guests.

1:50 PM – Dean Treanor thanks Mr. Podesta, gives him a small token of appreciation, and close the lunch.

2:00 PM – Alumni and guests depart from the St. Regis.

1 Flight option that allows your participation in both Georgetown & the evening reception portion of the Finance Meeting in Brooklyn (5-6 pm):

3:00pm-4:24pm

DCA - LGA

Delta 2720

This is the only option that works with Georgetown and the reception.

If you decide to go up and stay in New York and stay overnight, Dennis had something in mind for the next day, if this makes it worth your while to go: "All of our regional fundraisers are flying in for the summit on the 14th and then we are doing a team meeting with them on Friday, May 15 during the morning/day. Would be great if JP could stop by for 15 mins - most likely at HQ."

We had planned on you being in DC for the 15th to:

- meet with the Equitable Growth team
- have dinner with Antonio Weiss
- just in case we needed to do anything physically on the Georgetown grades (which are due at Noon), but grades and WCEG can be done over the phone.

Amtrak Options to return on Friday 5/15:

-2 pm Acela (gets into WAS at 4:53 pm)

or

-2:02 pm Northeast regional (gets into WAS at 5:20 pm)

Both allow you enough time to get out of the NY tunnels to get on the call with Equitable Growth:

3 - 4 pm: (Call if you're on the train back from NY / Meeting if you decide to stay in DC)

Equitable Growth team: May 26th Pre-Meeting

Background materials? Yes—and they want your thoughts on them. Docs will be ready this Friday 5/8 and Eryn will bring them to your house on Sunday morning 5/10 (along with the London briefing and anything else you need).

Then finally, dinner with Antoniou (Time tbd—he's totally flexible and even says push to a different date if it's too hard). He just wrote today to say Susannah (his wife) would love to come too if Mary will be joining, and especially if at Brandywine. Otherwise, could just meet somewhere downtown.

There you go! That's what the 14th and 15th look like. Milia and Eryn are available this evening to discuss on the phone if you have questions or want to tweak any part of this.

Hello Mr. Podesta,

Thank you again for taking my call especially considering its unorthodox nature. As I said on the phone, I currently serve as Political director for Penn for Hillary: a student-led organization building a Philadelphia base for Hillary Clinton's next political endeavor. Our group started out as a campus franchise of Ready for Hillary but after surpassing the goals set by the national organization, we broadened our vision to include the greater Philadelphia area. We've formed partnerships with most of the major schools in the trip-state region and we have established a network of students approaching 500 members. These partnerships include strong ties to the Pennsylvania College Democrats.

As I mentioned, we'll be traveling to DC this week to attend the Winter Meeting. Our hope is for us to form more connections within the party and to establish ourselves as a resource in Philadelphia. We'd love to meet with you informally if your schedule allows. If we're unable to meet in DC, you always have an open invitation to visit us here at Penn (we'd love to have you speak to our student body).

Arriving in DC Thursday evening and leaving Saturday night.

Subject: Don't forget - RSVP now to help fight for immigration reform in Bethesda

John --

While members of Congress are home in their districts this week, they're meeting with constituents and getting a sense of how folks are feeling about the issues.

That makes this a critical week for moving comprehensive immigration reform forward.

Come out to the Week of Action event on immigration this Wednesday in Bethesda and help keep the pressure on Congress. Here are the details:

What: Immigration Week of Action event in Bethesda

Where:

Bethesda, MD 20814

When: Wednesday, April 10th

This really could happen, John -- we could help pass a bipartisan bill that not only helps grow our economy and fixes our broken immigration system, but also ensures that 11 million people currently living in the shadows have a real path to citizenship.

If you agree with President Obama that comprehensive immigration reform needs to happen now, then RSVP for the event on Wednesday and help get this done:

Subject: Staff Transition

Dear Members of the Board,

After more than a decade of service to the American Progress, Debbie Fine will be leaving us for a fantastic new opportunity as the Deputy Director of Global Philanthropy at J.P. Morgan Chase. We are incredibly grateful for her years of dedication, hard work, effective leadership and sense of humor. Debbie has been part of American Progress from the very early days, helping build its infrastructure and establishing a legal team that protects CAP without hindering its programmatic goals. She has been a true team player, filling many roles as needed over the years. Few have worked as hard to make CAP the place it is and I will miss her spirit as well as her counsel.

I am pleased to announce that Alex DeMots will be leading the legal team as our new General Counsel. Alex has served as in-house counsel at American Progress for more than seven years, and as VP and Deputy General Counsel since 2011. During that time he has been an effective leader, helping to guide the legal team with excellent problem solving skills, and working with American Progress staff to ensure legal compliance in all manner of activities. He has been particularly effective in guiding us with judiciousness as the world of nonprofits and electoral activities has been radically altered. I know he will make a strong General Counsel. In addition to his years of experience at American Progress, he served as counsel to Chairman Robert D. Lenhard at the Federal Election Commission and spent two years as an associate with Trister, Ross, Schadler & Gold, specializing in advising nonprofit organizations on the full range of issues relevant to them. Alex is a graduate of Georgetown University Law Center and the University of Michigan.

I am recommending that the board appoint Alex as the new Corporate Secretary effective April 20, 2015. As described above, he has a wealth of experience in legal matters impacting tax exempt organizations, including best practices in governance, and he has already worked side by side with Debbie during his tenure here on these issues.

If you agree with my recommendation, please email Debbie Fine to let her know at your earliest convenience at dfine@americanprogress.org , and complete the attached Unanimous Consent and submit it to Debbie by email or fax to 202-315-0453 by Thursday April 16.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to ask me.

I look forward to seeing you in May.

Thank you as always for all that you do,
Neera

Subject: following up on a blurb for a book on social trust

Attachments: The Leap, Ulrich Boser, DRAFT.docx

John,

I wanted to reach out about my book on rebuilding the nation's social trust. Would you be willing to consider the book for a blurb?

I emailed just before you left for the White House--and I know things have been crazy busy--so I thought I might ping you again.

As for the book, it looks at how we might rebuild our faith in others--and society itself. As part of my research, I visited a soap opera in Rwanda that aims to restore the country's broken trust; profiled the man who brought honesty to one of the most corrupt nations in Latin America; and even jumped out of an airplane to see if my so-called "trust hormone" would go up. (It did.)

The book is called "The Leap: The Science of Trust and Why It Matters." The book includes new data on trust in government as well as a set of policy recommendations. The book grew out of my work on the Doing What Works project.

Also, do you think Bill Clinton might be interested in providing a blurb? I reached out to Tina Flourney as well.

Thanks again for your support. I look forward to hearing what you think.

All best,

Ulrich

 Subject: Drugs and Terror Monster Conjugated

SALVATION OF MANKIND BY NARCOTIC VEGETATION ERADICATION FROM THE AIR BY UNMANNED AIRCRAFT VEHICLES

Dear President Obama,

According to my analysis a breakthrough advent has appeared with Unmanned Aircraft Vehicles Development proved being capable of hitting even point targets. It is well known that Afghanistan has World record of Poppy Opium Production of about 200 tons annually yielded from a cultivated 157,000 hectares area. That enormous dope amount (90% of world opium production) is in my opinion the main financial source for Terror Organizations' Weaponry Acquisition. According to my assessment, UAV could have been Redemption for Entire Mankind if being utilized as follows:

2,4 D Defoliant is splashed on the Narcotic Vegetation causing its Desertification within several days inevitably. The following favorable consequences might have been anticipated:

- 1) Severing of Terror Organizations from their Financial Source that dry up with Narcotic Vegetation Desertification
- 2) Salvation of millions of Potential Drug Addicts from Awful Agony and Death
- 3) Rehabilitation of US Deterrence that has weakened considerably after Nine Eleven Horrendousness
- 4) Precipitation of NATO Troops Evacuation from Afghanistan as a result of UAV Bombardment Intensification resulting in Terror Suppression Reinforcement
- 5) Deterrence of El-Qaida Reactivation by leaving a Souvenir of dry Poppy-Opium Bushes from pulling out NATO Troops
- 6) I suggest having a Debate in the Senate that might hopefully lead to successful termination of the Afghan War after being stuck in its Marsh for 12 long years
- 7) Waiting for your Response as US friend since 1948
- 8) There could not have been any doubt about terminating the Armed Conflict in Afghanistan Honorably averting an Ignominious ending up as currently impending.
- 9) Similarly, Central American Dope Smuggling could have been drastically diminished by UAV Utilization for Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Grown on Mountainous Gradients. Very large amounts of Dope are smuggled annually into the US having found hitherto no efficacious way of overcoming that calamity
- 10) Please contact me by scheduling a meeting at US Embassy in Tel -Aviv for Clarifications with your experts' participation specializing in Explosives, Electronics and Aviation
- 11) I have got all the required specifications for getting mankind be extricated from the two conjugated calamities, Drugs inundation and Terror attacks of Innocent Population thanks to UAV activities.
- 12) To my great astonishment, my correspondence versus US Senate Committee on Armed Services has been irresponsive despite the extraordinary importance for entire Civilization Meanwhile as many as one billion of Muslims are threatening America encouraged by their Nine Eleven Precedent Success
- 13) In reminiscence, as many as 50,000 Aircraft were ordered according to Presidents' Roosevelt Ordinance after the Japanese Attack of Pearl Harbor while 7000 UAV by comparison are being idled in Storage letting the Afghan Armed Conflict be continued indefinitely.
- 14) Please let me explicate for US Air-Force an efficacious way emerging victorious from Afghan Entanglement in favor of Entire Mankind instead of suffering an ignominious defeat.
- 15) To my great surprise, US Does not exercise its Self Defense Right according to UN Charter Chapter 51 (1946), enabling Criminal Organizations of Third World Countries attacking it with impunity. Nine Eleven Catastrophe could have been averted if the US had utilized its complete Arsenal particularly UAV in high numbers instead of being kept idle in Magazines.
- 16) I propose meeting your Experts for UAV, Explosives and Electronics at US Embassy in Tel Aviv for thorough debate about Dual Headed Monster Decapitation in favor of beleaguered Mankind believing in great success of my Innovative

10/18/2016

Unprecedented Method as an only feasible efficacious expedient against it.

17) Is White House Correspondence Team busy to such an extent being unable responding even most important letters?

18) To my great Astonishment Dereliction of US Air Force results in smuggling of Tremendous Dope Amount from Central America via Mexico into the US with its

Awful damage for many millions American's Health

19) I don't see any reason for hesitancy! The President may issue tomorrow an ordinance in order to open emergency

Magazines, getting ten thousands of UAV

Aloft in order to achieve Narcotic Vegetation Desertification with achievement for Posterity

20) Emerge preferably with an Upper hand honorably instead of being ignominiously defeated!

21) Despite being Non US Citizen I think to have done my best in assisting ending up

Afghan War victoriously thanks to my Innovative Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Method, however not a single word of Acknowledgement has hitherto Reached my mailbox! In my opinion, Disparagement and Ungratefulness are conjugated at least according to my feeling!

22) There could not have been any justification keeping as many as 70,000 UAV unused in magazines instead of operating them against Nine Eleven Cruel enemy. Moreover, US taxpayers have already paid for that arsenal!

23) I believe Mr. Attorney General that Narcotic Vegetation Desertification Utilizing UAV is the only Feasible way of getting Mankind been extricated from the Doubling Stricken Menace Grabbing, Drug and Terror Simultaneously.

24) November election is going to be beginning of President Obama last Congress Tenure working with but if the President is being able indicating monumental achievements. He might have been eligible into the Parlor of great Leaders having annihilated Drugs and Terror calamities for Posterity affluence

25) Wiping out Narcotic Vegetation and launching consequently an Overwhelming

Strike on Terror Organizations by UAV Utilization might have been an Unprecedented Achievement of Entire Mankind and President Obama personally.

26) Incredibly, no reaction has come from the White House in latest four years despite

My pure intention for assistance for the US as well as Entire Civilization!

27) In my opinion Nobel Institute might have contributed to a very great extent to Drug and Terror Monster Decapitation in favor of Entire Civilization.

28) Prime Minister of Israel might have contributed a great role in exerting an influence on US and Western Governments in General in a Universal Effort of Dual Headed Monster, Drugs and Terror simultaneous eradication

Be successful

Just talked w Mindy. Good convo. She said she's been getting really good feedback about Dan's outreach--she said she knows we are talking to the people they suggested and they really like Dan. So good work, Schwerin!

We should think about going back to them when we've isolated one or two ideas and getting more input on those (without showing our cards, obviously)...will probably be in our interest for them to have a sense of where we're headed before HRC delivers to the public.

Also, she flagged that they're going to push back hard against POTUS on trade. She understood that HRC was already on the record as his SOS so we don't have a ton of room to maneuver.

Subject: Happy Valentine's Day from EDN to You

Today is Valentine's Day. And it marks a perfect time to show some love for the Earth, our planet that loves us unconditionally and asks for so little in return.

We have compiled a short top ten list for you on how to have a red and green Valentine's Day. We hope you enjoy it, use it, and have a great Valentine's Day!

For the Earth,
Earth Day Network

Top Ten Ways to Make Your Valentine's Day Green

- 1. Plant Some Love: Plant a tree in honor of someone that you love.
- 2. A Different Gift: Gift a house plant rather than cutting another typical rose. As a bonus, many house plants also act as air purifiers and absorb toxins! Go for an aloe plant or a cactus.
- 3. Show Your Love: Submit your picture and join the #ShowYourLove campaign with the Climate Coalition and show decision-makers that you love the earth.
- 4. DIY: Make a DIY present with some old items from your home. Show your loved one that you care about them by spending time and effort on the present while reducing waste at the same time!
- 5. Chocolates with a Twist: Go the classic Valentine's Day way but with a twist: buy eco-friendly chocolates that were produced with sustainable farming methods.
- 6. Food is Always Good: Surprise your loved one with a home-cooked meal made with fresh, healthy, local and organic ingredients.
- 7. Provide a Loving Home: This is a step up but consider adopting a pet from the local animal shelter! Give those poor animals a warm home and show them some love.
- 8. Cards: Send a card made of recycled paper or even better, an e-card!
- 9. A Gift from Nature: Go on a hike or bike-ride and enjoy the beautiful scenery that nature has to offer. If you want to be extra romantic, go at sunset or sunrise!
- 10. Go Organic: Can't give up traditions? Send organic/fair-trade flowers this year!

John --

I met with Pete Rouse on Friday when I was in Chicago. He suggested I contact you regarding the transition work you're doing for Obama. I am forwarding to you the note I sent to Pete. Please let me know how I can be of help.

And, thanks for all the support you've been giving Jen through the Edwards debacle. They've really been leaning on here to get them through this. I know she appreciates the friendship and counsel you've provided her during this difficult time. Just wanted you to know that I appreciate it, too.

Pete --

Thanks for taking the time to meet on Friday. Glad to help out on the campaign in whatever way I can and will continue to work with Heather when and where she needs.

I appreciate the opportunity to work on the transition and am attaching my bio and resume as you suggested. I appreciate your passing this along to Chris and will contact John Podesta directly.

As I mentioned, I've been working on a transition piece for USDA for a book that CAP will produce. However, I probably can be most helpful in working on the natural resources, energy and environment elements of the transition given my work with conservation agencies in USDA and DOI. Having focussed alot with the Clinton administration and since at Yale on western lands issues like fire, forests, and roadless area protection, I probably know more about the large landscape issues. But, wherever I can help...

One final thought.

I mentioned to Heather that I thought a simple and direct way to deal with the energy issues raised by gas prices (and the critical editorial in the NY Times yesterday) would be to propose to redirect the tax credits now going to big oil (aka Exxon-Mobil) and instead give them to GM, Ford, and Chrysler to accelerate their efforts to develop fuel efficient cars. The auto manufacturers need the credits (given big financial losses) and Exxon doesn't. But rather than an abstract redirect of these funds to consumers or to "accelerate development of cellulosic ethanol", by specifically redirecting the tax credits to the auto manufacturers, the benefits should be clear -- especially for the union employees and the states that would benefit like Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin. Key electoral states, of course.

Thanks again. I look forward to helping with the campaign and the transition.

Subject: Rolling Stone

We are splitting my project release into two pieces. The first one is an in-depth story about what I'm doing. The second one, is releasing the trailer to the documentary and foreword to the Novel.

This first piece is going to be with Rolling Stone, they're flying a journalist out to sit with me for two days and do an in-depth printed feature on this. They are high on the Sean Penn drug story that got them international attention. This made them call back within an hour with the editor and say "we are all in absolutely".

We like Rolling Stone, right?

When we release the trailer, with my foreword, we are planning on doing the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, or the Washington Post.

My question is this: Do you know anybody at those institutions that you can put in a good word to consider the story? I think we can do fine on our own, but knowing a good journalist, somebody that would get the hint if you put out an email, we can set up the entire project credibly. I remember Leslie Keane, but I can't remember who she writes for... Or somebody else more elevated than her, that they can get this in the right publication.

Jimmy Kimmel is now calling, and we might be able to get some TV appearances on this. The story: I'm setting up a project that is going to do huge things for the youth, and I have a secret group of men supporting me to do it.

Thoughts?

I do not expect anything, but I will always politely ask. I apologize if it is an inappropriate question, i'm just a man on a mission...

Best,
Tom DeLonge

Subject: Margaret Gerety

Dear all,

I am pleased to announce that Margaret Gerety, Director, JD Program, will be transitioning to a new role as Assistant Dean for Experiential Learning and Director of the Delaney Post-Graduate Residency Program. Margaret will be joining the experiential education team and will help us continue to grow and integrate this important part of the curriculum. Margaret will take on several key responsibilities at the Law Center, including developing and monitoring our simulation and competency-based courses and developing new cross-curricular and multi-disciplinary initiatives, in collaboration with the Office of JD Academic Services and Graduate Programs. She will also be working closely with the Office of Public Interest and Community Service to direct the new Delaney Post-Graduate Residency Program, made possible with the generous donation of Rep. John Delaney (D-Md.), L'88 and April McClain-Delaney, L'89. Building off of our successful Public Interest Partner Fellowship Program, Margaret will develop a supportive curriculum for our post-graduate fellows, providing them essential training and mentoring during their one-year fellowship.

Margaret's new role comes at a critical and exciting time as the Law Center, and law schools nationwide, seek to bridge the gap between analytic and other lawyering skills and effectively prepare our graduates for the practice of law. This is also the aim of many of the ABA's latest accreditation standards that will apply to the Law Center in the next academic year. Margaret will be working collaboratively with many of our offices and faculty, who have already developed exciting and important initiatives, to grow these types of opportunities for our students and help ensure the Law Center is not just meeting the ABA requirements, but emerging as a true leader in this field.

Since coming to the Law Center in 2011, Margaret has supported hundreds of students in academic advising sessions and has helped transform our first-year Week One program, including co-authoring the skills-heavy Anti-Corruption and International M&A problem with Professors Cedrone and McMahon. She has worked tirelessly to track ABA and Law Center rules, and is seen by many as the go-to person for policy-related questions. She is a dynamic problem-solver and creative thinker and we are excited to be able to apply her skill set to new initiatives.

Please congratulate Margaret and support her as she takes on this important new role!

Subject: Draft NH Expectations TPs

New Hampshire is an uphill climb for Hillary. Recent public polls show Bernie Sanders with as much as a 20 to 30 point lead. But Hillary pledged to fight for every vote in every state and that's exactly what she's going to do here in New Hampshire.

New Hampshire is Bernie's backyard and that gives him a big advantage. Nate Silver estimates neighbor state candidates enjoy a 15% lift in New Hampshire on average, and history back up his assessment. In the last 30 years, border state candidates have always won the New Hampshire primary.

Hillary has also faced some still headwinds from the Republicans and their super PACs. Before Hillary Clinton announced she would be running for President, Republicans started attacking her on television and radio. To date, GOP candidates and Super PACs have spent nearly $6 million in New Hampshire alone attacking Hillary.

Subject: UNH speaking

John,

Just wanted to re-plant the seed as we get close to students reporting to campus that I'd love to host HRC as a Carsey School of Public Policy speaker at the University of New Hampshire. The Durham campus is where the bulk of the students are (14,000 of them) but UNH also has space in Concord at the law school and on a Manchester campus.

Thanks. Hope things are going well. Dropped by WCEG and CAP a couple times this week. All going strong—good to see.

- Michael.

Subject: [big campaign] Tracking Update: McCain Town Hall in Denver, CO 10/02/08

Hello All,

Just got off the phone with our tracker, Ryan, on the ground in Denver. Below are the notes from our call.

Big Highlights

- Says "I've had hundreds of town hall meetings around this country for many, many years and I've got to say, thanks to you and to you and to you this is one of the more impactful and emotional town hall meetings I've ever had. Maybe it's because a women's town hall."
- Disabled vet asks him if he'll support Community Choice Act - he responds that he will continue to examine that legislation and im committed to fix the problems we have
- Says Obama doesnt have a clear understanding of military and how important men and women there are.
- Promises to "listen to her [Palin's] arguments" on ANWR (but says they disagree)
- Says americans are cynical now b/c we're not Big Govt people, he "know[s]" we "don't need another government-run bureaucracy"; soon after says it was a "failure of regulation" and oversight that led to the crisis
- Says he loves to blame the media and will blame them for a lot of other things - but not Fannie / Freddie
- Thanks CO for their water
- Intro speaker, Lisa Shall, says she was afraid to use the C-word, change - corrects herself in earnest: oh i forgot i was in a group of ladies -- it's not what you were thinking

Denver, CO: McCain Town Hall 10/02/08

(Disclaimer: The following are notes, not direct quotes. If you'd like a quotable transcript or video of any part below, please email us.)

Background details

- about 1500 ppl -- venue was packed, seats were all filled + people standing in aisles
 - all white women (a handful of hispanic women, no black); predominantly middle-aged
- Ticket-only event
- Tracker was told by a video crew member beforehand that event was pooled, but saw 22 press cameras and 5 still photographers inside the event
- Tracker didn't see any protesters, save 1 guy 'McCain and Bush are the same' sign [footage not available]
- Pre-event fanfare: state Rep. Amy Stevens led in prayer; unnamed female emcee
- Lisa Shall makes brief intro remarks
 - i was afraid to use "c-word" -- you know, change-- (corrects herself in earnest): oh i forgot i was in a group of ladies -- it's not what you were thinking
- Cindy NOT in attendance - McCain said she was at home w/ their daughter
- Banner behind mccain read "McCain and Palin Town Hall"

Speech Highlights

- thank you thank you!! ty Lisa for those kind words of intro and thank you for your success and for employing 500 americans, thank you Amy Caplas. I can assure you your reward will be in heaven, not earth.
- as a citizen of AZ, thank you for the water. Barry Goldwater used to say we have so little water the trees chase the dogs. most importantly thank you for your participation in essence of democracy, the town hall meeting. a chance for me to give you my ideas but also for me to hear from you. america is hurting tonight, today tmrw yesterday. ppl worried about jobs, homes. this is tough time in USA. ICYMI, gov. sarah palin going to have a lil debate tonight. i know she'd be pleased by that incredible response that she's inspired all over this country. her husband todd is a great father; a fisherman; he's a 4x world champ of Iron Dog.

- tonight palin's going to deliver news to me-first-country-2nd bigspending crowd in DC and this that change is coming change is coming and some of them aren't going to like it. i cant tell you how proud i am of her and the inspiration that she has provided to young women and men and every American. that you can take on these responsibilities and special interests. she went in front of her oil and gas board and said i'm gonna quit it. as gov, she cut taxes and gave taxpayers money back. she took on oil and gas and got pipeline to go down to lower 48.
- this freddie and fannie thing couldnt have happened without collusion and cooperation with members of congress who had cozy relationships. the greed and corruption on Wall st and washington.
- we'll keep your taxes low. obama's voted 94 times to raise taxes or keep them the same. he talks the talk, youve got to walk the walk. and he hasn't. obama's got a line about not raising taxes for 95% of americans. but he's voted 94 times to raise taxes for 100% of americans.
- i went back to DC when we were facing fiscal crisis. i understand why americans were cynical, they viewed this as bailout for WS. we suspended campaign, ads. i sat down with Congress, esp members of my part. they went thru the negotiations, legislation was improved and alst night we passed it thru Senate. many are still cynical and i understand b/c we're not big govt ppl. we want to be free.
- credit was drying up, ppl were having trouble getting loans. difficulties in Main St America. if we pass this legislation, which i believe we will in House, it's like a tourniquet, not a cure. itll stop the bleeding but then we have to set about fixing the situation. its gonna take a new broom to drain the swamp. ill fix it. time after time, ive taken on my own party and special interests and Dems, whether it be on climate change which i think is real, on spending, on out of control spending and i stood up against the failing strategy at the rt time. in bipartisan way on judges. with lieberman to put together 9/11 commission. i have a clear record of putting my country first and being bipartisan. obama doesnt.
- so ill promise that debate tonight, big choice in this election. we all know DC is on wrong track. if you want reform, this is debate b/t obama-biden team that talks about change and mccain palin team thats actually made it happen. they voted for higher taxes, we cut taxes. theyve proposed $800b spending and we'll veto pork and get spending under control.
- im sure you know what earmark porkbarrel spending is. you might not know what its been spent on, e.g. DNA of bears, museums and outrageous projects. obama sought $932M that never saw light of day. we'll cut 2nd highest corp tax rate. there are stark differences and stark choices. the american ppl will see what they are. i know how to keep this country safe. i know how to bring our troops home with honr and victory, not defeat.
- and id like to mention to you brief story of somethin that happened last Aug: Matthew Stanley story, mccain wears bracelet to make sure soldier KIA in Iraq didnt die in vain. i take that chrage very seriously. we have 2 sons in military. and had the great honor of serving this country. i believe i can inspire a gnereation to serve a cause greater than selfinterest. theres nothing nobler. ive put country first my whole life.

Quesiton and Answer

- 1Q) how important is youth vote and what are you 2 doing to GOTV?
 - MCCAIN: we have work to do. i have a daughter that just graduated from Columbia and btw if you know of a job for art history majors, pls let me know after this mtg. i have a daughter in high school. we need to use internet, young americans are using this as their sole source of news. check out our website. and then going to the venues, the late-nights, letterman, leno, and i did a MTV town hall a while ago. and young americans are concerned about their future and our work is to "hand them their future" and i want to do that
- [back-and-forth banter with voter, McCain says that purple hearts are most exclusive club in world]
- 2Q) i considered myself a swing voter until recently. i had been laid off with enron deal, ive lost 2 other jobs. i have a math and engineering backgrd, im a security guard. cant pay the bills, health care, immigrants are killing ppl and getting my free health care and i cant even afford to buy my monthly meds. what are you going to do to help ppl in my situation. im from adams county, 1 in 4 houses are foreclosing every day.
 - MCCAIN: thank you for being here. and your story unfortunately is being retold all over america today and im glad you told it here b/c you move me and all americans. 2 aspects to address: (1) job creation. we've got to start creating jobs in america. as i mentioned earlier, small businesses are the only job creator today in the last pd of time so we have to keep their taxes low. also, we need to create new opportunities for these small businesses. and that brings me back to health care. b/c they're having biggest problem paying for it. i want to give you and your fam $5k tax credit so you can go anywhere in america so you can find health care of your choice. if you have preexisting condition or cant get health care, i want fed govt and states to work together so we can assist you get the health ins. you need. i know we dont need another govt-run bureaucracy. if you like govt-run health care, go to canada or britain adn see if you like it. obama wants to force ppl and create govt-run bureaucracy.

- o MCCAIN: who's being hurt most by high price of gas? lowest-income americans. thats why the high cost of energy is so harmful to ppl of low income. we have to stop spending $700B to countries that dont like us very much. i want you to be able to afford your transportation. i want wind, tide solar and all those that will help us create jobs. if we build 45 nucl pwr plants by 2030, thatll create 45k jobs. thatll have direct relation to wind, tide, solar. obama has voted 42 times to raise or keep your taxes, ,has voted to raise taxes on those making as little as $42k / yr. im willing to have govt step in and help for health care. for those who cant get it, we'll have GAPS. we'll create jobs and keep taxes low on small businesses. all so we can get america back on track again. and that includes cleaning up washington so your tax dollars arent wasted. sorry to take so long to answer. our hearts and our thoughts are with you. you are what we have to do for america. you have jsut articulated it in the most compelling fashion. every time i meet someone like you, you renew my commitment.
- 3Q) i cant expres my gratitude for serving. as a vet, i see a lot of fellow vets coming back that end up in mental institutions and head injuries. Community Choice bill (senate bill #99). will you support it?
 - o MCCAIN: i will continue to examine that legislation and im committed to fix those problems that we have. on vet health care, theres a situation with iraqi and afgh. war vets, we have increased PTSD - its 1 of toughest wars weve ever fought in. we're able to take more from battlefield to care, but there are severe wounds. we need to expand VA in capability to care for wounded warriors. theres a problem w/ wounded vets. [baby cries] thank you for bringing her. too often theres not sufficient care and treatment for women vets. we have an ever larger # serving in military, but we've not expanded facilities to give them care they need - that mght be true in your case. for ordinary medical treatment needed for our vets, we need to give them a card. so they dont have to stand in line to stand in line. and next time they need care, just take that card and go to their doc. i want to thank you for serving and ive been very touched already for this chance to be with you all.
- 4Q) you and your oppo have differences on # of issues. which do you think most affects most americans?
 - o MCCAIN: i think its a fundamental disagreement on who is best to help econ whether it be lower taxes and less govt and affordable health care and obama has record of wanting govt to do jobs citizens should do, he creates bureacracies that are unnecessary, he doesnt have a clear understanding of military and how important men and women there are. this isnt right time to increase spending, he wants $800B more. we need to reduce, now we have thsi debt to china that we our govt let happen. it depends on what you think role of govt is. we need lower taxes, more opportunities incl. choice and opportunity in school system adn how we keep america safe. reform, peace and prosperity. and thats where we have starkest difference as youve seen in a long time. and taking on the special interests even when its your own party. obama has never taken on party leaders on any issue. ill take on all of them.
- 5Q) im a small business owner. weve had 2 yrs of hell. 9/10 times - what do we do about the media? the media is killing the car business, the real estate business. [cheers]
 - o MCCAIN: um. [pauses, crowd cheers] i do believe that there are many occasions when media exaggerates and perhaps not be as accurate as we'd like. [laughter] but let me say very seriously i think that 1 of the biggest causes of this problem wasnt so much the media- in fact theyre not responsible for fannie and freddie- i love to bash the media all the time - but the beginning of this crisis was such a corrupt system in DC, Freddie and fannie were out of control, their execs got exorbitant pay pkgs and they encouraged risky behavior, while members of Congress were complicit in not trying to rein in and even encourage this kind of behavior. and that was the major catalytic factor in bringing us here. that combo'd with greed in WS. not the media's fault, but failure of regulation, oversight, failure of Congress and watchdog orgs in reining it in. i proposed 2 yrs ago legislation that wouldve reined in Freddie and Fannie. id love to blame the media, ill blame them for a lot of other things, but not this.

- 6Q) [MCCAIN: i like your shirt] has palin convinced you that drilling in ANWR is one of best things to relieve energy crisis?
 - MCCAIN: now thats what happens when you think youre gonna get a softball question b/c youre wearing a mccain-palin tshirt. we've gotta drill offshore and drill now. we have a disagreement on that but i promise ill listen to her arguments. we'll drill offshore and drill now.
- 7Q) when are you gonna take the gloves off and just go at it? [crowd cheers]
 - MCCAIN: how about tue night? [crowd cheers] i, i , may i say i respect obama for what he's achieved, his success, the fact that he was able defeat a remarkable woman senator from NY, HRC is formidable candidate. what ill try to do is describe our stark differences and different paths we'll take nation on. thats respectful. he says he'll not raise taxes on 95% of ppl but has voted 94 times to. he said he would support the troops but no. health care.
- 8Q) youve said youll ruffle feathers in DC. specific examples?
 - MCCAIN: i have done that. when i saw that big money and soft money contributions were going to members of Congress and they would call up these special interests and say i need X number of $$s and btw your legislation is up in front of committee. and there are some in federal prison. i investigated a guy named abramoff, he was one of most pwrful lobbyists in DC and i knew he was GOP. i took on my party there, on campaign finance too. when i saw everything was gonna blow up on nomination of judges-- the most important duty-- i said we have to join together Dems and GOPs. obama had choice to do it, he didnt. he's never reached across on any significant issue that everyone else hasnt. in 2000, young ppl asked what we'll do about global warming. i travelled around and saw it. lieberman and i proposed a way that would try in effective way to alleviate this and that went against many of my party. not that i sought to challenge my party but it happened. and on iraq, i went there and saw it was being badly handled and sought a change. then they said my campaign was finished. i said then, ill say now, id rather lose a political campaign than a war. palin has done the same in AK. we've got to take them on, regardless of party, of who is making campaign contributions. i have a clear record of that. obama has never taken on his party leadership on any issue. we'll continue when palin and i are Pres and VP.
- 9Q) i just turned 18. given the economy, what policies will you support to make college more affordable?
 - MCCAIN: thats a vital ingredient to future of USA, an educated and welltrained work force, incl. science and engineering. it also means we have to retrain our workers. we have to make student loans more available. costs of colleges are going up. state institutions are more affordable we need to expand those. id like to not reburden you immediately after graduation with repayment of student loan. we should give you some time to repay it. lets give them some yrs of breathing space with no interest on that loan so when they move up the economic ladder, theyll be able to afford repayment. we need to understand the inflation on these costs are far exceeding normal inflation, we have to look into why. part of this crisis that we're in is that there are banks like Wachovia which is responsible for student loans are in trouble. you should pay back loans when youre capable of doing so.
- audience member- i want to give you this reason designed by niece of someone who raised flag at iwo jima to acknowledge that you and ppl like you, the integrity and honor youll bring to this country. youll be an extraordinary role model and we'll have confidence to put country in your hands.
 - ive had hundreds of town hall mtgs in this country. i have to say this is one of the most emotional, maybe b/c its a women's town hall mtg.
- 10Q) i recently left my career to be home with my kids. im 31. with Social Security benefits, where are they gonna be when my children need them and whatll you do to change that?

- MCCAIN: Straight talk: Social Security in its present form will not be there when you reach retirement. americans have to understand that. we have an obligation to you. we'll now have a system that even though you pay into it, they'll not have present benefits. it's disgraceful. Medicare. it cries out for-- if we have problem of burdening you with debt we have now, shouldnt we sit down together in bipartisan way? we're not doing it. we're putting it on younger generation of Americans. last time, reagan and tip o'neill fixed Social Security, and they did and it was tough medicine. and itll be tough medicine this time. i dont want to raise anyones taxes, but we have an obligaiton to you.
- MCCAIN: can we do 1 more with the baby there? i cant resist.
- 11Q) if obama raises taxes on ppl with more than $250k, wont they pass it on so we'll all have tax increase?
 - MCCAIN: yes. i dont think that at this time in history that we should raise anyones taxes. we shouldnt raise taxes. obama has had a multitude of differnet positions on this issue. americans should look at record--not rhetoric--but the record that obama has favored an increase in taxes and has repeatedly voted for it. as i mentioned, my friend and running mate will be in debate tonight soon. and i know she'll do very well and i want everyone cheering her on. id appreciate it if youd keep us in your thoughts and prayers in next 30 days.
 - CO will be key in deciding next POTUS. i need your vote and your help GOTVing and making sure we win in CO. i want to assure you again ive had the great honor and privilege of serving country for long, long time. we might disagree on a certain issue, but ill always do whats right for the country. i ty for your support. we can win.

Subject: Check-In / Foreign Policy Advice

Dear Mr. Podesta,

I hope this finds you well. As a reminder, this is Mae's friend - we met in New York last fall when you were in town for CGI and you were kind enough to dispense career advice. It's certainly been an eventful summer around the world, but I hope you're managing to get some rest while the President is back and forth to the Vineyard. In fact, I had dinner with Mae just last weekend and she was catching me up on the family's updates.

I wanted to reach out to you to follow up on something you suggested when we met. Although I've switched career tracks from investment banking to strategic communications, and am loving my new job with the Brunswick Group in New York, one of my core interests has always been foreign policy. When we met, you suggested it was important for me to continue to engage in this pursuit, even as an extracurricular activity. As such, I thought a terrific way for me to contribute would be to get involved with Secretary Clinton's campaign, although I realize it's far from official that she's running. You mentioned that it was very important for me to be involved in a capacity of this sort, particular as I'm out of the DC day-to-day orbit given that I live in New York City. She's a candidate I believe in, representing a party whose values I enthusiastically subscribe to, and after following her time in public life it's clear to me she has a strong and terrifically informed world view.

In terms of qualifications, although my career has been in the private sector, I am a founding member of the Brookings Institution next generation board (the Robert S. Brookings Society) of which I am currently a member, and am also a member of Chatham House (the Royal Institute of International Affairs). I sit on the youth board of Global Kids, a non-profit organization in New York which teaches inner city youth in New York City about the world and cultivates a new pack of foreign policy leaders among youth in New York. I have, in the past, been appointed a "Next America Fellow" by the Center for Strategic and International Studies, and did an internship at the Council on Foreign Relations while I was in college. I'd love to have the opportunity to contribute my spare time to Secretary Clinton's campaign, whether it be in the form of helping to write position papers or helping with her foreign policy effort in any way. As you had suggested this sort of engagement as a useful endeavor when we met, I was hoping you would kindly be able to put me in touch with the appropriate people. I realize there may be no formal structure just yet, but I'll await your guidance as to how best to proceed.

Many thanks, as always for your advice and guidance - I greatly appreciate it, as always. Wishing you and the family a terrific Labor Day and start to the fall.

All my best,

Mustafa

All of this looks great -- would only change the "what causes autism" phrase -- since several people in the advocacy community are wary of any rhetoric connected to causation. (One possibility: change "about what causes autism" to "about how the brains of children with autism develop") -- thanks,

Dear Colleagues,

I am happy to report that Sherman Cohn is this year's winner of the Georgetown Alumni Association's Faculty Recognition Award. We all know of Sherm's long term service to the Law Center and the University and his dedication to teaching and to his students. As Sue Bloch wrote in Sherm's biography for the Community of Scholars project,

"When asked to perform a task for alma mater, Sherm asks but two questions – "is the cause valuable? Can I help?" If the answer to those questions is yes, his answer is predictable. 'Yes, I will do it with 100 percent of my energy.'"

To that I would add, "With that answer, the results are preordained. Georgetown will be better off and all of us will be better colleagues and people because of Sherman's efforts, wisdom, kindness, and love."

Subject: Video: What the Recovery Act did

 Organizing for America

John --

Just over a year ago, thanks in part to your organizing, President Obama was able to sign the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act into law.

The Recovery Act wasn't a silver bullet, but it's very good policy. It cut taxes for 95% of working families to give them a leg up as they fight to get by. It invested in our nation's infrastructure and clean energy. It gave tax breaks to small businesses to help hire workers, and it helped out state and local governments -- including local police departments like the one in Englewood, Colorado, which was able to hire officers like Eddie B., whose story is below.

We've got a lot more work to do. But as many as 2.4 million Americans are working now who would otherwise be unemployed, and we're breaking the back of the recession.

We put together a video explaining where we were just one year ago, and what the Recovery Act has done for our country. Watch it here.

 Road to Recovery: Watch the video

In the three months prior to the Act, the nation lost 2.2 million jobs. The financial system was collapsing, and the "Great Recession" was being recognized for what it was -- the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression.

But since the Act's passage, Americans of all stripes have been able to get back to work. One example of what the Recovery Act made possible is the story of Eddie B., from Englewood, Colorado.

He graduated from police academy in 2009. Without the Recovery Act, he and his classmates would have had to wait for two years before being hired into the police department -- but stimulus funds led to him being hired immediately. In Eddie's words, "the President, with the Recovery Act, gave me the opportunity to serve my community and help the people I live with."

The success of the Recovery Act is composed of millions of stories like Eddie's -- of folks getting to work who wouldn't otherwise be in their jobs, families able to buy their first home because of the homeowner's tax credit, and much more.

Please check out the video we put together, and pass it along to 5 friends:

Hello most esteemed Professor Podesta,

I am so sorry to be reaching out so randomly, I am currently the Director of Communications & Special Events for Latino Leaders Magazine...we travel across the nation interviewing the top ranking & up coming influential Latinos. However, long before that I was a "newsie." I worked as a morning show newsroom producer and my first major election was the 2008 historic campaign. From that moment my love for politics made it's debut, I poured my heart and soul into the coverage...I campaigned in my hometown for Hillary. I have saved my 2008 Hillary poster from that time, because even then...I KNEW one day I would see her win. Since 2008, I have followed the Clinton trail, and with each career move I have tried to climb one step closer. I will move anywhere, I want to be part of this team. I have a tremendous amount of experience in communications and public relations, above that I have a very strong networking pool in the major Latino cities. I have build our magazine's presence in cities where Latinos dominated and in cities where Latinos are still the minority. I know how to gather people. It has been etched in my soul that should Hillary Rodham Clinton ever run again, I would be on her campaign team. Any position, big or small would be an honor.

I once read a quote, "Life does not give you what you want or what you love, life will only give you what you fight for or what you are willing to accept." It is with that fighting spirit, that I reach out to you now, for this is what I love and what I am willing to fight for. I hope this message reaches you...I would love to continue this conversation. Thank you deeply for you time.

sincerely,

Hi everyone,

You didn't think anything could keep me away from you for that long, did you? Thanks to the excellent care I've been receiving and the tremendous outpouring of love and support from all of you, I'm feeling strong and eager to get back into the swing of things. I'm looking forward to getting back to work very soon, and until then, just keep being your amazing selves and continue making a difference in people's lives!

Below find our initiative updates thanks to all of you who submitted them to Kate and Allie. Congrats to CGI team – lots of great Annual Meeting highlights!

This morning, President Clinton joined nearly 1000 guests who gathered on the grounds of the CPC to celebrate the opening of the Center's newest permanent installation, The Anne Frank Tree. A partnership between the Clinton Foundation and Sisterhood of Congregation B'nai Israel, and in conjunction with the Anne Frank Center USA's "Sapling Project," the new installation conveys the complex history of human rights in Arkansas and throughout the world. Guests at today's ceremony included more than 700 local school children, family of Holocaust survivors, members of the Quapaw, Japanese Americans who were interned during World War II, and relatives of the Little Rock Nine. The program included remarks by Stephanie Streett; Lexi Elenzweig, president of Federation of Temple Youth at Congregation B'nai Israel; Ronald Leopold, executive director of the Anne Frank House; and a keynote speech by President Clinton. Find out more and see photos of the installation at this link.

The 2015 CGI Annual Meeting concluded on Tuesday. Over four days, CGI members announced 123 new Commitments to Action, expected to impact more than 15 million lives around the world when fully funded and implemented.

Here are some press highlights from the Annual Meeting:

- The Chronicle of Philanthropy wrote extensively on the Annual Meeting, the unique commitment model, and how commitment-makers are positively impacting lives around the world.
- A New York Times article explained how, through a CGI commitment, the New York City public advocate's office is working to make sure nail salons are safe to both employees and patrons. Retweet the piece here.
- A piece for National Geographic discusses how a new partnership, "Blue Guardians," which was formed through a CGI commitment, is helping to "protect oceans and enable blue economies." CGI is one of the partners on the commitment. Share the piece here.
- Quartz wrote about a commitment by Google and Aclima to map air pollution in California.
- A piece in Fortune discussed a commitment from Gap Inc. to expand life skills training for female garment workers.
- Forbes explained how the NHL's Tampa Bay Lightning committed to develop the neighborhood surrounding their arena "into the first health- and wellness-focused neighborhood anywhere in the world." Retweet the article here.
- Vanity Fair explains how supermodel Natalia Vodianova's CGI commitment, a mobile app, serves as a "platform that brings the power of social and the digital world to charities to connect with people around the world."
- A coalition of CGI members and others committed to launch the Working Parent Support Coalition, a group of companies who are banding together to commit to improve their parental leave and support programs. Fortune explained how Nestle, one of the companies in the consortium, announced "is launching a study that will collect data on the number of employees who use its parental leave and protection policy and how many of those employees remain at Nestlé six, 12 and 18 months after returning from leave."
- The Huffington Post covered a CGI panel in which Code to Inspire founder and CEO Fereshteh Forough and MIT professor and biomedical engineer Sangeeta Bhatia discussed how their organization will teach girls in Afghanistan "how to code and program in a safe place, without fear, and prepare them for future employment opportunities." Panel participant Fereshteh Forough also penned a piece for Elite Daily on the topic.
- The Huffington Post also covered the CGI Closing Plenary, during which President Clinton, Alibaba chairman Jack Ma, and Theranos founder Elizabeth Holmes discussed how technology can increase economic development around the world.

- At the Annual Meeting. VICE CEO and co-founder Shane Smith moderated a “Sustainable Oceans” panel with actor Ted Danson, oceanographer Sylvia Earle, Executive Director of the Mesoamerican Reef Fund Maria José González, and President of the Republic of Seychelles, James Michel. Watch the online broadcast here .

In addition to the CCI Blue Guardians Commitment to Action announcement on Monday with DigitalGlobe, SIDS DOCK, the World Bank, Waitt Institute, The Nature Conservancy, and other partners, this week, Dymphna van der Lans gave remarks at the United Nations for over 15 Heads of State and Foreign Ministers at the ratification of SIDS DOCK as a new UN intergovernmental organization. President Clinton and CCI were recognized by several Prime Ministers for providing ongoing support to small island nations through the CCI Resilient Communities renewable energy program, and going forward with the Blue Guardians partnership as well.

On Tuesday, No Ceilings and the Center for Universal Education at Brookings hosted “Accelerating Progress in Girls’ Education,” an event celebrating the anniversary of the CHARGE initiative. The event featured remarks and panel discussions with former Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard, as well as No Ceilings director Terri McCullough. Thirteen new partners were announced, bringing the total to 50 partners committing $800 million over five years to support girls' secondary education. That morning, No Ceilings and CGI co-hosted “From Access to Assets: Advancing Women’s Financial Opportunity” to discuss how CGI members and industry leaders can identify strategies, mobilize communities, and replicate best practices to increase financial literacy and access for women. Also at CGI, No Ceilings released new data visualizations on noceilings.org that give an overview of the status of gender equality across key indicators on a global, regional, and local scale and allow viewers to compare them country by country.

CGEP’s supply chain enterprise in Haiti, Acceso Haiti’s purchasing activities started in the north last week with average farmer yields averaging more than 900 kg of peanuts per hectare, a 100% increase from typical yields. Season two activities are underway with 588 peanut, 410 sorghum and 262 castor seed farmers contracted. This brings our total farmers trained and contracted for the year to over 3000 farmers.

This week, CDI received an offer from Tractors and Farm Equipment Limited (TAFE), a global manufacturer of farm equipment ideal for smallholder operations, agreed to donate full sets of tractors and equipment to both CDI Malawi and CDI Tanzania. With this advanced mechanization, CDI is expanding its curriculum to present an entirely new set of opportunities to farmers who have now moved well beyond subsistence agriculture and are ready to become small-scale commercial farmers. To date, this equipment is not available in either country, making CDI the first and only organization to demonstrate it. CDI’s goal is to help establish an equipment leasing business that will cater to smallholder farmers in this advanced group.

On September 29th, CHMI's Community Health Transformation program in Houston, Texas convened their Leadership Council which is comprised of 35 executive level stakeholders to help advance goals within our local Blueprint for Action. Represented at the convening were delivery systems from both major hospitals and community clinics, appointed officials, community based organizations, law enforcement, academia, medical associations, financial institutions, and built environment in public health experts. As a next step, the Leadership Council, with ongoing support from CHMI and our funding partner GE, will concentrate efforts on addressing systems gaps within the healthcare, healthy eating and built environment sectors. In addition, this week Media Planet featured an op-ed published by CHMI Deputy Director James Kallusky about how access to sports is vital in addressing childhood obesity.

Have a great weekend.

Subject: Debate prep

Strikes me as odd for someone to shun debate prep. If it's like an interview, usually the folks that are the most serious take the time to prepare. And practice.

<http://www.politico.com/story/2015/10/bernie-sanders-democratic-debates-214538>

On Tuesday I had to give a 2 min speech to city council about a controversial land deal. I practiced out loud too many times to count, and had also had a few folks read my remarks to edit. Practice was worth it, I felt good about it after.

I'm rooting for Hillary. And I appreciate that she's practicing for us.

That's a relief to hear that you don't think it's moving. If that's the case, I completely agree she should keep her powder dry.

On the quote--and I agree she should have one ready for the event--I would maybe be more specific along the lines of "there have to be clear groundrules in these agreements that other countries must abide by the same labor standards and environmental protections that we do here so our middle class competes on a fair playing field overseas. I'm certain Americans can out compete anyone, but everyone needs to play by the same rules". Others can say that better than me.

If it does come up, I would love guidance from the comms folks. As a straw man, let me throw this out:

"The details really matter. I believe that there is a way to do this right. I want to make sure that trade legislation and trade deals look out for the middle class. That's why the details really matter. I'll have more to say on this in the days to come."

Then I would have us do the letter.

#GIVINGTUESDAY™

John--There are just a few hours left in Giving Tuesday, and we're still $10,000 short of our goal. Will you chip in? All Giving Tuesday donations are matched 100%!

Dear John,

Two weeks ago, the Supreme Court announced that it would take up what could be the biggest abortion case since Roe v. Wade--deciding whether to allow states to end access to abortion by simply shutting down every abortion clinic in the state.

With so much at stake and facing violent anti-abortion extremists like we saw this weekend in Colorado, we're going all-in by hiring a team of full-time organizers to focus exclusively on saving access to abortion at the Supreme Court.

This Giving Tuesday, we've set a goal of raising $50,000 to make sure we have the resources to keep fighting--and ALL Giving Tuesday donations will be matched by a generous NARAL Pro-Choice America donor. Will you chip in $15?

Click here to make a Giving Tuesday donation. All Giving Tuesday donations will be matched 100%.

With your help, here's what the team of NARAL Pro-Choice America organizers we're hiring will be able to do:

- Organize grassroots actions so the court and the media hear loud and clear from the 7 in 10 Americans who support safe and legal abortion.
- Educate the public so people understand what's at stake and how to get involved.
- Make sure the public understands what this is really all about: well-funded, organized opponents of abortion rights dedicated to ending legal abortion in our country.

The stakes couldn't be higher. If we lose, the constitutional right to choose won't be worth the paper it's written on. Will you help us reach our Giving Tuesday goal by chipping in $15?

Thank you for helping to make reproductive freedom real for all women.

HRC is not free until 11pm at the earliest.

If we have everything done and circualted to her, she would like to do a call tonight.

That means the 930pm call John/PIR is doing to touch base with the consultants will be a call to say that we are still working through content with her and what time should we do a call with them all tomorrow once we have content she is comfortable with rather than anything more until we have something to share.

If you all can be free for a call with her between 11pm - 12am, I am inclined to make sure we send her updated material by 1030pm and tell her we will get on with her at 1130pm.

Will that work for you all?

STATEMENT ON SHOOTING OF LAQUAN MCDONALD

The video released tonight is appalling and heartbreaking. I am praying for the family of Laquan McDonald and all the people of Chicago. They deserve justice and accountability. They deserve a city where everyone can live with dignity, free from fear. The mothers I met recently in Chicago are right: we cannot go on like this. No more parents should have to bury their children. No more communities should feel the pain of violence. And as Mayor Emanuel said, no one is above the law.

We have a lot of work to do to make our criminal justice system actually deliver justice, and to rebuild the trust that outrages like the death of this young man has ripped away. All over America, there are police officers honorably doing their duty, demonstrating how to protect the public without resorting to unnecessary force. We need to learn from those examples. The killing of Laquan McDonald, coming on the heels of so many other young African Americans taken too soon, should compel us to confront the reality that communities of color face every day. People are making their voices heard across the country and we have to listen to what they're saying. We have to hear their pain, their anger, and their call for change.

Tonight let there be peace and prayers. Tomorrow, let us press forward toward progress.

I meant to corner you last night on this. One of our dogged Treasury reporters got word that there is discussion within the Obama campaign that they will ask Bush (if Obama wins) to send some of the new president's nominees up for confirmation BEFORE inauguration day, so that some key posts could be confirmed before Obama even takes office. That would allow the government to hit the ground running in January. Dems would in exchange allow a vote on Colombia... they might also vote to confirm Kashkari (not sure why that would be important). There is also talk about Sheila Bair being given a prominent -- perhaps cabinet level -- post in the Obama administration.

The reporter is pursuing, but I would like some guidance. It could be a strong story about Obama economic crisis planning, and of course would be couched in all the "if he is elected" caveats.

Hillary has been on record in favor of an outcome that meets both these tests. But we should be willing to walk away from an outcome that falls short.

Or Robby is that a problem?

On Apr 16, 2015, at 9:01 PM, Dan Schwerin <dschwerin@hillaryclinton.com> wrote:

How does this look to everyone?

Hillary believes that any new trade measure has to pass two tests: First, does it put us in a position to protect American workers, raise wages and create more good jobs at home? Second, does it also strengthen our national security? We should be willing to walk away from any outcome that falls short of these tests. The goal is greater prosperity and security for American families, not trade for trade's sake.

Hillary will be watching closely to see the result of a number of pivotal questions yet to be decided, including what is being done to crack down on currency manipulation and unfair competition by state-owned enterprises; to improve labor rights and protect the environment, public health, and access to life-saving medicines; and to open new opportunities for our family farms and small businesses to export their products and services overseas. And, as Hillary warned in her book, Hard Choices, we shouldn't be giving special rights to corporations at the expense of workers and consumers. Getting these things right will go a long way toward ensuring that trade will be a net plus for everyday Americans.

Subject: Alice & Vivek Wedding Details

Attachments: Truckee to Sonoma-- Murthy:Chen Wedding.pdf

Hi John and Mary-

Here are the details for the Alice and Vivek's wedding reception on Saturday, which is (I think) the only part of the event you're planning on attending. PDF of driving directions from Truckee attached.

Let me know if you have any Qs or need additional info.

Thanks!

Milia

Saturday Ceremony and Reception on Saturday at 3-10pm

- Location: Cline Cellars, Great Lawn, 24737 Arnold Drive, Sonoma, CA 95476
- What to Wear: Your wedding clothes, of course! Cultural dress is welcome. We will be outdoors on the Great Lawn for the ceremony, cocktails, and dinner. Wear shoes that work on a lawn (like wedges or flats for gals). Bring a hat and sunglasses if you'd like. It will get cool toward the end of dinner, so the gals will likely want a sweater or shawl. Dancing and dessert will be indoors. By the end of the night, it will be cold leaving the dance area, so we recommend that everyone has a sweater or jacket!

2) POTUS pointed the way tonight toward an economy that works for everyone. Now we have to step up & deliver for middle class families. #SOTU

Hi everyone,

We wanted to share a tweet HRC sent out a little while ago and give some background on it.

In short, Barney Frank reached out to us yesterday and asked if she would engage on Dodd-Frank. He made the obvious arguments, that it would be good for her and good for him as he is spending a lot of time making the case for why the GOP chipping away at it is such a travesty. After thinking through the language with HRC, Jake, Dan, and Philippe, we tweeted the below.

Hillary Clinton (@HillaryClinton)

Attacking financial reform is risky and wrong. Better for Congress to focus on jobs and wages for middle class families.

A Field Guide to Who's Who in the Fledgling Clinton Campaign

Republicans are already clawing for spots in next year's presidential race, and so are the Democratic operatives who are meeting in Hillary Rodham Clinton's living room and her New York offices.

Mrs. Clinton, whose schedule has been unusually quiet of late, and her advisers are fielding résumés and talking to potential campaign aides (a mix of old and new). As the presumptive front-runner, Mrs. Clinton has her pick of talent. But several people with knowledge of the discussions say that some of the Democrats' most gifted political professionals have decided, for the moment, that the safest place to be is on the sidelines.

After all, in 2008, things didn't end so well for Mrs. Clinton's first campaign manager or her first chief strategist.

So here's an informal and wildly incomplete guide to the Clinton 2016 campaign as it slowly, quietly and cautiously begins to take shape (No, Mitt Romney has not called):

People to impress: Cheryl Mills, Huma Abedin and Evelyn S. Lieberman.

Doesn't tolerate drama: John Podesta.

Will run things: Robby Mook (and his mafia).

Dark horse: Stephanie Schriock of Emily's List.

Spin meisters: Brian Fallon or Jennifer Palmieri (a Podesta pick)

Money man: Dennis Cheng.

Policy wonk: Jake Sullivan.

10/18/2016

Message makers: Wendy Clark, the Coca-Cola marketing whiz, and Roy Spence, the advertising guru based in Austin, Tex. (“Don’t Mess with Texas,” or Hillary.)

The X-Factor: Chelsea.

I would propose going through the materials in the following order with the following time allocations (I will try to be pretty strict about enforcing these). I don't want to suggest that some matters are more important than others, but also think that realistically we need to devote time to those subjects that will benefit the most from group input and where I suspect the transition leadership will be most focused on our work:

- Budget (75 minutes)
- Stimulus (75 minutes)
- Financial (75 minutes)
- International (20 minutes)
- Misc (Jon will just cover the pieces that fit with the financial crisis) (20 minutes)

In addition, Karen has been working on some materials about how the actual transition would work, which I don't think she'll be ready to present in detail, but could I'm sure benefit from your thoughts.

Jon has arranged for people to show PP slides, but it would be helpful if you could bring hard copies for everyone as well.

Finally, John Podesta may join us for part or all of the session.

Subject: [big campaign] New Huff Post from Creamer-Gut Check Time for Republicans on Immigration Reform

Gut Check Time for GOP on Immigration

There is a quiet battle underway within the Republican Party that may soon break out into the open – and it will heavily impact whether the GOP can continue as a national political party in the decades ahead.

The conflict is over how the Party will position itself with respect to the question of immigration reform – and just as importantly – the fastest-growing demographic group in country: Hispanic Americans.

President Obama has made it clear that he is intent on fixing the broken immigration system by passing immigration reform. He would do it with a package that combines smart and effective border enforcement with a crackdown on illegal hiring and unfair labor practices, and by modernizing the legal immigration system and requiring those who are undocumented to register with the government, pass background checks, study English, pay taxes, and get in line to work towards citizenship.

That would make sure that those who are here, are in the system legally; that all workers and employers are paying their fair share of taxes; and that those immigrants who come in the future do so legally.

But, more than with most any other issue, passing immigration reform requires bipartisan support – both as a question of legislative math and politics.

Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY) has been deputized by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) – himself a strong advocate of reform – to be point man on this issue for the Democratic Majority. Republican Senator Lindsey Graham (R-SC) has worked with Schumer for months to hammer out the specifics of a bi-partisan bill.

Most of the substantive issues appear to be close to resolution. The major outstanding problem is entirely political: will other Republicans be willing to join Graham and provide support for a truly bi-partisan effort?

That's where the cleavage within the GOP will become so important.

For many Latino voters, and their friends and families, immigration reform is more than a simple matter of policy. It's an issue that involves the future of their families and their communities. That is particularly the case because enforcement actions continue every day. Almost 400,000 immigrants were deported last year. Those deportations touch legal immigrant families – voters – throughout America, and they increase the pressure building within the Latino community for action.

On March 21st, a huge national march will take place on the Mall to express the frustration of the immigrant community that even as deportations continue, there has been little action on immigration reform.

Immigration reform is a politically realigning issue for Latinos the same way civil rights was for African Americans.

One segment of the Republican Party completely understands that critical political fact. They understand that to compete successfully in the future -- on a national scale – they must be able to contest for a sizeable segment of the Hispanic vote. Hispanics, after all, are by far the fastest growing demographic group in America. According to the Census Bureau, nearly one in six U.S. residents – or 46.9 million people, are Hispanic – a percentage that continues to grow.

If Republicans can't compete for Hispanic votes, they will become politically irrelevant in much of the U.S. over the next several decades. Many Republicans leaders get it.

But there is another group of Republicans who want to use immigration as wedge issue to win short-term political advantage among anxious voters who think of Latinos as threats to their culture, their tax dollars, and their jobs. As a practical matter, this group is willing to sacrifice long term political viability for short term political gain. And this second group has not been deterred by the fact that in recent elections hard core immigrant bashers have not fared well – even in the short term.

These two factions do not fall neatly along traditional “conservative” and “moderate” lines. Former President Bush – having seen firsthand the importance of the Latino vote in Texas – strongly favored immigration reform. Supporters run the gamut from conservatives like Sam Brownback (R-KS) to moderates like Dick Lugar (R-IN). On the other side are followers of former Congressman and presidential candidate Tom Tancredo, with a tradition of anti-immigrant bashing that knows no bounds.

Immigration is one of the few issues that could garner truly bipartisan support in the current Congress. The social and economic forces involved in this issue do not reflect the other battles that have defined the last year and a half of partisan combat. Business and organized labor are united in their desire to fix the broken immigration system.

The President met yesterday with a group of grassroots immigrant leaders, and reiterated that he would use all means at his disposal to move the immigration agenda this year. Later on Thursday he delivered the same message to Senators Graham and Schumer – both of whom reiterated their commitment to move a bi-partisan bill.

But Senator Graham needs to be able to count on the support of other members of the Republican caucus to make a truly bipartisan drive for passage.

The question facing Republicans in the next several weeks is simple: will the forces who favor immigration reform have the political courage to stand up for the long-term interests of their Party (and the country), or will they be cowed into silence by the immigrant bashers?

The bell on the immigration debate is about to go off. The Republican Party faces a critical, and potentially historic, decision. As a progressive Democrat, I would like nothing better than to see the Republican Party marginalized and unable to compete effectively for even one Latino vote. But the interests of the country require that the immigrant-friendly forces in the Republican Party stand up straight and join with Democrats to address this critical American problem.

Robert Creamer is a long-time political organizer and strategist, and author of the recent book: Stand Up Straight: How Progressives Can Win, available on Amazon.com.

Subject: Video: Get to know Paul Ryan

John --

This morning, Mitt Romney and Paul Ryan stood on a platform in Norfolk, Virginia, and introduced themselves to the country as "America's Comeback Team."

"Go Back Team" would be more appropriate -- because a Romney-Ryan administration is the definition of a fast track back to the failed, top-down economic policies of the past.

In Ryan, Romney has selected a running mate best known for designing the extreme GOP budget that would end Medicare as we know it, and -- just like Romney's plan -- actually raise taxes on middle-class Americans to pay for an additional $250,000 tax break for millionaires and billionaires. As a leader of the House Republicans and a Tea Party favorite, Congressman Ryan has led the relentless, intensely ideological battle for these kinds of budget-busting policies that punish seniors and the middle class.

Today, Romney doubled down on those policies.

But most Americans don't know Paul Ryan. In the coming days, the other side will spend a lot of time trying to define Romney's choice and what it says about his candidacy -- so we put together a brand-new website on Romney-Ryan with everything you need to know.

Check it out, watch the video, and then show your support for President Obama and Vice President Biden by sharing it with friends and family.

If their records are any indication of how they'd govern, it's not looking good (unless you're a right-wing conservative in the top 5 percent of income-earners and NOT a woman or a worker counting on Medicare in your future).

This isn't a matter of opinion:

-- As an architect of the extreme GOP budget, Ryan will be Romney's biggest advocate for his plan to give more tax breaks to millionaires, paid for by $2,000 in higher taxes on middle-class families with kids.

-- The Ryan plan, which Romney said is "an excellent piece of work, and very much needed," calls for deep cuts in education -- from college scholarships to Head Start -- critical scientific research, and clean energy investments, all to help pay for those tax cuts.

-- Ryan authored the original plan to convert Medicare into a voucher program, costing seniors an additional $6,000 or more each year.

-- Ryan talks tough on balancing the budget, but his own plan would fail to do that for a generation. The burden of balancing any Ryan budget falls squarely on the backs of seniors and middle-class families -- while no one at the top is asked to pay even a dollar more.

-- Both Romney and Ryan are severely conservative, threatening to take us backward on women's issues and civil rights. Ryan cosponsored a bill that would ban common forms of birth control, in vitro fertilization, and abortions even in cases of rape or incest. He voted against the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act, voted against the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," and sponsored a constitutional amendment to ban marriage equality.

On so many issues, Paul Ryan, like Mitt Romney, has taken extreme positions that are out of touch with the values most Americans share.

It's our job, especially in these first few days and weeks, to make sure voters get the facts on his record, and a clear picture as to what a Romney-Ryan administration would look like for regular people, when the slogans fade away and the real policy decisions they'd face as president and vice president are on the table.

MSNBC: Ann Kirkpatrick releases ad in response to GOP attack

John -- today we're going on offense for Ann.

The purpose of our new ad is two-fold:

1. Spread Ann's vision of a bright future for Arizona to voters.
2. Fight back against Boehner's sexist attack.

Time is of the essence. With only 56 days until the election, it's absolutely critical that Arizona voters hear Ann's message. If we can't get out the facts, Boehner's lies will take hold.

So John, watch Ann's first ad and pitch in $5 to help her keeping fighting for Arizona.

Subject: Help a veteran go to DC to get Gitmo closed!

Dear John,

This week, dozens of veterans from around the country – including me – will descend on Capitol Hill, meeting with Congressmen and Senators to push Congress to follow President Obama's lead and close the prison at Guantanamo Bay, that has become a blight on America's reputation and has endangered our troops and security. We need your help!

Every dollar helps, and we're pinching every penny to make this trip as inexpensive as possible. But, your money will go a long way to helping pay for a veteran's flight to DC, for his or her accommodations at a hotel, and a relatively small amount to buy meals.

Our veterans will be backed up by thousands of veterans, and you, who have all signed our petitions and letters calling for the facility to be closed. Every day the prison remains open is another day that al Qaeda has an effective recruiting tool, and another day we're creating more enemies who will target our troops and America.

It's far past time that we transfer detainees to one of our prisons that can handle them, and have many of them face trial and permanent, legal imprisonment (if they are not sentenced to death). We can both follow the rule of law and international human rights, while also being tough on terrorists. The two are not mutually exclusive.

We can't make this trip work without you. So, please, take a moment and donate whatever you can afford right now. Again, every little bit helps!

Thanks for your support.

This is a smart, tough and solid progressive speech and certainly not corporatist, but you may disagree in which case I will remember that you told me first. When raising wages for workers, defending the right to organize, providing fair and equal treatment for women in the workplace, raising taxes on the wealthy and corporate schemers and sending Wall Street crooks to jail is viewed as protecting the status quo, I have to say it's not a status quo I recognize.

URGENT: LESS THAN 10 DAYS to stop GOP from ELIMINATING this important campaign finance law

John --

Republicans in Congress are DEAD SET on dismantling the few campaign finance laws we have left.

What's going on?

GOP Leader Mitch McConnell just revealed plans to "insert a provision into a must-pass government funding bill that would vastly expand the amount of cash that political parties could spend on candidates."^[1]

What would this provision do?

McConnell's Republicans want to ELIMINATE caps on the amount of money that political parties can spend in coordination with their candidates.

If they succeed, billionaires like the Koch Brothers could exercise even more influence over our elected officials.

How is this different than past attempts to gut our campaign finance laws?

Congress is running up against a December 11th deadline to stop a government shutdown.

McConnell wants to tuck this provision into the spending bill that would prevent a shutdown. Republicans want to back President Obama and Democrats into a corner to funnel even more money into politics.

This is an all-hands-on-deck moment.

We need to shine a light on what the GOP is doing to show we won't stand by and let them muscle this bill through Congress.

We're trying to reach 100,000 signers pressuring Mitch McConnell to drop his bid to dismantle our campaign finance laws ANY further.

Tamera, I've tried to get this

(below) to Robbie but I'm not sure he's seen it. Is it possible for you to get this to him or someone else in Brooklyn dealing with the convention? It might be useful. Thanks/love. Mark

I've lived through many national conventions and have found that it's critical that all delegates, especially those representing losing candidates, emerge from the convention feeling that they have won something, achieved something tangible. I think this is terribly important especially with people like Bernie's sometimes self-righteous ideologues. We want them to go home happy and enthusiastic in working their asses off for Hillary.

Hillary has already smoothly pivoted to incorporate some important elements of Bernie's ideas and rhetoric into her own message. Thus I don't think the 2016 Platform is a sufficiently tangible prize for the Bernie wing of the convention. I think they have to be given something that they can claim as a singular success. I think I know something that would painlessly work.

As you probably know I was the guy who drafted the "super delegate" provisions of the party's delegate selection rules. It was an outgrowth of the McGovern 1972 convention where very few of our elected officials were delegates. After the debacle, the "regulars," the Party establishment, wanted a big chunk of guaranteed representation at future conventions (as much as 25%) The liberal wing was firmly opposed to this, saying it was undemocratic. Through the Mikulski, Winograd and Hunt Commissions I worked out a compromise giving ex-officio delegate status to Democratic members of the House and Senate, Democratic Governors and big- city Mayors. That would have totaled about 10% of the convention, what I thought was a reasonable compromise.

The liberals were ok with it but the Democratic State Chairmen's Association wanted to add party officials to this new class of ex-officio delegates.

When the new delegate selection rules were voted on by the DNC, it is not shocking that the DNC ADDED THEMSELVES as automatic delegates. That drove the percentage up to over 15%. It has crept up even a bit higher now.

(wouldn't the republicans like to have that now!)

So here's my idea. Bernie and his people have been bitching about super delegates and the huge percentage that have come out for Hillary. Since the original idea was to bring our elected officials to the convention ex-officio

(because of the offices and the constituencies they represent), why not throw Bernie a bone and reduce the super delegates in the future to the original draft of members of the House and Senate, governors and big city mayors, eliminating the DNC members who are not State chairs or vice-Chairs. (Frankly, DNC members don't really represent constituencies anyway. I should know. I served on the DNC first as Executive Director and then as an elected member for 10 years.)

So if we "give" Bernie this in the Convention's rules committee, his people will think they've "won" something from the Party Establishment. And it functionally doesn't make any difference anyway. They win. We don't lose. Everyone is happy.

Anyway, I don't know if Robbie is focusing on the convention at this point but the Bernie people have a lot of passion and we should try to keep them marginally on board. Just saying...

Thanks. Mark

Subject: Unconstitutional

Dear John,

"Don't Ask, Don't Tell" is wrong for our national security and inconsistent with the moral foundation upon which this country was founded. For months we've worked together to repeal it. Last month, we experienced an important victory. A federal court judge in California declared the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy unconstitutional, saying it has had a "direct and deleterious effect" on our military.

I couldn't agree more.

That's why I teamed up with Senator Mark Udall of Colorado to write a letter to the Department of Justice urging Attorney General Holder not to appeal this ruling in court.

Now I need you to stand with us and call on Attorney General Holder not to appeal this ruling. Because of the work we've done together over the past year and a half, we are closer than ever to repealing this dangerous policy. This ruling only gets us closer and it's imperative that it stand.

Click here to help repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." Senator Udall and I are urging the Department of Justice to let the court ruling stand, and we need your support.

"Don't Ask, Don't Tell" is an immoral policy that hurts our military readiness. Since DADT began in 1993, we've lost more than 13,000 men and women to this policy. That's 13,000 too many. We must not lose one more brave gay or lesbian service member to this destructive policy. It is unconstitutional and the federal court ruling should stand.

Click here to help repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." Senator Udall and I are urging the Department of Justice to let the court ruling stand, and we need your support.

Stand with us and urge Attorney General Holder not to appeal this important ruling. While Congress will still need to repeal DADT, this is an extremely important step forward in affirming the civil rights of gays and lesbians. Our government should not be challenging it.

Thanks for your ongoing support on this issue.

Sincerely,

Kirsten Gillibrand

Speakers should dial in at 10:30 am for 11 am press call. Speakers will be in separate private conference to prepare for call until 11.

Speaker(s) will dial 866-866-2244 or 404-260-1415 and when prompted enter code: 4145721 followed by the # sign

John and Elizabeth Edwards To Join Anti Iraq War Groups to Launch Multimillion Dollar Iraq/Recession Campaign

Teleconference Monday at 11 a.m.
Dial In: (866) 866-1333; Pass Code: IRAQ *****

WASHINGTON – Former U.S. Senator and presidential candidate John Edwards and his wife Elizabeth Edwards will join top anti-Iraq war leaders today to announce the launch of a new nationwide, multimillion dollar campaign aimed at shining a light on the cost of war in Iraq. The new Iraq/Recession Campaign will be launched with a teleconference today at 11am.

As economic concerns weigh heavily on the minds of Americans, opposition to President Bush's reckless war in Iraq continues to grow. The massive cost of the war in Iraq – hurtling toward one trillion dollars – has increased demand for a strategy to bring U.S. troops home. The Iraq/Recession Campaign will highlight the majority of Americans who want to see leadership on investing in critical priorities at home and establishing real security throughout the world.

WHO: John Edwards, former U.S. Senator and presidential candidate and Elizabeth Edwards
John Podesta, President and CEO, Center for American Progress

Tina,

Can we get together?

I've always loved your reporting, but this was really poorly done today.

<http://www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/key-hollywood-donor-backs-joe-826016>

There is one outlier poll that has Hillary trailing in Iowa. Every other poll has her with a fairly decent lead. Your indication that Bernie leads her there is misleading. Would have also been nice for you to mention the CNN poll this week that has her increasing her lead nationally.

<http://www.publicpolicypolling.com/main/2015/09/trump-still-leads-iowa-clinton-in-good-shape.html>

And Jay Sures is a “a major force on the Hollywood political-fundraising scene”?? Since when? To characterize his support of Joe Biden as some groundbreaking shift is a bit dramatic. How much money has he actually raised in the past? I’ve been around the Clintons for 15 years, and I’ve never seen Jay’s name as a co-host for any fundraiser for either President Clinton or Secretary Clinton. Did he bundle for her in ’08?

Finally – George Clooney has already said he’d do whatever it takes to get Hillary elected in 2016.

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-3075595/George-Clooney-says-happy-Hillary-Clinton-president.html>

As far as fundraising goes – I’ve had one of my best weeks yet. Have felt absolutely no indication anything was slowing down. People loved her on Jimmy Fallon, felt like the e-mail non-story was behind us, and were ecstatic about our prospects after seeing the Republican debate.

My two cents – but let’s get together and discuss.

An Update on Georgetown's Ebola Preparedness

Office of the President
Georgetown University

November 3, 2014

To the Faculty, Students and Staff of Georgetown University

Dear Members of the Georgetown Community:

I am writing to provide you with an update on the University's response and planning related to the global Ebola crisis and to reiterate the importance of cooperation by all members of our University community. Georgetown officials, in consultation with the D.C. Department of Health and health care professionals, have been working to ensure preparedness across all of our campuses. As part of our ongoing emergency preparedness protocols, we have been engaged in a multi-partner effort to ensure that we are ready in the unlikely event of a case of Ebola on our campus or in our area.

We are a community of great complexities—our campuses in Washington, D.C. span the city, we have a campus on the other side of the world, our members live and travel across the globe in pursuit of their scholarship and research, we receive visitors from all over the world, we share a footprint with a hospital, and we share a home in Washington with many other global institutions. As such, we have been working closely with strategic partners in our preparedness efforts, including MedStar Health, which operates MedStar Georgetown University Hospital, and the D.C. Department of Health, to ensure that we have a coordinated response plan with clear roles and responsibilities.

We are grateful to be guided in this work by our health professionals here at Georgetown, including Dr. James C. Welsh, who heads our Student Health Services, and who has led our previous efforts in response to Norovirus, H1N1 and other infectious diseases. We are also fortunate to have the consultation of Dr. Jesse Goodman, who served as Chief Scientist for the FDA from 2009-2014, where he led its public health preparedness and medical countermeasures efforts, including the response to the 2009 H1N1 pandemic, and who now serves on our Georgetown faculty.

Last week, a broad group of our University leadership, representing a cross-section of operational and academic areas, participated in a tabletop exercise focused on the various components of our response should there be an Ebola case at or near Georgetown University. MedStar Health and the D.C. Department of Health joined in the exercise, which was facilitated by an expert who helped us to identify areas for further development and preparation. The tabletop exercise generated a number of good ideas to further enhance our preparedness, and implementation of these recommendations is already underway.

We have also been coordinating with fellow members of the Consortium of Universities in the District of Columbia to share insights and best practices, especially as they relate to our shared identities as residential campuses, and to collaborate on our preparedness efforts.

We ask for the participation of our entire community in ensuring that we are all educated and prepared in the event of a case of Ebola at or near Georgetown University. As we have previously announced, Georgetown, in line with travel advisories from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, has issued a temporary moratorium on all University-sponsored and University-related travel for students, faculty, and staff to Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone. We are also requiring students, faculty and staff to contact Joseph Yohe, Associate Vice President for Risk Management at 202-687-6622 or joseph.yohe@georgetown.edu, before coming/returning to campus, if they:

- plan to travel to these countries for personal reasons;
- have recently traveled to these countries;
- are considering bringing visitors to campus who have recently been in these countries; or
- have had direct exposure to a person known to have an Ebola infection.

More information on these policies can be found on our Office of Global Services website.

I encourage you to educate yourselves by visiting the CDC's website on the Ebola outbreak. We will continue to keep you apprised of our ongoing preparedness efforts here at Georgetown.

Sincerely,

John J. DeGioia

The story about her staff is no doubt a problem. But if I was a reporter covering this and she in any way didn't lean right in on an issue she has been so vocal about, I would actually latch onto that. I'll defer to comms team but I think this issue has to be in the speech and she has to be as full-throated in talking about it, whether it's the first or third thing she talks about. So we're going to hit it hard anywhere it lands in the speech.

We're going to heave to deal with the facts in the story but we should just make sure that before we start diluting a strong position she has we decide whether staying strong isn't a better strategy.

Hello all. Agree with many of Mandy's comments - in partic staring with equal pay, having an women's economic issue soundbite, and making GOP section edgier.

On Sun, Mar 1, 2015 at 3:48 PM, Mandy Grunwald <gruncom@aol.com> wrote:

Dan,

A few notes on the politics.

1. I'd connect the opening accomplishments a little more directly to Stephanie Schriock. This draft tilts a little too far to Ellen Malcolm and it's important to give Stephanie and Ellen at least equal billing. (For example, I wouldn't mention Ellen on page 8 right after you ask whether they want to see a woman president. That may be the soundbite of the day.)

2. I think you need a little more thought on the women you name. (Mikulski, Gillibrand, Warren, Boxer, Pelosi, Raimondo, Murray). Thinking about our New Hampshire politics, you ought to mention Governor Maggie Hassan -- who was the only female governor in the country til Raimondo was elected and Hassan just got reelected (also focusing on the economy). You also ought to mention Jeanne Shaheen -- who was just about the only Dem to win a tough Senate race last year (also focusing on the economy). In fact, on the Senate side, I would mention all the current female Senators -- you're only going to annoy Feinstein or Klobuchar or McCaskill et al if you pick out just a handful. You can do a list after you highlight a few.)

3. On Mikulski, instead of just noting her long ago election and the pantsuit stuff, I'd mention that she was the first woman to chair the Appropriations Committee and is now its ranking member. Maybe ditto Patty Murray as chair of the budget committee.

4. On "the year of the woman in 1992", I believe the number of women went from 2 to 5. I would note that it was great to almost triple the number of women in the senate but hard to imagine that electing a senate with 95 men and 5 women was called the year of the woman. (It's better now...but still.....)

On the economic message...

1. I'm queasy about leading with equal pay, given last week's stories about HRC staff. It also doesn't allow you to frame a broader argument about families and small businesses as the heart of our economy/future. I'd move equal pay to later in the economic section.

2. The section on workforce participation seems off to me also. Seems like our main solution is to have more women work.

3. Should we make the GOP line even edgier? Something like: "And, by the way, isn't it nice to see a few Republicans starting to dip their toes into the debate about how to create opportunities for working families? That means our arguments are resonating. So come on in, fellas, the waters fine. But you better offer something more than the same old tired trickle down economics. Families don't need any more of that.

4. Finally, I feel like we need a soundbite about women's issues are economic issues; economic issues are women's issues. Something like that. Right now, the most likely soundbite is the female president line. That's probably what the audience wants, but is that what we want? I'd love to have a strong economic soundbite too.

many thanks

Mandy

NEA President: Don't forget our children, the most vulnerable in debt deal
Negotiations on federal debt ceiling and deficit reduction stall in Washington

WASHINGTON— House Speaker John Boehner called off further talks on raising the debt ceiling and deficit reduction yesterday, writing to fellow Republicans that he and President Barack Obama “couldn't connect...because of different visions for our country.”

“To the 3.2 million members of the National Education Association and the students and families they serve, there are two very different visions playing out in this fiscal debate: one that favors those with great wealth and one that harms those without,” said NEA President Dennis Van Roekel.

“While there are many different ideas about how to bring America's fiscal house in order, no one disputes that our nation's children did nothing to cause our economic crisis,” said Van Roekel. “The facts are simple: one in three children in this country rely upon Medicaid as their sole source of healthcare. It would be unconscionable for lawmakers to even contemplate punishing children with a budget deal that asks nothing of billionaires or corporations that paid no taxes last year. The students we serve come to school every day more worried, more at risk, and more liable to fall through the cracks. To rob children of their futures by putting their very health at risk would be reckless and immoral.”

As of 2010, 68 million people are covered by Medicaid, including one third of America's children. Children who lack access to health care services are less likely to come to school healthy and ready to learn and to succeed academically.

"Our members want to remind negotiators that the measure of a country's greatness is in how it treats its children, its seniors, and its most vulnerable. Any budget plan must leave life-preserving programs such as Medicare and Medicaid untouched," said Van Roekel.

“It's time to put the families on Main Street ahead of the special interests of Wall Street and make billionaires and big corporations pay their fair share,” said Van Roekel. “Legislators need to stop looking to children, working families, and seniors to sacrifice without asking anything in return from the wealthiest, who continue to get wealthier due to continued tax loopholes and cuts.”

Dear John,

I hope this email finds you well. I am glad to report that we are witnessing a striking development in response to climate change: investors are increasingly tackling climate change-related risks.

This movement is due to:

- A growing awareness of the economic risks presented by climate change (e.g. exposure to increased taxation and stranded assets),
- The emergence of innovative investment solutions aimed at reducing these risks,
- The establishment of knowledge transfer organizations to exchange best practices, such as the Portfolio Decarbonization Coalition (PDC).
 - o The PDC is supported by the United Nations and by its Environment Program (UNEP),
 - o PDC signatories have recently made a commitment to decarbonize $45 billion of their portfolios,
 - o This initiative sends a strong message to the investor community: reducing climate change related risk is feasible and is being undertaken on a large scale.

The policy makers are very interested into these initiatives:

The Chief Economist of People's Bank of China asked me to present our work at his own conference three weeks ago,

France is accelerating this process by passing a law that makes the carbon footprint mandatory for all asset owners,

President Francois Hollande referred to our project in his recent speech (after Ban Ki-moon and Dr Kim).

I am attaching a couple of documents for your review. Please be advised, I will be in Washington this Friday (July 24) and will be glad to catch-up with you if it works well with your schedule. Alternatively, I should return back to the US mid-August.

Kind regards,

Subject: [big campaign] McCain On "Fundamentals": A Primer
Attachments: McCain Econ Fundamentals Primer 09-16-08.doc

Yesterday morning, in the midst of a financial crisis, McCain insisted once again that the "fundamentals of our economy are strong." Later that day, he tried to spin it by saying that "American workers" are the fundamentals of the economy, and those fundamentals are strong but "at risk."

McCain has been asserting the "fundamentals" are strong since at least December 2007. In nearly a dozen examples--all caught on tape--he never once suggests this newly-adopted definition of "fundamentals":

MCCAIN FLIPS ON "FUNDAMENTALS" FOLLOWING "BLACK SUNDAY"

In Midst Of Lehman Bailout, McCain Insists "The Fundamentals Of Our Economy Are Strong"
JOHN MCCAIN: Wall Street. And it is -- people are frightened by these events. Our economy, I think, still, the fundamentals of our economy are strong. But these are very, very difficult time. And I promise you, we will never put America in this position again. We will clean up Wall Street.

McCain Flops Following Lehman Bailout: "The Fundamentals Of Our Economy Are At Risk"
JOHN MCCAIN: [...] I know Americans are hurting now and the fundamentals of our economy are at risk. They are at risk. The great workers, the great innovators—because of the greed of Wall Street and the greed that and the abuse that takes place, which has put our very economy at risk. Our economy is at risk today. Have no doubt how serious this problem is and we Americans will get through it, but we've got to reform. We've got to reform the way that government does business and I want to promise you that my whole life I have reached across the aisle and I've worked with democrats and I know how to do that and we must do that because we've got to fix this economy, which the fundamentals of are at great risk right now and those are the American workers. These are the American workers who deserve far better than what they've gotten recently and I want to promise you that its my highest priority.

Subject: Re: Some thoughts on using Zoom

I was generally satisfied with my Zoom experience, although I found teaching 2 hours on Zoom substantially more exhausting than 2 hours in the classroom. Not sure why. There might have simple been too many information feeds to manage for my overtaxed brain.

I'd echo that Zoom does not interface with PowerPoint nearly as well as other platforms I've used. You cannot use presenter notes or see the participants.

A practical matter if you plan on calling on students: ask students to use their first and last names as their Zoom IDs. I found it very hard to know which "Nick" was which on the second day of class, much less what to call "JonLi000".

Another practical matter: if you're using video, be aware that everyone will see what is behind you in your house. I found myself wishing I had a screen to put up just so the background wouldn't be distracting. (On the other hand, it was a pleasure to teach in fleece pants and slippers.) And be aware that whatever is in the background of students may also be distracting.

Finally, I wish there were a feature that would bring up the video feed of whoever was talking. (Perhaps there is, but I couldn't find it). It wasn't apparent to me whose video feed was selected for top-of-the-screen viewing.

We were both co-hosts and we had 25 students participating. Based on that experience, my sense was that Zoom works surprisingly well for smaller discussions or large lecture-based classes. I think it would be too clunky to really do a large socratic-style class with lots of back and forth among many participants. To my 20th century mind it does not compare to the in-class experience, but it is a fairly effective back up plan for snow days.

themselves available and it was enormously helpful.

You can see up to about 20 video feeds (with names) on your screen at once and you can scroll through to see the others, but some students (who have technical or audio problems) will use the telephone to call in and you will only see their telephone number. There is not a record of participants afterward.

Also, when Nan had the power point open she could not manage participants (to see raised hands or mute people). As co-host I could do that, but that effectively required two people. So combining Zoom with power point has some costs.

REPUBLICANS, FEARFUL OF LARGE VOTER TURNOUT, TRYING TO SUPPRESS VOTE

On Halloween it is telling that the one thing Republicans and McCain fear the most is a large turnout of new voters in this year's election. As they do every election, Republicans are engaged in attempts to suppress the vote across the country.

"They want everybody to vote. I don't want everybody to vote. Elections are not won by a majority of people, they never have been from the beginning of our country and they are not now. As a matter of fact, our leverage in the elections quite candidly goes up as the voting populace goes down."
- Paul Weyrich, Founder of the Heritage Foundation and McCain Supporter YouTube, [1980]

Real Threat To Voting Is GOP Voter Suppression

- "[A]ccording to Lori Minnite, professor of Political Science at Barnard College, who has spent the last eight years studying the role of fraud in U.S. elections, the Republican crusade against voter fraud is a strategic ruse. Rather than protecting the election process from voter fraud – a problem that barely exists – Minnite says the true aim of Republican efforts appear to be voter suppression across the partisan divide." Salon, [10/15/08]
- "Why are we hearing so much about voter fraud and so little about election fraud? After all, the odds of someone voting fraudulently are about the same as those of an American being struck and killed by lightning. A microscopic evaluation of election data in the 2004 gubernatorial election in Washington state revealed that voter fraud occurred approximately 0.0009 percent of the time. An analysis of the 2004 presidential election in Ohio revealed a voter fraud rate of 0.00004 percent." Star Tribune, [10/28/08]

Republicans Try To Suppress Vote Through Any Means Necessary

- New Mexico: "What these Republican operatives did is criminal," said ACORN member Dana Gallegos. "They violated these voters' privacy, and they want to deprive them of their right to vote. These kinds of dirty tricks tear at the fabric of our democracy. We demand an apology from the Republican Party, and we demand that Senator McCain denounce these partisan scare tactics." Buzz Flash, [10/19/08]
- Wisconsin: "In Wisconsin this past week, the Republican Attorney General, J.B. Van Hollen, filed a politically timed lawsuit that local election officials say will interfere with turnout for the presidential election on Nov. 4 and create a bureaucratic nightmare for election workers seeking to process a record number of new voter registrations before then. The AG's game plan is simple: create a bureaucratic nightmare to tie up the election machinery before Election Day and then create bottlenecks to confound voters on Election Day." AlterNet, [9/13/08]
- Florida: Election lawyers say Florida's Republican-controlled government has introduced more restrictions on the voting process than other states since 2000 and has fought harder to keep them. New York Times, [4/28/08]
- Virginia: A phony State Board of Elections flier advising Republicans to vote on Nov. 4 and Democrats on Nov. 5 is being circulated in several Hampton Roads localities, according to state elections officials. In fact, Election Day, for voters of all political stripes, remains Nov. 4." Virginia Pilot, [10/28/08]

Today, college students enter the workforce with twice as much debt as they did 10 years ago.

But, get this: on July 1st, it's going to get even tougher. Student loan rates are set to double, from 3.4% to 6.8%, if Congress doesn't act.

We can't let that happen to Illinois students. That's why I'm supporting a commonsense solution that would stop the student loan rate hike and preserve the lower rate.

If you agree, please sign your name and tell Congress to stop the student loan rate hike >>

Without action, high student loan rates will make college unaffordable for too many of our young people. That's simply unfair.

Hi John,

I hope your first days at the White House are going wonderfully! I've had the chance to speak to Eryn a few times via phone and I can hear in her voice that she's having the experience of a lifetime. I just wanted to let you know that yesterday I accepted the Research Assistant position under Carmel and Jess on the Executive Team. In regards to the position in Todd Stern's office, I never heard back from anyone on his staff, and Exec's schedule dictated that I couldn't wait any longer for a response. I will send you an update in a few weeks to let you know how I'm settling in upstairs.

Subject: Tell Kasich: It's Time to Study Paid Leave for New Moms

The United States is the only industrialized nation that does not offer paid parental leave.

In Ohio, Governor Kasich believes that instead of paid leave, "The one thing we need to do for working women is to give them the flexibility to be able to work at home online" because "they fall behind on the experience level" leading to lower pay.

Tell Kasich to support Ohio's working Moms by creating a task force to evaluate paid parental leave for Ohio employees.

Governor Kasich's comments fly in the face of reports from Innovation Ohio, Policy Matters Ohio, CNN, Business Insider and the New York Times, all of which agree that paid parental leave is good for mothers, families and businesses.

Among the benefits cited, paid leave:

- Reduces infant mortality;
- Increases the chances of newborns receiving wellness visits and vaccinations;
- Increases the likelihood of the employee returning to work; this in turn helps mothers economically as their wages continue to grow at a faster rate after returning;
- Improves the mental well-being of employees and reduces postpartum depression; and
- Significantly decreases the likelihood the employee will seek public assistance or nutritional programs such as food stamps.

It's time Ohio's leaders take a serious look at this simple, beneficial policy.

Subject: Major announcement from Barack

John --

Today and yesterday, President-elect Barack Obama announced key members of an economic team tasked with creating jobs, stabilizing the economy, and getting our country back on track.

Barack is bringing together some of the best minds in the country to make swift progress on the economic challenges we face.

Timothy F. Geithner, president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, will serve as Secretary of the Treasury. Lawrence H. Summers, former Secretary of the Treasury under President Clinton, will serve as Director of the National Economic Council.

Christina D. Romer will serve as Director of the Council of Economic Advisers, Melody C. Barnes will serve as Director of the Domestic Policy Council, and Heather A. Higginbottom will serve as Deputy Director of the Domestic Policy Council.

Peter Orszag, currently Director of the Congressional Budget Office, will serve as Office of Management and Budget Director, and Rob Nabors will serve as Deputy Director.

Watch the video of Barack's announcement yesterday and learn more about the economic team:

Barack's economic team has already begun work on a recovery plan, and he'll provide progress updates in the coming weeks. He'll also provide their initial recommendations to the incoming Congress.

You'll be instrumental in generating support to pass legislation that puts America on the road to recovery.

While we can't underestimate the challenge we face, we also can't underestimate the opportunity we have to bring the change our country needs.

Mexican Genetics Study Reveals Huge Variation in Ancestry

UCSF/Stanford Team Uncovers Basis for Health Differences among Latinos
10/18/2016

In the most comprehensive genetic study of the Mexican population to date, researchers from UC San Francisco and Stanford University, along with Mexico's National Institute of Genomic Medicine (INMEGEN) have identified tremendous genetic diversity, reflecting thousands of years of separation among local populations and shedding light on a range of confounding aspects of Latino health.

The study, which documented nearly 1 million genetic variants among more than 1,000 individuals, unveiled genetic differences as extensive as the variations between some Europeans and Asians, indicating populations that have been isolated for hundreds to thousands of years.

These differences offer an explanation for the wide variety of health factors among Latinos of Mexican descent, including differing rates of breast cancer and asthma, as well as therapeutic response. Results of the study, on which UCSF and Stanford shared both first and senior authors, appear in the June 13, 2014 online edition of the journal Science.

"Over thousands of years, there's been a tremendous language and cultural diversity across Mexico, with large empires like the Aztec and Maya, as well as small, isolated populations," said Christopher Gignoux, PhD, who was first author on the study with Andres Moreno-Estrada, first as a graduate student at UCSF and now as a postdoctoral fellow at Stanford. "Not only were we able to measure this diversity across the country, but we identified tremendous genetic diversity, with real disease implications based on where, precisely, your ancestors are from in Mexico."

For decades, physicians have based a range of diagnoses on patients' stated or perceived ethnic heritage, including baseline measurements for lung capacity, which are used to assess whether a patients' lungs are damaged by disease or environmental factors. In that context, categories such as Latino or African-American, both of which reflect people of diverse combinations of genetic ancestry, can be dangerously misleading and cause both misdiagnoses and incorrect treatment.

While there have been numerous disease/gene studies since the Human Genome Project, they have primarily focused on European and European-American populations, the researchers said. As a result, there is very little knowledge of the genetic basis for health differences among diverse populations.

"In lung disease such as asthma or emphysema, we know that it matters what ancestry you have at specific locations on your genes," said Esteban González Burchard, M.D., M.P.H., professor of Bioengineering and Therapeutic Sciences, and Medicine in the UCSF schools of Pharmacy and Medicine, who is co-senior author of the paper with Carlos Bustamante, PhD, a professor of genetics at Stanford. "In this study, we realized that for disease classification it also matters what type of Native American ancestry you have. In terms of genetics, it's the difference between a neighborhood and a precise street address."

The researchers focused on Mexico as one of the largest sources of pre-Columbian diversity, with a long history of complex civilizations that have had varying contributions to the present-day population. Working collaboratively across the institutions, the team enlisted 40 experts, ranging from bi-lingual anthropologists to statistical geneticists, computational biologists and clinicians, as well as researchers from multiple institutions in Mexico and others in England, France, Puerto Rico and Spain.

The study covered most geographic regions in Mexico and represented 511 people from 20 indigenous and 11 mestizo (ethnically mixed) populations. Their information was compared to genetic and lung-measurement data from two previous studies, including roughly 250 Mexican and Mexican-American children in the Genetics of Asthma in Latino Americans (GALA) study, the largest genetic study of Latino children, which Burchard leads.

Among the results was the discovery of three distinct genetic clusters in different areas of Mexico, as well as clear remnants of ancient empires that cross seemingly remote geographical zones. In particular, the Seri people along the northern mainland coast of the Gulf of California and a Mayan people known as the Lacandon, near the Guatemalan border, are as genetically different from one another as Europeans are from Chinese.

"We were surprised by the fact that this composition was also reflected in people with mixed ancestries from cosmopolitan areas," said co-first author Andres Moreno-Estrada, MD, PhD, a life sciences research associate at Stanford. "Hidden among the European and African ancestry blocks, the indigenous genetic map resembles a geographic map of Mexico."

The study also revealed a dramatic difference in lung capacity between mestizo individuals with western indigenous Mexican ancestry and those with eastern ancestry, to the degree that in a lung test of two equally healthy people of the same age, someone from the west could appear to be a decade younger than a Yucatan counterpart. Burchard said this was clinically significant and could have important implications in diagnosing lung disease.

Significantly, the study found that these genetic origins correlated directly to lung function in modern Mexican-Americans. As a result, the research lays the groundwork for both further research and for developing precise diagnostics and possibly even therapeutics, based on these genetic variations. It also creates a potentially important tool for public health policy, especially in Mexico, in allocating resources for both research and care.

"This can shape public health and public policy," Burchard said. "If you're testing a group of kids who are at risk for asthma or other health conditions, you want to do it in an area where the frequency of the disease gene is highest. We now have a map of Mexico that will help researchers make those clinical and public health decisions."

Burchard, a pulmonologist whose work focuses on the impact of genetic ancestry on children's risk of asthma and response to asthma medications, has wanted to study the Mexican population since 2003, both as a medical context for Mexican-Americans and as an opportunity to understand Native American genetics. To do so, he reached out to Bustamante, who directs the Stanford Center for Computational, Evolutionary and Human Genomics.

"We were particularly motivated by the fact that the vast majority of genetic studies have focused on populations of European descent," Bustamante said. "We think there are lots of opportunities for understanding the biology, as well as understanding differences in disease outcome in different parts of the world, by studying the genetics of complex disease in different populations."

Over the past few years, researchers have begun to understand that genetic variation has a very peculiar structure, Bustamante said. Some common genetic variants reach appreciable frequencies (e.g., 30-50 percent) in many of the world's populations. Most of these appear to have existed in the human gene pool at the time of the great human diasporas, including the migrations out of Africa. However, Bustamante said a "huge flurry" of other mutations have arisen since then, as human populations grew due to the advent and adoption of agriculture. These are much rarer, occurring in about 1- to 2 percent of the population, and are thought to be both more recent and relevant to health and disease. These rare variants make up the bulk of genetic alterations we see in human populations.

Many of these genetic differences already are known to have a direct impact on our risk for certain diseases, such as the BRCA gene in breast cancer, or our ability to metabolize medications. But before we can develop more precise therapies or prescribe them to the right patients, we need far more knowledge of what those variants are across diverse populations, and how they affect health.

"This is driving the ball down the field toward precision medicine," Burchard said. "We can't just clump everyone together and call them European Americans or Mexican Americans. There's been a lot of resistance to studying racially mixed populations, because they've been considered too complex. We think that offers a real scientific advantage."

Complete results and a full list of authors can be found in the paper, which appears online at Sciencemag.org . A representative chart of a diverse genome, reflecting varied heritage across one individual's genes, can be found on the Burchard Lab website.

We intend to play an equally crucial role in electing the next President." I am not commenting beyond that. Let me know if you have any concerns, happy to discuss changes.

Earlier this month, House Republican Leader Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) explained his strident opposition to a public health insurance option by claiming he had never met an American in support of it.  Subject: Call Congress: say NO to US leading a new military intervention in the war in Syria

The Network of Spiritual Progressives (NSP)
Spiritual Activism and the Politics of Meaning

Powered by  salsa

If the US had intervened 3 years ago when the democratic forces in Syria were calling for help, and done so by

- a. calling for an International Conference to have the countries of the world stand up for a democratic process and decide what kinds of support they could give to the democratic forces at that time (probably outside the UN, given the archaic form of the Security Council)
- b. apologizing to the people of the region for the U.S. invasion of Iraq and our destructive role there during the war that we initiated, including our torture centers at abu greib and other less well known locations, and brought to trial those officials of the U.S. government and the CIA who had ordered, permitted or facilitated acts of torture in violation of universal standards of human rights, and
- c. initiating the process of creating a Global Marshall Plan (along the lines proposed by the Network of Spiritual Progressives at www.tikkun.org/gmp) whose first location would be the Middle East

....then there might have been some legitimacy for the U.S. playing a leadership role at this time.

But until these steps are taken, the U.S. will almost certainly be perceived as simply continuing its illegitimate war that was temporarily suspended a few years ago, and might unite the Sunnis against us and into a regional war between Sunnis and Shia.

At this point, less is more--and the urgency to stop the horrific and disgusting behavior of ISIS must be taken up by the rest of the world, with the US helping to convene them, but not taking the leadership in violent military actions or pouring more weaponry into the conflict that may well end up in the hands of ISIS or whatever hateful regime emerges after ISIS is defeated.

With memories of the US torturing of Iraqis fresh in the minds of many in the region, and the recognition that Saudi Arabia, a central part of those opposing ISIS, continues to engage in beheading those it determines to be criminals, it becomes wise to not have the U.S. perceived as the central part of a new military escalation in the area.

The NSP (Network of Spiritual Progressives) is part of the peace and non-violence supporting Win Without War coalition, we want to urge you to act on their effort to have people call Congress today to communicate this kind of message. When you call Congress, you can send our NSP kind of message along with the message that the Win Without War coalition is championing. First, do no harm, and war-making is harm (and as a U.S. Army general said yesterday, ground troops are certainly conceivable. It is easy to see how the next president might take the resolutions passed today as legitimation for expanding this war, just as George w. Bush used the 9/11 aftermath congressional resolutions as his defacto justification for starting the invasion of Iraq in 2003--Rabbi Michael Lerner, editor, Tikkun Magazine

Win Without War

Dear Michael,

In the past six weeks, America has flown nearly 3,000 missions, deployed more than 1,500 troops, and launched more than 150 airstrikes in Iraq. Just last week, the President announced that our latest war in the Middle East will be ramping up, with increased airstrikes in Iraq and soon also in Syria. And, as early as today, Congress is going to vote on a controversial plan to send arms to Syrian rebels, pouring fuel on the fire of the Syrian civil war.

Your Members of Congress need to hear from you before they support another endless war in the Middle East!

The hard truth is that U.S. airstrikes will not solve the problems we face in Iraq and Syria. Over the past 13 years, we have seen how the unintended consequences of military action can spiral out of control. U.S. bombs, and the civilian deaths they cause, often serve as recruitment tools for groups like ISIS.

American supplied weapons have already fallen into the hands of violent extremists. And American military intervention often makes the hard diplomacy needed to solve the underlying political conflicts impossible.

That's why we're organizing a national day of action today to stop the escalation of violence. Please join with activists across the country and make your voice heard!

Call Congress by using this special toll-free* number: 1-855-68 NO WAR (1-855-686-6927). This number will connect you with the Capitol Switchboard operator, and you should ask to be connected to your Representative's office. Once you're done, call back and ask to be connected to each of your Senators' offices.

"Hi I'm _____ and I'm a constituent calling from _____. I'm calling to ask you to stop and ask the hard questions before we go back to war in the Middle East. Before arming the Syrian rebels or launching more airstrikes, we need to fully explore alternatives to force. Please take two minutes right now to call your Members of Congress and stop the march back to war. Call toll-free 1-855-686-6927 TODAY!

Friend,

I'm not one to back down from a challenge.

Over the past few days, you may have heard of the Ice Bucket Challenge. It's all part of the effort to raise awareness and to raise money to combat ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

The rules are simple: Donate $100 to the ALS Association, or pour a bucket of ice water over yourself -- or both.

Today, I took the challenge.

I was joined by a dozen members of my amazing campaign team who took the challenge alongside me. You can watch the video here:

<http://www.quinnforillinois.com/ice-bucket-challenge>

I'm still drying off, but I'm glad I did it.

In less than a month, the ice bucket challenge has raised more than ten million dollars to help fight this disease.

I also made a donation to the ALS Association, and I encourage you to donate as well:

<http://www.quinnforillinois.com/donate-to-ALS>

As important as those donations are, the attention this disease is getting as a result of the challenge is truly invaluable.

It's a perfect example of what we can do when we all come together for a cause.

So -- are you up for the challenge?

Governor Quinn

P.S. I can't help but point out that the ice bucket challenge was started by an inspiring activist from Yonkers, New York, who is also named Pat Quinn. From one Pat Quinn to another: nice work.

As requested, here are list of possible opportunities for Chelsea. See below, tried to make suitable for forwarding.

Let me know if there is anything else you need!

Our first non-early state weekend of action is happening July 24th-July 26th with a focus on community canvasses. Chelsea's participation would be an incredible way to amplify this important organizing moment, and any level of support would be a huge help. Below is a list of our highest priority asks, in order of importance. Any of these actions would be great ways for Chelsea to engage, even if she can't do our highest priority asks:

Join a canvass in NYC area on 7/26 or 7/26

- Dominican Day Parade in the Bronx. A note that Bill De Blasio's office flagged this event for us, and he will be at this event.

- Data entry at HQ in Brooklyn Heights
- Smorgosboard in Williamsburg
- Smorgosboard in Brooklyn Heights
- Times Square (only if she is unwilling to do other options)

Join a volunteer call on 7/23 with volunteer leaders for the weekend at 8:00 PM (time somewhat flexible)

Periscope or livetweet from NYC area canvass

Be the “signer” on texts to internal volunteer leaders for the day (reporting back, giving pep talks, saying thank you, etc

Tweet from her account inviting people to the WOA

iPhone video thanking volunteers that we can post to private, volunteer run FB groups (evergreen, not necessarily referencing weekend of action)

Barack,

Good meeting yesterday. When we got off on the idea of creating an emergency national economic council, we left unresolved two questions that were contained in my 2 page cover memo. First, should Daley or Tarullo run the interim economic staff team in the early days of the transition (with the expectation that once appointed the National Economic Advisor would take over)? These are presented as options 2 and 3 on page 2 of the memo. I lean towards option 3, with Tarullo in charge, but either would work. That needs resolution today or tomorrow so we can execute on Wednesday. Second, we need to decide on who should be on the interim outside council. There is a list of suggestions on the bottom of page 2. You added Warren Buffett to the potential list. How do you want to proceed? Pick from the list? have further discussion? Let me know.

John

The memos are attached for your review.

Subject: RE: more analysis on special interest and corruption questions

Tom,

Following up on my previous email here are some thoughts on the effectiveness of the Huckabee and Giuliani ethics attacks. There isn't really a comparable Romney attack to look at.

Giuliani:

The attack on Giuliani's ethics is centered around his association with Kerik and the cover up of his use of city funds to pay for his affair in the Hamptons. This was the strongest rated attack on Giuliani overall.

This was, indeed, the top performing attack among those who cited special interests as a top reason for the nation being on the wrong track (43 percent very serious / 75 percent total serious). Among all other wrong track voters the ethics attack was second to the close to Bush attack.

It also performed the strongest among Republican (21 percent very serious doubts, 51 percent total serious doubts) and was really the only attack that had a significant impact on Republicans. This attack is also relatively strong among white evangelicals (27/60) and is tops among those who initially support Giuliani – it appears that an ethics-based attack can work in hurting Giuliani with his base (something we also see with Huckabee).

The ethics attack also scores the best of our attacks among those who shift against Giuliani on being honest and trustworthy, willing to say anything and unethical. Our regression modeling did show that the ethics attack helped drive the shift on the unethical attribute but it did not register as a driver for any of the other attributes. However, the negative fact on the cover up of Giuliani's affair, which was an element of the ethics attack, did register on the honest and trustworthy attribute.

Some other groups among with the ethics attack performed well:

- Moderates (32/69)
- Hispanics (41/73)
- Younger women (34/65)

Huckabee:

The attack on Huckabee's ethics is centered on his admonishment by the state ethics board and his pardoning of a convicted rapist. This was the strongest rated attack on Huckabee overall.

This did not rate the highest among those who cited special interests as the reason our country in on the wrong track. The extremism attack rated significantly better (51/77 for extremism and 34/72 for ethics).

The ethics and judgment attack was the best attack among independents (43/75) and Republicans (21/65). It was particularly strong among independent women (46/80). It was also clearly the top attack among those that shifted away from Huckabee on the vote (46/80) and on the honest and trustworthy (48/83) and change (50/81) attributes. However, our regression modeling showed that the ethics attack only helped drive the shift on the honest and trustworthy attribute and, even then, its significance was second to the extremism attack. In fact, as we noted in our memo, the regression modeling showed that the extremism attack was the most effective attack in shifting attributes across the board. It appears that the extremism attack not only serves as a good proxy for being too close to Bush, but also in undermining confidence in Huckabee's character and independence.

Other notes on the ethics attack:

- It clearly performed better among the less educated and worst among those with a post graduate degree
- It was off-the-charts among Hispanics (63/90). This mirrors our findings on the Giuliani ethics hit, suggesting that Hispanics and generally open to ethics and character-based attacks.

Subject: RE: more analysis on special interest and corruption questions

Tom,

Here's some analysis on those who rate "Washington Dominated by special interests" as a top reason for the country being on the wrong track. I'll touch on some of the specific doubts in a following email.

325 respondents, or 14% of all those surveyed, rated this as one of the top two reasons the country is on the wrong track. Keep in mind that only those who said the country was on the wrong track were asked this follow up question, so the 20% who said right track were not asked this question. Looking only at those saying wrong track, "special interests" was named as one of the top 2 concerns by 20% of these voters, making it the 2nd most frequent response.

Keep in mind that every “wrong track” subgroup is tilted towards the Democrats, as we are excluding the hard-core Republicans who say we are on the right track. With that in mind, those citing special interests is the least Democratic of the various “wrong track” groups, and is heavier in independents. The partisan breakdown of this group is 42% Democrat, 37% independent, 21% Republican. (This compares to 36/29/34 overall and 47/31/21 among all wrong track voters).

This group is also slightly more male than the overall population (52% male), slightly older (55% over 50) and slightly more educated (52% college grads).

Unsurprisingly, this group is initially very open to Obama, much more so than to Hillary. His leads on all three Republicans is larger, in some cases by large amounts. It is important to remember that for each match-up we only have a sample size of about 55 cases for this subgroup, so there is a large margin of error (about +/- 13%) for these numbers.

Initial match-ups:

|         | Giuliani    | Romney      | Huckabee    |
|---------|-------------|-------------|-------------|
| Clinton | 55/28 (+27) | 55/39 (+16) | 44/34 (+10) |
| Obama   | 70/20 (+50) | 56/31 (+25) | 63/29 (+34) |

The change among this group is heavily dependent on match-up with few clear trends emerging. One thing that does emerge, however, is that our attacks on Romney seem to be most effective with this group. Both Clinton and Obama gain ground against Romney. On the other hand, they both lose ground against Giuliani, with Clinton losing significant ground. Against Huckabee, Clinton gains a huge 23 points, while Obama loses 8 points against Huckabee.

Aside from a match-up against Giuliani, Obama does seem to lose more/gain less among this group

Final match-ups:

|         | Giuliani    | Romney      | Huckabee    |
|---------|-------------|-------------|-------------|
| Clinton | 45/32 (+13) | 53/28 (+25) | 59/26 (+33) |
| Obama   | 66/18 (+48) | 56/27 (+29) | 55/28 (+27) |

Net Vote Difference:

|         | Giuliani | Romney | Huckabee | Average |
|---------|----------|--------|----------|---------|
| Clinton | -14      | +8     | +23      | +8.5    |
| Obama   | -2       | +14    | -8       | +1.3    |
| Average | -8       | +11    | +7.5     |         |

On most Giuliani attributes we see movements similar to the overall numbers, which was high. There is larger movement on the “unethical” attribute, which shows a +38 point net shift, 10 points more than among the overall population. Of the three candidates, it’s clear that we saw the worst shifts among these voters for Giuliani. It should be noted that Rudy started off in a very bad position with the voters so his numbers had less room to decrease; still, it appears we would have work to do with these voters on Giuliani. (Since 1/3 of the sample, heard each Republican’s attribute, the sample size for each of these is about 110, which leads to a margin of error of about +/- 9 %)

On the Romney attributes we see a very large shift of +54 on “too close to Bush,” 26 points higher than among the overall population. We do not see similarly large shifts on “honest and trustworthy” or other attributes, however. Still, the large shift in this key attribute, along with the consistent shifts in the vote on Romney show that our attacks are having an effect with these voters.

On the Huckabee attributes we see very large shifts, even larger than the shifts among the overall population. On being “too close to Bush” we see a +53 point shift, 13 points higher than among the overall population. We also see a -45 point shift on “honest and trustworthy,” 8 points higher than among the overall population. Again, our attacks on Huckabee seem to be effective among these voters.

The attacks on Hillary score similarly among this group as they do among the overall population, which is a bit of a concern since this is a more democratic group and we’d expect the attacks to have less force. Taxes is still the top hit with 41% saying it creates very serious doubts and a total of 58% saying it creates serious doubts. The attacks on Obama are weaker among this group. Again, taxes is still the most damaging, but it scores just 23% very serious / 52% total serious (compared to 37/66 among the overall population). The difference in the power of the attacks is reflected in the relative shifts against Giuliani and Romney – in both cases Obama fares better (though against Romney this is well within the margin of error). The large relative shift against Obama in the match-up against Huckabee is curious.

The attacks on Giuliani are stronger than they are among the general public, with the attack on his ethics (unsurprisingly) topping the list. At 43% very serious/75% total serious this attack is strong among this group.

The attacks on Romney are also very strong on this group with his support for Bush on Iraq leading the way. This attack generates 48% very serious / 73% total serious among this group (vs 35/57) overall and its strength is reflected in the very large shift on Romney being “too close to Bush.” It would appear that with Romney, at least, tying him to Bush may also scar him with a taint of being corrupt and/or unethical and really damage him in the minds of these voters.

Surprisingly, the top attack on Huckabee among this group is not the ethics and judgment attack centering on his parole of a convicted rapist (though it does score well), but is his right-wing extremism. 30% named his abortion extremist in our list of negative facts and the right-wing extremist attack scored-off-the charts with this group – 51% very serious, 77% total serious. He continue to see evidence that the extremist attacks serves as an effective proxy in tying Huckabee to Bush and, it would also seem, tarnishing his image on ethics and corruption.

Yes and who is rating special interests as a top issue and do they move? if you look at our supporters how does that wrong track-special interest question come out.

basically cut a banner looking at who rates the "washington dominated by special interests" wrong track answer as high. cut another looking at who is responding to the other strongest corruption attack (huckabee doubts battery?)

GQR Team,

Can we get some more analysis on the special interest and corruption questions? Who is moving on them? Dem-Indy-GOP differences. Age, gender differences. Regressions etc... How does this compare to other questions?

There is the WRONG TRACK question at the beginning of the poll and then some of the questions in the doubts batteries.

Just spoke with Podesta.

I was wrong on composition of the Board. He says that Pete Rouse (Barack's Senate chief of staff) is Japanese-American, and that Sonal Shah at Google.org is Indian-American. (I haven't met either except on phone calls.)

Podesta says that he thinks Froman has spoken with you again, and John doesn't want to get in the middle of things but he has encouraged Froman to make sure you have a substantial role.

So I think we are back where we started. In addition to the personnel effort, if you'd like to be on the Immigration Reform working group that would be great. I'm reaching out to Aleinikoff.

Subject: about HRC cuba speech friday.

So the talkers call happened. . .see below from one of our peeps who was on the call. If there is a way she can point out that this is NOT all R's. . .its the old stone-age Republican leadership and Rubio and Jeb....Many Republicans (Flake and others, including Carlos Guittierez) are with us. . .just like there are sane R's who want immigration reform that the R leadership is to afraid to move etc etc. Thanks.

Clinton speech on Cuba Friday in Miami. They just held a talkers call. Nothing particularly different but I'm concerned that she'll turn this into Democrat vs Republican on Cuba, the past the GOP wants vs the future she and Democrats are pushing. I'll be pressing them to highlight that Jeb and Marco are as much out of step with Republicans as they are with everyone else on this issue.

Subject: RFH/Superpacs items

John and I just discussed a few more things related to RFH and super pacs this morning and I wanted to share our major questions in case it's helpful for your convo today.

1. We'd really like to get John talking to superpacs this week--RFH, Priorities, Brock, etc. Is that ok? Can he actively impose the discipline that the NYT says he will (no pressure, John!)? Are there restrictions on he can or can't say? For example, it would be nice to tell RFH to dial down the emails for blankets and party busses--is that kind of tactical input allowed?

2. RFH Staff--can we start interviewing them now? Are there any restrictions on what we can say in interviews? Do we reduce risk of a complaint if we hire them after the committee has been shut down?

Carter Eskew would agree as far as I remember this ambiguity and nuance was not helpful either with swing voters or base voters.

As for the issue itself...Michael Bloomberg has made a proposal to approve the pipeline and institute our first carbon tax in conjunction with its approval. His argument is the crude is going to be shipped somewhere ., either west or south , and it might as well be south with a deal made to impose a carbon tax. As you know he is working closely with Steyer and Paulson and his idea might be a way to campaign on the idea of promoting a carbon tax, especially if the tax could be used to finance the half a billion solar panels.

For what it's worth.

The cushions and the recliner mechanism are in good condition, but there are 2-3 worn or stained spots on the upholstery (see photos). The price is $100 (OBO), and you will have to come retrieve it because I cannot metro it to work with me from Alexandria. ☺

Ad Campaign Targets Media's Love for McCain

McCain's Weeklong Complaints About Media Ring Hollow

Washington, D.C. – Following a week of coverage focused on unfounded complaints of media bias by Sen. John McCain and his surrogates, Media Matters Action Network today launched an ad campaign highlighting the media's long-held affection for the presumptive Republican presidential nominee and seeking public support to hold the media accountable.

"John McCain's claim that the media is out to get him couldn't be more disingenuous. Most politicians would sell their soul for the type of media coverage he has received over the past decade. It's no wonder McCain has called the media his base," said Paul Waldman, co-author of Free Ride: John McCain and the Media (Anchor Books, 2008).

"This ad highlights what many already know to be true -- that McCain, more than any other politician, has benefited from a press corps that routinely ignores his gaffes, flip-flops, and mistakes while propping up the myth that he is some sort of an anti-Washington, straight-talking maverick regardless of facts to the contrary."

The ad follows on the heels of a new study from the conservative Center for Media and Public Affairs, which reportedly found that during the initial phase of the general election, network evening news coverage has been more favorable toward John McCain than Barack Obama. Though Obama has received a greater volume of coverage at times, the tone of his coverage has been more negative, according to CMPA.

CMPA reportedly examined all statements by anchors and reporters on the network evening news broadcasts between June 8, the day after Hillary Clinton dropped out of the Democratic race, and July 21. Though most of the comments were neutral in tone, CMPA reportedly found that when there was an opinion offered, it was more likely negative against Obama. Only 28% of the opinions offered about Obama were positive, while 72% were negative. McCain's numbers were clearly better: 43% positive opinions versus 57% negative.

Subject: Back to work

Dear Friend,

After a brief break for the holidays, it's back to work and another busy week for Eric and the campaign!

Today's Los Angeles Times reports on Eric's work to save the aviation mechanics school at Van Nuys Airport, which could close due to Los Angeles Unified School District budget cuts. With many aviation mechanic jobs being outsourced, we cannot afford to lose this program and turn away students who want to learn the skills they need to land good paying jobs, build careers and succeed in our global economy.

In an effort to keep these aviation jobs here, Eric announced yesterday that he will introduce a L.A. City Council motion asking the Airport Department to work with LAUSD to keep this school open.

Eric said, "The aviation training program at Van Nuys Airport is a critical asset for Los Angeles. I am deeply concerned that it could close."

Learn more about the action Eric is taking to keep the vocational school open here.

Eric was recently interviewed by the L.A. Times about his motion officially designating "Peru Village" in Hollywood. Peru Village has four Peruvian restaurants and many other businesses, and would be located on Vine between Sunset and Melrose.

Eric said, "The Peruvian community and PERU Village L.A. are great tiles in the mosaic of Los Angeles. We want people to come to Hollywood, enjoy the food and learn about the Peruvian culture."

The motion to designate Peru Village has earned support from the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce and at least 500 city residents who signed petitions.

Eric also discussed his work to promote L.A.'s growing tech community. The Los Angeles Business Journal reported this week on Eric's plan to expand the partnership between L.A.'s tech businesses and the Mayor's Council on Innovation and Industry.

Eric said, "I would ramp up the council here even further. I don't want them to just be an industry think group that reports to the mayor, but really be able to control the city's brand."

Here's a suggested set of points that rearrange and amplify the last two sections. They cause the last four footnotes to be renumbered.

McCain's healthcare plan shifts costs from employers to workers.

- McCain would use tax code changes to encourage employers to stop providing health benefits for workers and force workers to buy their own insurance
- McCain would institute a massive new tax on workers by taxing their health benefits.
- McCain promotes Health Savings Accounts (HSAs), which must be combined with very high-deductible health plans ($2,000 or more), leading to high out-of-pocket costs.
- McCain's plan would give families a tax credit to buy insurance. However, the tax credit would pay for only one-fourth to one-half of the average annual premium.
- As the Center for American Progress has reported, "poorly designed tax credits could actually increase rather than decrease the number of uninsured by causing more high-risk people to lose group coverage than the number of low-risk people who gain individual-market coverage". [fnt 11]

McCain's healthcare plan leaves Americans to fend for themselves in an insurance bureaucracy that puts profits before people.

- McCain's plan would leave patients at the mercy of the insurance companies by overriding state rules that protect consumers from company abuses.
- For example, McCain would allow insurance companies to deny coverage to people with pre-existing conditions, the very people who need health care the most.

McCain's healthcare plan won't cover the uninsured.

- McCain's plan will not cover all Americans, and that is not one of his stated goals.
- According to the Wall Street Journal, McCain's plan "will focus on controlling costs rather than reducing the ranks of the uninsured." [fnt 9] The Census Bureau has reported that approximately 47 million, or one in seven American, lack health insurance. [fnt 10]

McCain's healthcare plan protects drug company profits.

- In a major health care address promoted on his campaign website, McCain says: "The problem is not that most Americans lack adequate health insurance.... The biggest problem with the American health care system is that it costs too much." [fnt 8]
- However, McCain's plan does not go after one of the biggest reasons for skyrocketing costs—the outrageous price of prescription drugs. His plan will not allow the government to use its purchasing power to negotiate discounts with drug companies.

All,

Attached is a document that our research team put together on McCain's connection to the health care and insurance industries, his fundraising, selected lobbyists, etc.

Feel free to use this, send around, etc.

One startling figure: McCain's campaign counts 38 lobbyists from the health care and insurance industries who are either on staff or raising money for the campaigns — these 38 lobbyists have received more than $140 million in fees from their health or insurance clients since 1998.

Subject: It's time to put the American people above corporate profits.

November 30, 2015

Dear John,

Before the end of the year, Congress will vote on legislation to extend more than 50 tax breaks—most of which will benefit corporations. Corporate tax breaks will cost billions of dollars.

But two tax credits that help working parents are at risk of NOT being extended.

The Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) and the Child Tax Credit (CTC) provide help to working parents struggling to keep their heads above water.

If improvements to the Child Tax Credit are not extended, a single mother with two children working full-time at the federal minimum wage, earning $14,500 a year, would lose $1,725 a year, or about $144 a month. This translates into five dollars a day bus fare to a job, money for a babysitter, or the occasional prepared meal picked up on the way home when she's too tired to cook. Is this really too much for us to provide?

It is unconscionable that the people in control of Congress are willing to cut basic support to working parents struggling to make ends meet while extending tax breaks to wealthy corporations. Have they no shame?

Email or call your representatives today and say enough is enough. It's time to put the American people above corporate profits.

Subject: Obergefell v. Hodges

Friend,

Ohio is my home. And when the state I love refused to recognize my marriage with my husband, and partner of more than 20 years, John, I stood up and brought our lawsuit all the way to the Supreme Court. Now I'm standing up and endorsing Ted Strickland for U.S. Senate, and I'm asking you to join me.

If you're willing to stand with me during this historic time for progress in our country, please chip in $10 for Ted today.

I was the lead plaintiff in Obergefell v. Hodges, a case that eventually led to the Supreme Court of the United States declaring that every state in this beautiful country must recognize marriage equality. I'm very proud to be a part of that historic victory. But I know the fight is far from over, and that's why we need Ted in our corner.

Ted walked the walk for equality when he was Governor by appointing openly gay and lesbian Ohioans to his cabinet and the court. He marched through the streets in the rain for marriage equality. Now, from passing the Equality Act to ending conversion therapy, Ted is the Senate candidate I trust to keep up our fight for full equality under the law.

Cincinnati is my home, and I know Ted is all in for equality for all Ohioans, and he needs us to be all in in this campaign.

Ted's in one of the closest Senate races in the country. And the outcome of his race will have a real impact on our future, on the values we cherish, and on the country we leave for the next generation. I refuse to let the other side undo the progress that we've made, and that's why I'm asking you to chip in for Ted today.

The FEC financial filing deadline at the end of the year is the biggest test Ted's campaign has faced yet. So if you stand with me, I need you to stand with Ted, right now.

Subject: RE: memo on govt reform/pulbic corruption

Neera – so it seems like the ideas that really have currency are the following:

Increase government's public reporting so voters know what government is doing and how money is being spent. 66 of soft partisans think this would be very effective in making government more accountable.

Strengthen bribery laws to ensure that politicians don't change legislation for political donations. 62%

Require full public reporting in government purchases or contracts, create stricter penalties for contractors who violate agreements. 61

Strictly limit the amount of money that lobbyists and their clients can contribute. 60

Require any organization that spends money on election ads to disclose its major donors. 60

The first and third are easy enough, although I wonder how much we'll break through with them. We have already embraced the fifth.

The fourth idea seems challenging – who counts as "clients"? Would we limit the funds given by people working for companies that lobby more than those who don't? Not sure how that would work.

The second idea is a favorite of mine, as you know, but REALLY dicey territory for HRC, right?

Just trying to think about how we actually operationalize this, because I totally agree you are on to something.

And where do you stand on a $100 limit on campaign contributions, full stop?

I've discussed thoughts on this with both of you so sending it along. Hope it's helpful. We are fleshing out these policy ideas, but we are about a week away from that process being done. Thought this was important to get to you sooner though. I know members of your team are fleshing out similar ideas.

Let me know your thoughts.

John --

As you're thinking through the post-election structure for economic policy making/crisis management, how it relates to the appointment of the economic team, etc., please let me know if I can be of help. Following my conversations with Bob, Bill, Josh et al about this this week, I've been trying to sort out in my own mind how it all might fit together to deal with the immediate challenges.

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

This has been another exciting month in the world of climate politics, so I wanted to send a quick note with a few key highlights. Thank you for your continued partnership in this work. As you will read from the update below, your investment in LCV continues to help build real political power for the environmental movement.

Onward,

Gina McCarthy Confirmed to Lead Environmental Protection Agency

After the longest wait for a permanent EPA Administrator in the agency's history, Gina McCarthy was finally confirmed with a strong bipartisan vote in the Senate. This is a big, positive step forward. We are looking forward to working closely with her to help realize President Obama's vision for making meaningful progress on climate change, starting with setting common sense limits on industrial carbon pollution from power plants. Click here to read our full statement in support of her confirmation.

New McAuliffe Ad Hits Cuccinelli on Climate; Touts Virginia LCV Support

This week, Virginia gubernatorial candidate Terry McAuliffe released a new television ad highlighting Ken Cuccinelli's ideological witch hunt in 2010 against Michael Mann, then a climate scientist at the University of Virginia, for pursuing research with which Cuccinelli did not agree. The investigation, driven by Cuccinelli's extreme anti-science agenda, was deemed baseless by the Virginia Supreme Court.

The ad also touts McAuliffe's endorsement by the Virginia League of Conservation Voters. They support him for his commitment to protecting and restoring Virginia's natural resources, his dedication to a strong renewable energy future for the Commonwealth, and his support of Virginia's science and research communities. The new ad, "Witch Hunt," can be viewed here: <http://bit.ly/18IZ9Yc>.

Virginia LCV PAC has also built the first state LCV online bundling site GiveGreen Virginia -- to support candidates in Virginia starting with Terry McAuliffe. Please check it out here: <https://va-givegreen.zissousecure.com/>.

LCV Releases Bipartisan Poll on Young Voters and Climate Change

As the impacts of climate change take hold on a near daily basis—from record heat waves, wildfires, floods, and storms—the American way of life is being violently transformed. And Americans are taking notice—especially younger voters whose future is at stake.

Last week, LCV released a bipartisan poll showing that young voters across the country are concerned about climate change, intensely supportive of federal action to address it, and are willing to punish those who ignore the problem. Moreover, young voters overwhelmingly describe climate change deniers as "ignorant" and "out-of-touch," reflecting the generational divide and underscoring the disconnect between their real world experience and the politically charged views of deniers.

Over the next several years, LCV and our allies plan to aggressively expose climate deniers and those opposing any action on the issue—a message that our data indicates will resonate well with voters.

Politico's "50 Politicos to Watch" Features LCV Staffer

Our own Navin Nayak, Senior Vice President of Campaigns, made the Politico's 2013 list of "50 Politicos to Watch"! The glowing profile of Navin also points out that "no group has played a bigger part in [climate change's return to prominence] than the League of Conservation Voters." We're very proud of Navin and our entire team for this well-deserved recognition. To read the complete article, please click here.

Keystone XL Pipeline: All Risk; No Reward

As part of our efforts to spotlight the high bar the President has now set for the Keystone XL pipeline, in July we hosted a successful press teleconference with Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (RI) and Representative Henry Waxman (CA-33) to discuss their excellent letter to the State Department on the climate impacts of Keystone and tar sands. During a call with the press, they highlighted how the dangerous project does not meet the climate standard set by President Obama in his sweeping climate change speech last month and should be rejected by the administration.

You may listen to the recording of the call by going here and I recommend reading their detailed letter to the State Department by clicking here.

LCV's Capital Dinner a Huge Success

Thanks to your support, LCV's annual Capital Dinner in Washington, D.C. this past June was a huge success. Senators Elizabeth Warren and Al Franken were our featured speakers and both gave inspirational speeches about the urgent need to combat the climate crisis. This was the biggest LCV event to date and had over 560 people in attendance. Click here to watch the Senators' enlightening and humorous speeches and view the photos from the dinner.

Subject: JW FOIA | WJC Speeches

All -- DOS is soon releasing another round of documents and email traffic (not hers) in response to Judicial Watch's FOIA request on DOS's process for reviewing WJC's speaking engagements.

It's 116 pages with approx. 50 sponsor/subsponsor requests. No objections by DOS in this batch, but some lengthy internal discussions among DOS officials that I highlighted below.

There is one request where speaking fee would have been paid by Turkish govt -- WJC's office declined this. And one speaking engagement with fee from Canadian government, which he did do.

Let me know if you have any questions.

[Jen -- happy to give you more background on prior releases since it's your first go around]

Thx

1) UNIQFEST/Turkey: There are 20 pages of internal, heavily redacted email traffic among DOS officials on request for WJC to speak at UNIQFEST in 2009 -- a climate change conference sponsored by the Turkish government with Turkish officials as featured speakers. According to the traffic, WJC would receive compensation from "government and non-government sources."

-- WJC's office decided to decline the invitation. There is no final determination in the materials by the Department.

-- Some of email traffic has subject line "Clinton Foundation" and refers to this as request from "Clinton Foundation." I only flag as may be twisted to say DOS did not even understand what they were reviewing for, blurred lines between personal and BHCCF etc...

2) Canadian National Exhibition: Email traffic indicates WJC's compensation for this speaking engagement would come from the Canadian government via their program to promote tourism, "Industry Canada." There is heavily redacted email traffic between DOS officials, including our Embassy in Canada, with several emails from WJC's office asking for status update, at one point saying they only have "about more 30 minutes before we lose the offer."

--- Jim Thessin (Deputy Legal Advisor) responds: "I do not have a problem with this so long as President Clinton is not serving as a U.S. government at the time of his appearance and when he is paid an honorarium. If not an employee, he may accept reimbursements of expenses and an honorarium for his speech/talk, but he may not receive any gifts from the Canadian government.”

--- HRC's financial disclosure form indicates that WJC received $175,000 from Canadian National Exhibition for this speech on 8/29/09.

3) CISCO: Request is submitted for WJC to speak at CISCO two months before HRC awards CISCO the State Department's Award for Corporate Excellence, holding a ceremony featuring the CISCO's CEO. According to HRC's financial disclosure form, WJC received $255,000 for this speech.

4) Other notable requests:

- Local foreign govt: Terife Island Council (local government of largest island in Canary Islands)
 - b. Private Equity Firms/Banks: ICE Canyon LLC, VISTA Equity, Harris Private Bank, TD Bank Financial, Whitton Investment Groups (London)
 - c. Foreign Based Organizations: Etisalat (UAE based telecomm co); Egyptian Junior Business Association; Friends of Cystic Fibrosis (Irish non-profit); Essex Regional Conservation Authority (Essex, Ontario); Wilbros Entertainment (Philippines, event to raise funds for Philippines charity); Miaor Entertainment Ltd (division of Grupo ABC based in Brazil); London Business Forum; Aditya Birla Management (Indian multinational conglomerate)
 - d. Universities: Southern Methodist, Tufts, American Jewish University

5) GWB: Two requests are for events with Deloitte and Radio City Music Hall that are a joint appearance between WJC and George W. Bush. WJC did the event with Deloitte, but not Radio City.

Tentatively, Terry is planning on Dec 9 in NY as the year end meeting which has BC tentative blessing but she's awaiting his final confirmation. Based on that I would suggest that we do a pre-call early next week which gives us a few days to turn the docs around and distribute 1 week in advance to all and since date is tentative and could change, we will be prepared either way. Please advise if this makes sense to all and then let ana know date preferences for the pre-call and if anyone else should be included (ie Terry M, Bob, Ira, others?). Thx Ig

Mary - I appreciate your offering to pass this on to John. I am wondering about how best to approach the White House about my possible re-nomination. My term is up June 2016, so there is time. But my political staff is getting anxious and starting to consider other jobs, and I'd like to be able to reassure them that the WH will re-nominate. I also think I'll have the best shot at getting through the Senate if the re-nomination goes over as early as possible. I spoke with WH Counsel Neil Eggleston, as well as someone in WH personnel but haven't heard back. Unions and NGO's have been offering to reach out on my behalf. Luke is also eager to start asking senate offices to contact the WH. But I'm not sure what's best. Any thoughts John might have would be much appreciated. This is my personal email or my cell is 202-257-7825. Also happy to come by with a bottle of wine (and my chief strategist, Luke!) and chat sometime. Thanks so much. Subject: Re: 'Huge gaps' in Clinton emails: Chairman of House Benghazi Committee | New York Post

I can't address the larger question of why the department didn't. I believe the answer is that Oct 2011 was well outside the scope of what State was asked for until November 2014. So Gowdy is complaining about the last 3 months. State is not exactly nimble and are still responding to the Oct 2012 letter from Issa.

But for our narrow equities, the time when Hrc least needed to email for work was on trips. She had both her Deputy Chiefs of Staff with her, me, always a high ranking State person most relevant to the issue — often career, a representative of the WH and the Pentago on the plane. Not to mention a four person State staff giving her paper. Not to mention she had a telephone. But it's primarily because there was no time where she had more 24/7 human connectivity than on the road. She was living in a mobile office.

Not at all. I'd add climate change as at least as compelling a long term economic as well as environmental challenge and I'm in a little different place on SS. I think you have to strengthen for the poor and most of the next decade is really about ssdi so we should be clear about that. But I agree with most of what you are worried about.

Erskine,

Thank you so much for these thoughtful notes! Gives me stuff to think about. Glad for you that you won't be called this direction over the summer, but sorry for me -- definitely our loss!

I hope you have lots of fun this summer with the family, and get at least a little rest and relaxation too.

See you soon!
All the best,

Katie. Happily for me no NY this summer. I'm on two large corporate boards that hold all their meetings in NY , thankfully except for the ones in late July -- having lived in the City for 12 years I'm certainly grateful for that. Our PE firm business also takes me to NY more than I wish ,but happily none are now scheduled in NY. I will however be there plenty in the fall.

If I come to the show , I'd hope to focus on the need to get these political candidates in both parties to discuss the following fiscal issues :

- (1) Before doing anything else how to spend the money we are spending now more wisely (something business , not for profits , and families in general must focus on and federal budgets largely ignore);
- (2) How to reform our tax code in a progressive manner such that America becomes more globally competitive and we produce more revenue ;
- (3) How to slow the rate of growth of health care spending and to make Social Security sustainably solvent (It's $800b cash negative over the next decade) so it will actually be there for the people who need it ;
- (4) How to at least partially replace the mindless , senseless , across the board cuts in the Sequester with more rational cuts in other mandatory items (no business makes their cuts across the board , they make them surgically reducing those which will have the least adverse effect on productivity) ;
- (5) How to use these additional resources to (a) reduce the debt , and (b) make the smart investments we must in defense , education , infrastructure , and high value added research so America is secure and globally competitive ; and
- (6) How they envision increasing economic mobility in the US (today if you are in the bottom 5th of the income level in America your child is 5 times less likely to get to the top 5th compared to a child born to parents in the top 5th (Warren's " lucky gene pool") , but if that kid born in the bottom 5th of the income level in America and gets a college degree that kid is 3 times more likely to move to the top .
- (7) These are the issues I'm concerned about today. I believe if MY generation doesn't put the ultra partisanship on the Left and Right aside and pull together , not apart , and make some of these really tough decisions , WE will be the first generation of Americans to leave the Country worse off than we found it.

Katie. I will do this when I'm up there for a board meeting. I'd hope to tie it to a time when anything remotely positive was possible in Washington. While there are numerous action forcing events on the horizon , it looks mighty dark now. I still feel the politics on both sides will drive the need to have positive accomplishments to point to that can only be done through legislation -- The president for legacy reasons and the Republican majorities to prove they can actually govern and thereby protect those majorities and Chairmanships. We will see.
Thank Becky for me. I will email you when I see a window. Erskine

Hi Erskine –

Hope all is well with you. Becky Quick asked me to reach out – she enjoyed seeing you at the Alfalfa Dinner a few weeks ago! – do you have any plans to come to New York this winter or spring? We'd love to have you join us as a guest co-host for an hour of Squawk Box when you're free. We've moved to a great new studio in midtown at the corner of 51st Street and 6th Avenue, so can save you the trip to NJ!

Are there any dates coming up that may work? We are live between 6 am and 9 am ET each weekday morning.

Thanks so much, and all the best,

Rough Transcript:

JAKE TAPPER: joining me now is democratic candidate for president and vermont senator, bernie sanders, thanks for joining us senator sanders. let's start with the call from david brock for you to release your medical records. why does your campaign consider this vile and desperate?

BERNIE SANDERS: well first of all, david brock is not a clinton ally, he's head of their superpack. and the superpack that receives millions of dollars from wealthy people. second of all, of course we're going to release our medical records. thank god i am very healthy. we will get our medical records out the same way that secretary clinton has gotten her records out. this is not a problem.

JAKE TAPPER: we are old enough to remember when hillary clinton was very protective. chelsea clinton, she's been involved in past clinton campaigns, but we've never seen her used to attack a clinton opponent until this week when she went after your health care plan. i know that you respect chelsea clinton and that you believe she's just flat wrong to suggest your plan would take away people's health care and she hasn't read it, but were you surprised that chelsea clinton was deployed in that way?

BERNIE SANDERS: i was. i mean, chelsea clinton is a very, very smart and capable young woman. i'm sure she loves her mother and she's trying to do everything she can to make sure her mom wins. that's natural. i have four kids, seven grandchildren, they're rooting for me. but i was a little disappointed that what chelsea said was simply not accurate. the issue that she was raising is that in republican conservative states, a medicare for all bill would not be implemented. that's not accurate. if a state does not go forward under my 2013 legislation federal government steps in. bottom line here jake is the united states is the only major country on earth that does not guarantee health care to all people, and yet, we spend much, much more per capita o health care than do the people of other countries. and we still have 29 million people uninsured and many will underinsured. So to continue the vision of fdr, harry truman, i believe health care is a right for all people. it will be politically difficult to achieve, but i will maintain that vision and fight for it. that's the goal i want to see.

JAKE TAPPER: and hillary clinton in her campaign keep going after you for it. in response, you tweeted a photograph this week of you and hillary clinton in 1993 in which she thanked you for your commitment to quote, real access, to health care for all americans, unquote. is this your way of suggesting that clinton's attacks today, as opposed to back then, that today's attacks are phony and insincere?

BERNIE SANDERS: well, the reason that we did that is what secretary clinton understands. is that i have throughout my political life, believed that all americans are entitled to health care. and when her campaign attacks me, they're saying, sanders wants to dismember all of the health care plans that are out there, the aca and want other plans and leave millions of people uninsured, that is obviously not true. she has always done that, i have known hillary clinton for 25 years, i, you know, have a lot of respect for her. her campaign should not be suggesting that my ideas will leave millions of people without health insurance. in fact, the opposite is true. what i want to do is to make sure every man, woman, and child in this country has health care. and i believe, jake, we can do it in a much more cost effective way than is currently the case. we are spending almost three times more than the british 50% more than the french on health care per capita. they provide health care to all people. we can do a lot better.

JAKE TAPPER: let's talk about the single payer health care plan proposal. you said on january 3rd, that you would release a plan on how to pay for it before the iowa caucuses. you repeated that on the state of the union address. we're two weekends one day away, are you prepared to release the details today?

BERNIE SANDERS: yes. i said we would do it, and we will do that. and here's the point that has to be made, my plan will save middle class families thousands of dollars a year on their health care proposals. we will not continue to see the drug campaigns in this country rip off the american people. last, jake, the three top drug companies in america made $45 billion in profits while senioring can't afford the medicine they desperately need. that's pretty crazy stuff. we will deal with that.

JAKE TAPPER: when are we going to see these -- the bottom line, how you're going to pay for this? when are we going to see the details.

BERNIE SANDERS: look, as you well know, i mean, i introduced in 2013 comprehensive legislation. i think it was 150 pages, it's complicated stuff, but we said we will get it out, and we will get it, in fact we're going to get it out shortly. i guess the reason it's a point of contention is because you said in september the only taxes you would raise on the middle class if you became president would be to fund your paid leave plan, but, when you've released single payer health care plans in the past, or advocated for them, they did include taxes that would hit the middle class. not because you wanted to, but because they were necessary to pay for it.

JAKE TAPPER: well, if you consider a medicare premium as a tax, you know, that's true. health care is expensive. but what we are doing, and this is a point, and it bothers me a little bit. republicans often make this attack, and i'm hearing too much of it from the clinton camp. we are eliminating private health insurance premiums. you're not going to have to pay any. so yes, medicare premiums will in fact be there for all people. but, at the end of the day, the middle class family getting rid of all private health insurance premiums will save thousands of dollars a year in their health care costs. and i think most people will be appreciative. the other point i want to make here, jake, is, you know, the vision that we're fighting for here is what went back to fdr, harry truman. if hillary clinton said look, new zealand a tough political fight, i agree with her. i'm not saying you're going to get this done the first two days of my presidency. but i think we can rally the american people around two principles. health care should be a right of all people. we should not be paying far more per capita than other countries on health care. and that's the fight i'm prepared to wage.

JAKE TAPPER: let's turn to the issue of guns, when you were on this program last july, i asked you about your vote in 2005 to shield gun manufacturers from lawsuits, you defended that vote. take a listen.

BERNIE SANDERS: if somebody has a gun, and it falls into the hands of a murderer, and this murderer kills somebody with a gun, do you hold the gun manufacturer responsible? not anymore than you would hold a hammer company responsible if somebody beat somebody over the head with a hammer. that is not what a lawsuit should be about.

JAKE TAPPER: but now, sir, you seem to want to amend that law and take away the immunity. hillary clinton just said that you flip-flopped.

BERNIE SANDERS: well, what i said, look, let me start this by saying, you know, i resent very much clinton camp saying, i'm in the nra lobby. i have a d minus, that's a d, like in david, d minus voting record from the nra. i likely lost an election, statewide election in 1988 because i was the only candidate running for congress who said you know what, military-style assault weapons should not be sold in america. i have always believed in a strong, instant background check. and doing away with the gun show loophole which is president is now trying to do –

JAKE TAPPER: the issue is the immunity.

BERNIE SANDERS: in term was this -- right, what i jake is there were provisions in that legislation end ending piercing am nation. making sure we have safety locks for kids in that building. than made sense to me. there were provisions, and i said many months ago, that did not make sense to me. if for example a manufacturer understands that he is selling guns to an area that are being distributed to criminals, of course that manufacturer should be held liable. there is new legislation that has now been, i think, it going to be introduced, and i am supportive of that. that is position that i've had for several months.

JAKE TAPPER: all right senator bernie sanders, thank you so much for your time, good luck tonight, sir.

BERNIE SANDERS: thank you very much.

Per my conversation with Jen just now there is a desire to respond to Gowdy's "granting" Secretary Clinton two extra weeks to response to his subpoena. We'd like to do so with a statement on the record, a draft of which is proposed below. Thanks very much.

Subject: updated scripts with budgets script_status.xls

It took a few days to get budgets out of folks but it is all attached now. We will need to move very quickly--a few of these firms need to hear by opening of business Tuesday West Coast time to get rolling. They need to reserve cameras, etc.

In short order I think we do the following.

1. Move on the three Fatigues spots with Mark Armour. We need to iron out script details with him. This will cost around $10,000 total for all the spots. We just need to reserve him Tuesday and then work on scripts the next few days.
2. Move on the two priorities spots--McCain and Romney. Move on McCain Children and McCain 1000 Years. This is about $100,000 after fees but we get four spots for that price. I say we give the go-ahead and then work on scripts Tuesday. They are shooting on Wednesday when Paul and I are in LA. They will shoot multiple scripts too. VoteVets is flying their vet tomorrow.
3. I think we move on McCain: McSame. This is about $45,000 after fees. Need to decide Tuesday. Hopefully we can package a campaign around this. We will need to work on scripts Tuesday and Wednesday for this one.
4. I think we look at shooting "Factory" for Romney on Thursday. Cost is about $70,000 because they shoot on location. The new script is decent.

This gives us 5 McCain spots, 3 Romney spots and 1 Huckabee spot.

I think we skip the "dating" for now because we don't have a messenger yet.

This would put us out about $225,000 or so which is still within reason. I earmarked $300,000 for ads. I'm still asking for prices for "Laugh" since it should be cheap and it is so different. I think we sideline "Fool" for now because we don't have the right talent yet.

I'm open to more ideas for where to go but our first order of business is to get the ones we've picked so far closer to perfect.

We need to talk first thing in the morning. Can we try for 9 AM? A smaller group of us will have to decide.

Subject: Re: Update: Earned Media Call

Quick agenda for today is below. One thing I would like to discuss is the rollout of HRC's women and girls initiative's progress report in the second week in March. The Foundation team has asked that we consider her doing some media. Something like an Ellen, either alone, with Chelsea, Melinda Gates, or both. This is not a must, and there are of course plenty of reasons why this might be something we simply pass on, but worth a discussion I think.

Talk to you all at 2pm. And (Philippe is) looking forward to those of you who are joining us via Skype.

1. Current Stories
2. No Ceilings Progress Report Rollout
3. Way Forward: What if anything should we be doing differently in terms of moving the ball/not.
4. Anything else?

Subject: RE: DRAFT Strategy Memo for Fourth Debate

I agree with all comments from Jim and Mandy and here are others.

Page 1 - I think the "beginning of the end" of this primary contest is too overblown. We are still weeks away from the first votes being cast and Sanders will have enough money to hang around for quite some time, even if it is just to keep prodding her to move left. I think this is not the frame of mind we need her in. We need her much more in the frame of mind reflected in Jim's first point below.

I also think Sanders has much less of a "problematic" record on minorities and I think ratcheting up things with her that just aren't that strong could lead her to overswing during the debate.

Page 3 – I am less convinced about attacks for support of the crime bill – Sanders voted for it and one rule I believe in is don't deliver an attack that can bite you in the ass. I also don't think her close relationship with Rahm will be an issue.

I think you're burying the lead regarding the centrality of domestic issues. I believe this debate is a major opportunity for her to drive her economic message and drive a strong contrast with Sanders on this, including but not limited to creating jobs of the future, a tough plan for reining in Wall St/shadow banking (including contrast on his derivatives vote.) I would put the focus on the economy as the central issue on page 1 of this message. We cannot let this part of her message be secondary to anything else. I would also make this point on page 4 in the strategic approach section. I believe when voters start caucusing/ voting their economic lives is going to be the number one driver of their vote.

She also has to be the candidate of the future making sure she gets to issues like education/ college /

Page 6 – Sorry but it just is not going to be credible that HRC is THE candidate who believes the rich are paying too little -- Sanders has built his whole campaign on taking on the billionaires and she cannot sell what you're suggesting. Hitting him on taxing the middle class is winning territory, not trying to convince anyone that she's tougher than he is when it comes to raising taxes on the wealthy.

Page 7 – Guns – I think we have a two part attack --- that may be better than the Charleston loophole (which I'm not sure anyone understands when they hear that shorthand). Sanders this weekend claimed he only voted against Brady Bill "one time" – Not true. He voted against it five times. Every time the bill was changed, he voted against it. WE should him for the 5 times and not being straight with the voters..... Would it be crazy to challenge him to admit finally twenty years later this was a terrible mistake?

Also on Obama – Sanders "weak" and "speculating" about a primary opponent is not the worst of what Sanders said. We are currently testing his actual language, which I will send after this so you have it. At a time when Republicans were obstructing and attacking the president every day, Sanders said "millions of Americans were disappointed" in him because he went so far to the right and he openly encouraged a primary against Obama saying it would be "a good idea" I think we really want/need in this blood stream and that Democratic primary voters, including younger ones, will really be turned off by this. It is also another example of Sanders not being straight with people about what he said at the time.

Here's the link:

<http://hotair.com/archives/2011/07/24/bernie-sanders-lets-primary-obama/>

I defer to you all – but I think turning him into a bit of a bullshitter during the debate will drive him crazy.

Agree with Margolis points.

One more note on race. Sanders has gotten considerably better both in rhetoric (Sandra Bland would be alive if she were white) and in substance. I'm not sure HRC is aware of this.

She could use a briefing on what he is saying. She should also remember to use the mothers she met with and other personal proof of her understanding of these issues.

This looks great. All the key strategic points seem right and my obsession with demeanor and focus on core message are addressed.

A couple of notes:

1. While this debate is taking place in SC and will heavily focus on race, I think she needs to keep in mind that a lot of IA and NH voters will be looking at this debate as the last opportunity to kick the tires before the caucus/primary. So while it's important for HRC to be fully engaged in the conversation there, she needs to look for opportunities to make our closing argument with IA and NH voters. The issues facing families in SC are the same ones facing families across the country.
2. Given the amount of coverage the Trump attack on WJC is getting, it's possible Holt will look for a way to bring this into the debate. I don't think we should address this in the memo, but we should discuss it in prep.
3. Given that Bernie has announced he intends to release his tax plan, it is likely the issue will have more prominence in debate 4. You reference taxes in the memo, but there will be new territory to cover.

Our last budget decisions are being made now -- can you help?

What we're doing here has always been improbable.

We're going up against some of the most powerful interests in American politics, and they are outspending us on the air in nearly every battleground state right now. This week alone, they're spending $100 million against us on the air.

And yet we still refuse to rely on outside groups, Washington lobbyists, or special-interest PACs to do the hard work for us. Our campaign is built by millions of ordinary Americans each doing their small part, one person at a time.

That's not the easy way to win elections, but that's what we do -- because it's the right way to do it.

The outcome of this race is not yet known. And this is the moment we all must decide how much we can give before the chance to make a difference is gone.

The campaign is making final budget decisions based on the resources we have at midnight tonight.

If you've waited until the last minute to give, this is the moment. This is the last time I'll ask you.

The other mass shooting that happened today in the United States

Washington Post

By Danielle Paquette December 2 at 6:31 PM

https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/wonk/wp/2015/12/02/the-other-mass-shooting-that-happened-today-in-the-united-states/?postshare=8721449103588250&tid=ss_tw

The rampage that claimed at least 14 lives in San Bernardino, Calif., isn't today's first mass shooting. Here's news you probably missed: A gunman in Savannah, Ga., shot four people early Wednesday, killing a woman and injuring three men.

Police haven't arrested a suspect, said Eunicia Baker, spokesperson for the Savannah Chatham Police Department. They also haven't released the names of the victims. The local news media barely acknowledged the murder: One local television station covered it in three paragraphs.

And the world spun on.

Then news broke that multiple attackers opened fire at a center for disabled adults in San Bernardino — a center that just hosted its holiday party yesterday.

Suddenly, the little-noticed crime in Georgia became the second mass shooting in a single day — and at least the third since Robert L. Dear Jr. opened fire at a Planned Parenthood clinic last week in Colorado springs.

After the Colorado Springs shootings, President Obama declared that this type of violence must not "become normal." But as my colleague Chris Ingraham points out, the data show that mass shootings are already normal. There have been more mass shootings than calendar days this year.

News reports collected by a Reddit community show there have been 355 mass shootings in 2015. The Mass Shooting Tracker, as its called, differs from other shooting databases in that it uses a broader definition than the FBI's old four-fatality rule: If bullets strike four people in the same attack, that's a mass shooting.

The big ones, of course, attract the national media, comments from the president, cries of terrorism. The small ones ... well, they have become just another police report in the United States.

Add your name to support Planned Parenthood against these deceptive and dirty attacks.

Dear John,

Planned Parenthood has become the target of a carefully orchestrated, deceptive attack -- and it's one of the most dangerous threats to reproductive rights we've faced in a long time.

A radical anti-choice group has released two dishonest, heavily doctored, undercover videos in an attempt to destroy Planned Parenthood -- a lifesaving organization that provides millions of women a year with health care services including abortion, contraception and breast exams.

Anti-choice members of Congress are already preparing legislation to try to use these phony videos to justify a wave of new attacks on reproductive freedom.

Sign the petition to stand with Planned Parenthood. Anti-choice members of Congress are already pushing to defund our nation's most trusted women's health care provider. Planned Parenthood needs to know we've got their back.

Planned Parenthood is one of the largest providers of health care to low-income women and the nation's top provider of sex education. Without Planned Parenthood, millions of women who rely on the organizations for cancer screenings, prenatal care, STD testing, birth control and abortion would have nowhere to turn. That would be a disaster for women and families across the country.

Sign the petition -- and take a stand for Planned Parenthood today.

These deceptive attacks are part of a decade-long campaign of deceiving the public, making false charges, and terrorizing women and their doctors -- all in order to ban abortion and cut women off from care at Planned Parenthood. We are NOT about to let this lying smear campaign succeed.

Thank you for fighting to keep reproductive freedom real for all women.

Americans Want Action on Energy Now

Seventy-five percent of Americans say that increased gasoline prices have caused a financial hardship for their families. They want Congress to do something, now. Conservatives have tried to capitalize on Americans' anger over gas prices with their "drill here, drill now" campaign. Progressives need to counter with proactive short- and long-term solutions, and show that it's Bush, McCain, and other conservatives who are blocking the way.

* New offshore drilling wouldn't help for almost 20 years. The Bush Administration admits that new offshore drilling "would not have a significant impact on domestic crude oil and natural gas production or prices" for almost 20 years. Sources

* There are real short-term solutions to the energy crisis, but they have all been blocked by Bush and congressional conservatives. Short term solutions include: tapping the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, banning gasoline price-gouging, cracking down on oil price speculators, and helping hard-pressed Americans with a tax break paid for by a windfall profits tax on Big Oil. Sources

* The real solution to the energy crisis is to end America's dependence on foreign oil. We can't drill our way to energy independence. It will take conservation, energy efficiency, and clean power. Yet progress has been blocked by Bush and conservatives in Congress. Long-term solutions include: investing in conservation, energy efficiency, and clean power; investing in renewable energy; and increasing auto fuel efficiency. Sources

Progressive solutions:

In the short term, tap the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, ban price gouging, crack down on speculators, and implement a windfall profits tax. In the long term, increase the percentage of power generated by renewable energy sources, increase fuel efficiency standards, and enact the Apollo Alliance plan for investing in conservation, energy efficiency and clean power—and create more than 3 million new jobs.

John, a quick update from my earlier email-

Thanks to the supporters who stepped up and donated this morning, I was able to get out of the office and knock a packet of doors and Governor O'Malley was able to continue on his tour around the state—knocking on doors and visiting a few different phone banks to talk to Iowans.

Keep it up! We need your support now more than ever. Every dollar we get in today can go out to the field tomorrow for caucus day. And with matching funds, your donation can be worth double to our campaign!

We will surprise the country if supporters like you continue to step up and commit to #HoldStrong for Governor O'Malley.

Subject: Speechwriting and message architecture

Madame Secretary,
One more thing and then I will leave you alone for the day.

I had a meeting with Joel today. His contract is now complete (we got the deal we originally wanted), so we buried the hatchet on what ended up being a heated negotiation and then discussed next steps on message.

Three things:

- 1) I explained that we needed to move forward with Dan as Speechwriter and I needed his help supporting that process. I said that John, Jen, Dan, and I were going to get a proposed process on paper so everyone is clear on how this will work moving forward.
- 2) I asked that he create a revised message architecture document so that you and the entire staff can (literally) be on the same page about message moving forward. I said we should use your launch speech as our base--and track any developments this week as you work out the stump. He agreed to that but said he felt we needed to have a bit more time to talk with you first. Which leads to my third item...
- 3) I think it would be really helpful to pull the team together with you next week to debrief on this week--discuss your stump, what worked and didn't work during the launch and then task Joel and Dan with developing the message one-pager out of that meeting. And formalizing your stump, if that's something you want. Would that work for you? I have not idea what works for the schedule, but wanted to see if you think the idea makes sense.

Let me know! Thanks!

HRC, John --

If you both continue to agree that taking a call from Malcolm makes sense, I can get it teed up tomorrow or Friday.

There are two keys, from my perspective.

First, that you and he agree what he is going to say about it -- something simple like, "she thinks we need to all work together to put the relationship on a more constructive footing, to get back to basics, and to ensure that Israel never becomes a partisan issue."

Second, that if he raises Iran, you tell him you'd be happy to discuss at some point in greater detail but not get pulled into a long conversation. (I'm also happy to follow up with him on this -- he and I have a very good relationship on Iran.)

John,

As Thanksgiving approaches, I wanted to send a note to tell you how grateful I am for all of your support. This campaign wouldn't be possible without people like you, and I know that together we are going to make a big difference for all Hoosiers.

I have a lot to be thankful for, from my beautiful family to all of the opportunities I have had to serve our great state. As I travel across Indiana, I've had the chance to hear about the lives of many Hoosiers. One of the best parts of meeting so many people is hearing about their hopes and dreams and finding ways to ensure they have every chance at achieving them.

And now today, I'd like to hear about what you're thankful for this year. Take a minute today and let us know.

Whether it's family, friends, turkey, college football, or something else entirely, we want to hear from you. Hearing about what you are thankful for is a big inspiration for our whole team.

Take our quick survey and let us know what you're thankful for this season.

Thanks,

Baron

If their goal was to make the speech look completely political, bring the President of the United States down to be on par with the crazy Republican candidates and elevate John Boehner - this was a great strategy.

Subject: Romney

John,

Last night, Rep. Paul Ryan gave a speech that was full of rhetoric and deceiving on the facts. I just finished watching Mitt Romney's convention speech and it was more of the same.

It was no surprise to hear Mitt Romney making false attacks against President Obama and telling his base everything it wanted to hear. It is clear his vision for America means denying women access to basic medical care, telling people who they can and can't marry, and putting big oil profits and wasteful subsidies for corporations that ship our jobs overseas ahead of middle-class families.

But there's one thing he did tonight we should be thankful for: he reminded us why we need to stand with President Obama. After all of Romney's and Ryan's baseless attacks, join me in telling President Obama that we stand with him:

Subject: PPP national survey - HRC 53 - Sanders 32 (82-8 among AAs)

For those pushing back on PPP, this also out ...

On the Democratic side Hillary Clinton leads Bernie Sanders 53/32. Sanders does keep gradually moving closer- our previous couple polls had her leading 56/28 in December and 59/26 in November. But he still has some weaknesses that may make it hard for him to catch up. Primary among these is African American voters- Clinton leads 82/8 with them and has a 79/9 favorability compared to 27/23 for Sanders. That does suggest some possibility for Sanders to improve his position- part of his problem is just that black voters don't really know him yet- but he's starting at a tremendous disadvantage that will make the upcoming run of Southern primaries very difficult for him.

Subject: Senator Leahy Display-Hotung Dining Room

Dear Colleagues,

I want to let you know about a fascinating exhibit we will be hosting on campus in the Hotung Dining Room from the start of the school year through Reunion Weekend in October. This year is our esteemed graduate Senator Patrick Leahy's 50th Reunion Year. What you may not know about Senator Leahy is that he is also an artist. Throughout his years of service, the Senator has used photography to create a record of many of the significant historical events of our time. Whether he's looking over President Obama's shoulder as the president signs the 2014 Farm Bill, snapping images of the Dalai Lama at Middlebury College, or leaning out from the rubble to watch children fly kites in the skies of Afghanistan, the perspective is Leahy's own.

This fall, as we honor Senator Leahy on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of his law school graduation and the 40th anniversary of his Senate service with our Robert F. Drinan, SJ, Alumni Public Service Award, we are also delighted to be able to exhibit more than 50 of his photographs in our Hotung Dining Room. As we use the Dining Room for our workshops, colloquia, and other events this fall, we will be able to benefit from his unique perspective, witnessing historical events not only through the lens of a camera but filtered through his thoughtful, perceptive, and compassionate mind.

If you are interested in learning more about Senator Leahy's professional life as experienced through his photography, I will discuss those topics with the Senator in front of alumni and students during Reunion Weekend. I think it will be a fascinating conversation about one of our country's great leaders, and I welcome you to attend. It will be held on Saturday, October 18, 2014, from 2:00 to 3:30 p.m. in the Hart Auditorium. If you would like to come, please RSVP to Matt Calise at mfc37@law.georgetown.edu or 202.662.9512.

Best,
Bill

Friend —

Can I be real for a second?

I'm proud to be part of the kind of campaign that Terry described in his email yesterday — he's criss-crossing the Commonwealth, talking policy with voters, and building the volunteer army that's going to win this election.

But Ken Cuccinelli's radical friends are dumping strings-attached money into his campaign coffers. And now, one of those groups is piling on with the first negative ads of the election.

Here's the real part — those kinds of tactics can be effective. To compete, we need to build a bigger, smarter organization. And to do that, we need to smash our important April fundraising goal.

Will you help us out? Click here to donate $5 before we reach the April fundraising deadline.

<https://donate.terrymcauliffe.com/bigger-organization>

With 14 hours left in April, we're $11,327.45 away from our fundraising goal. It's critical we hit it to make sure we have the resources we need to build an organization to take on Ken Cuccinelli and his ultra conservative backers.

That's why I'm counting on you to make a $5 donation today:

Sara -

Per our conversation, John Manly is close to Michael D'Antonio (who wrote Never Enough about Trump) and Michael wants to meet with the Clinton campaign's opposition research team. He does not want to be paid. And he has 9 hours of taped conversations with Donald Trump.

John Manly needs to join the meeting as well. I have copied him on this email.

John, Sara is a close friend and a senior advisor on Hillary's campaign. She gets things done!!

Sara, let us know the next steps. Also, as I mentioned, Mr. D'Antonio resides on Long Island.

Thanks again,

Subject: Arrangements

Hello all...

I've been waiting to send details until all was finalized, but specific arrangements are still tentative...it appears that my father's service will be Wednesday, July 1 at St. Demetrious Church. Time remains in question...I would assume there will be a brief visitation at 10:00 followed by the service at 10:30. We'll follow the same schedule as we did for my mother...brief service at Elmwood, followed by lunch at the Rosewood Restaurant.

I'd appreciate it if you would let anyone you may have contact with know...I haven't been in touch with anyone other than Glenn's family. I recently had an email from Tim McCarthy ... also, I had a letter from Ken Teglia right after my mother died asking about her ... if you are in touch with either of them, that might be nice to let them know.

Thanks for your thoughts...it has been a very difficult three years.

Subject: Update on a few things

1) Blake Gottesman and I are going to set up a twice-daily phone call for the two of us to hash through various issues that need resolution. I'm going to send out an email to senior transition team and let them know that if there are issues that need to be raised with the WH that they should let me know. Most will be administrative stuff (like agency space, briefings etc.), but if there's anything more sensitive, I will get signoff from you in advance before I raise it with Blake.

2) MOU is fine. Bolten will sign tonight, and I'll have a copy for you to sign tomorrow. And then the agency teams can get to work.

3) Alyssa and I have been emailing about military aircraft. The cost is significantly cheaper especially given Biden's frequent travels to Chicago, so we're going to explore the use of it on a reimbursable basis. Unless you object, I'm going to send a letter to Blake to start that process.

4) We've already fired one agency team leader who leaked his work that he was working on a team. So, we're taking very seriously the "no leak" mandate.

Subject: ALERT:

This week has been both good and bad...

First: An outside group with ties to Speaker Boehner launched a huge ad buy in targeted races across the country.

Then: Leader Pelosi issued a call to action before our HUGE FEC deadline.

And then something incredible happened: Thousands of people just like you stood up and donated whatever they could to make sure we could stop Boehner and the Koch brothers attacks from overwhelming Democrats nationwide.

But the bad news is we're still about \$50,000 away from our record for best month this year. Can you click here before the FINAL quarterly FEC deadline and donate now?

We can't do this alone, John. With Boehner, the Koch brothers, and Karl Rove set to spend MILLIONS to try and attack Democrats, failing to meet this deadline means we won't have necessary funding in critical races around the country.

Subject: HRC @ Toner Prize

Attachments: 2015-03-20 Toner Prize - 11pm.docx

All, here are draft remarks for the Toner Prize event on Monday evening.

We had talked about a few possible goals for this speech: 1) clear the air a bit with the press, possibly with self-deprecating humor; 2) explain the important role that serious, fact-based journalism plays in our democracy, as opposed to gotcha-style politics of personal destruction; 3) and play a little offense on health care given that Monday is the 5-year anniversary of the ACA.

Of these sections, the first one is where I could really use your input. Do the jokes in here work? Do you have suggestions for punching any of them up? Robin's husband Peter likes the idea of HRC being funny up there, and she says she is open to it as well, but we'll have to see if she really goes for it.

Thanks

Dan

As a follow up to our call. (Zach, please transmit to Steve.)

1. Tom will continue to write memo on campaign and include feedback.
2. John will decide this week on his status. Susan will decide within 10 days on her status.
3. After these decisions, we will have an Anna Burger and Rob McKay discussion about joint fund raising with DA including an MPB strategy.
4. Discussion with lawyers as a group--counsel options: Joe Sandler, Lynn Utrecht, Larry Gold. I recommend Joe Sandler because he will be easier to use. Utrecht was great for the 2004 work but will she be harder to reach with her Clinton work?
5. Composition of planning group--Tom will recommend
6. Tom will come up with a proposed strategy with America Votes and larger partners
7. Tom will draft calendar of work to be done.
8. Next meeting Friday, October 12, 10:00 AM Eastern. Lindsay will circulate a number.

We've shared the list with Phil to give him an understanding of the universe we are working from, but with the understanding that changes will be made as we evaluate the process moving forward. In my defense of my subjectivity, I was referring to Cheryl, Huma & Jake - whose stellar service I'd benefit from. Was written for her as much as us. Allows her to go up and out in a way she can't do when talking about her own actions. And in effect, label her own actions the same way.

I am so proud though of what was accomplished while I had the honor of representing the United States to the world as America's Secretary of State. And I am so proud of all the dedicated public servants who were part of that work - including the team that came in with me, and left with me. I was proud of them then, and I am proud of them now. They worked tirelessly, gave everything of themselves in support of our country's goals. We are all accountable to the American people for our work - but they simply don't deserve to be attacked this way. Despite that though, they have committed - as I have - to being as helpful as possible to those asking the questions. And if those people are truly open to listening to their answers and accepting the facts, they will see that we should all be proud of them."

Two things:

1) As to the server turn over, I think we decided to say something like "the server that was used during her tenure as Secretary of State."

2) I would prefer not to use the "March 18, 2009" date, because we know there were other emails using the her clintonemail.com address prior to that date. Could we make this more vague, like "early in her term as SOS"? Or would this change provide a "gotcha" target--if so, not worth it, since this is the date of the earliest email in the PST of her emails, as I understand it.

Subject: Updated Website Factsheet

All -- Nick and I updated the factsheet/Q&A for the website. See attached.

I copy and pasted new/expanded questions below for ease. All else mirrors what's currently on the website (<https://www.hillaryclinton.com/p/briefing/factsheets/2015/07/13/email-facts/>) -- with some minor tweaks, such as we now have over 1250 emails deemed personal records and adding in more "As she said before..

Let me know your thoughts...

Thx

New/Expanded Q's

Clinton said she did not use her email to send or receive classified information, but the State Department and two Inspectors General said some of these emails do contain classified information. Was her statement inaccurate?

No information in Clinton's emails was marked classified at the time she sent or received them. Clinton only used her account for unclassified email.

When information is reviewed for public release, it is common for information previously unclassified to be upgraded to classified if the State Department or another agency believes its public release could cause potential harm to national security, law enforcement or diplomatic relations.

After reviewing a sampling of the 55,000 pages of emails, the Inspectors General have proffered that four emails, which did not contain any classified markings and/or dissemination controls, should have been classified at the time they were sent. The State Department has said it disagrees with this assessment.

Clinton hopes the State Department and other relevant agencies will sort out as quickly as possible which of the 55,000 pages of emails are appropriate to release to the public.

Is Department of Justice conducting a criminal inquiry into Clinton's email use?

No. As the Department of Justice and Inspectors General made clear, the IG's made a security referral. This was not criminal in nature as misreported by some in the press. The Department of Justice is now seeking assurances about the storage of materials related to Clinton's email account.

Is it true that her email server and a thumb drive were recently turned over the government. Why?

Again, when information is reviewed for public release, it is common for information previously unclassified to be upgraded to classified if the State Department or another agency believes its public release could cause potential harm to national security, law enforcement or diplomatic relations.

It is her hope that State and the other agencies involved in the review process will sort out as quickly as possible which emails are appropriate to release to the public, and that the release will be as timely and as transparent as possible.

In the meantime, her team has worked with the State Department to ensure her emails are stored in a safe and secure manner.

As a result, she directed her team to give her email server to the Department of Justice, as well as a thumb drive containing copies of her emails already provided to the State Department. We have pledged to cooperate with the government's security inquiry—if it decides it needs to see more, we will arrange for that to happen.

Would this issue not have arisen if she used a state.gov email address?

Even if Clinton's emails had been on a government email address and government device, these questions would be raised prior to public release.

While State Department's review of her 55,000 emails brought the issue to the Inspectors General's attentions, the emails that were classified prior to public release were on the unclassified .gov email system. They were not on the separate, closed system used by State Department for handling classified communications.

Subject: New Poll: In Era of Anger, Voters Demand Big Reform of Campaigns

In Era of Anger, Voters Demand Big Changes 🚨 Broad Support for Small Donor-Driven Reform of Campaigns

Voters are angry. They are angry at an economy that does not work for average people and a pay-to-play culture in Washington that ignores the voices of working families to lard more favors and breaks to wealthy campaign donors. And they demand systematic change.

In a nationally representative survey of 900 likely 2016 voters conducted by Democracy Corps, an impressive 72 percent support a new law that would provide qualified candidate with limited public matching funds for small contributions they raise from constituents. Nearly four in ten (39 percent) strongly support this proposal. When this and other reform measures to reduce the influence of money in politics are played out in real campaign simulations, Democrats who embrace this reform, including Hillary Clinton and down-ballot congressional candidates, find a significant electoral advantage even in the face of attack.^[1]

Voters Upset about Current Campaign System

Voters are frustrated with the way election campaigns are funded today. They are most disturbed by the fact that the big campaign donors today do not represent the electorate – they are mostly rich, white, older and male in a country that is increasingly younger, more diverse and where women are a majority – and have made their fortunes in finance and oil and coal (39 percent find this most upsetting).

They are also concerned that super PACs for many presidential candidates have raised more money than candidates have raised for their own campaigns (33 percent most upsetting), and that just 158 families have contributed nearly half of all of the money given to campaign thus far (33 percent most upsetting).^[2] The cluster of concerns about the role money is playing in the presidential election all score above 30 percent, underscoring an “all-of-the-above” viewpoint. In short, voters are concerned about all aspects of the problem of money in politics.^[3]

Read the full memo

See the graphs

Read on our website

 @DemCorps

 Democracy Corps

Facts about how election campaigns are funded these days	Percent most upsetting facts
The big campaign donors are overwhelmingly white, rich, older and male, and have made their money in finance, oil and coal in a nation that is increasingly younger, more diverse, and where women are a majority.	39 percent
The Super PACs supporting Marco Rubio, Ted Cruz, Jeb Bush and Chris Christie have all raised much more money than they have raised for their own campaigns.	33 percent
Just 158 families contributed nearly half of all the money given to presidential campaigns so far.	33 percent
Candidates spend more than half their time raising money from the wealthiest Americans.	31 percent
Small donations from people like you and me make up a very small part of where candidates get money, which means candidates are talking to the wealthy more than ordinary Americans.	30 percent

Broad Support for Change

An impressive 72 percent of voters support big changes in our campaign finance system to include public financing of campaigns and a system of matching funds for small donations. Critically, this is not simply a reflection of progressive support, but reveals the will of a broad coalition of voters including Independents, Trump voters and Tea party supporters.

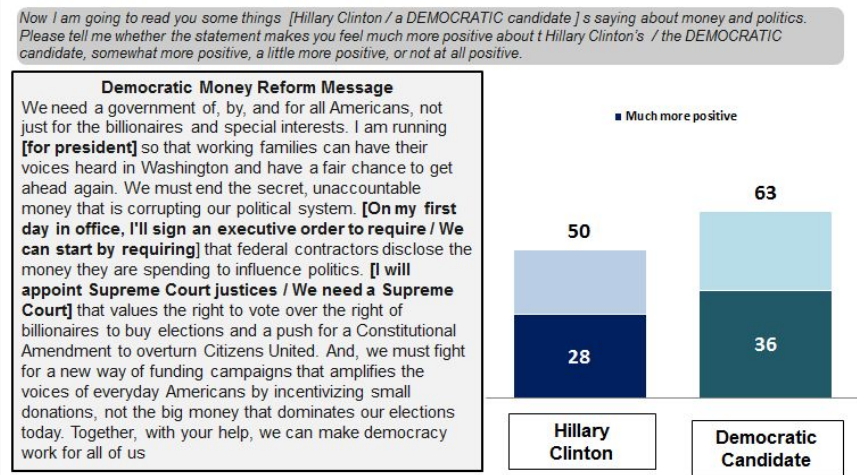

Support reaches 74 percent among Democrats (42 percent strongly favor), but some of the highest and most intense support is among Independent voters (76 percent favor, 47 percent strongly favor). Support also remains high among insurgent groups on the political Right including Trump voters (69 percent favor) and Tea Party supporters (66 percent favor).

Serious Electoral Impact

Money-in-politics reform carries significant electoral bite as well. In the face of a serious and largely unanswered attack, Democratic candidates who embrace this change improve their electoral position.

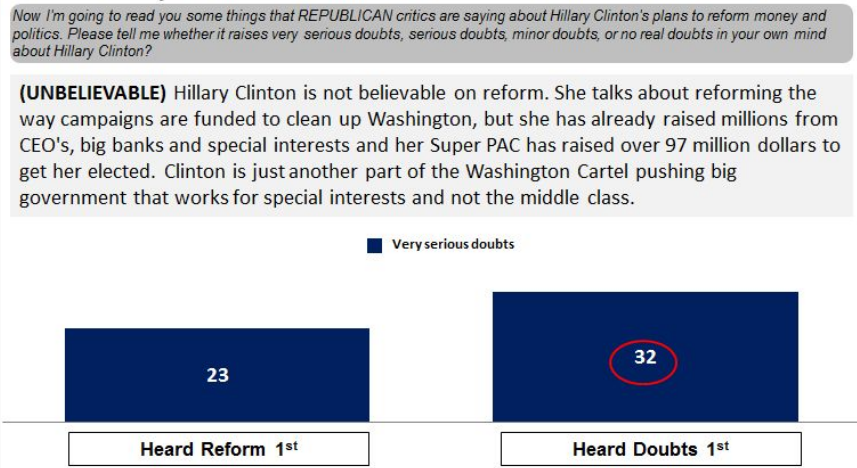

Nearly two-thirds of voters (63 percent) react positively to a message from a Democratic candidate embracing these reforms, including 61 percent of Independent voters and 81 percent of voters under age 30. While history complicates the issue to some extent for Secretary Clinton, half of voters also react favorably to her full-throated support for change.[\[4\]](#)

Voters also heard a series of attacks launched against both Secretary Clinton and Democratic candidates regarding the both candidate’s own fundraising, and the campaign reforms proposed.

One impressive finding is the resilience of down-ballot Democratic candidates when attacked as not credible in light of their own fundraising. Just 17 percent say they have very serious doubts about the Democratic candidate who “accept[ed] millions of dollars in campaign contributions from Wall Street and corporations,” the least concerning of the doubts raised against them. Incumbent Democrats should not be wary of running on reform because of their own fundraising.

Perhaps most important is how a strong Clinton offense on this issue mitigates against the inevitable Republican attacks on her campaign. Voters who hear Clinton’s embrace of reform first are far less likely to find credible attacks on her past fundraising. It is imperative that Secretary Clinton pre-empt these attacks by elevating her plans to reform elections and reduce the influence of money in politics.

Conclusion

Voters want change this cycle. They reasonably believe the system is rigged against them and that representative government of, by, and for all Americans no longer defines our democracy. As a result, they embrace systematic reforms to restore our system of government, including small donor-driven reforms, and support candidates who feel likewise.

[1] The survey among 900 likely 2016 voters was conducted from December 5-9, 2015, using a list of 2012 voters, 2014 voters, and new registrants. Unless otherwise noted, the margin of error for the full sample is +/- 3.26 percent at 95 percent confidence.

[3] Respondents were asked to choose their top two concerns for this question.

Hi Emily,

I wanted to give you a quick update on my thought process about joining Optoro. As you know, Toby and I had drinks last night. It was really fun to begin to get to know him a bit better, and particularly hear more about his longer term vision for the company and how I'll be able to support this and grow within the organization. I am very excited about the role and I am confident that I'll be able to bring a tremendous amount of value and insight to the job.

As you know, I had been looking forward to talking to Toby more last night on some of my bigger picture questions about the role and working together before diving into specifics on the terms. He suggested that we can work together on my additional questions regarding the specifics of the offer.

As we discussed on the phone, the economics is still a very important consideration for me since for the next few years the salary, bonus potential and relatively thin benefits package represent a significant retrenchment off my current compensation and trajectory (~40-50%+ reduction in the near term, with net result of being more or less financially neutral assuming returns of 3-4x on 10K options). Thus, I feel the current offer is off balance considering my qualifications, unique experience and passion that I'd bring to Optoro and this role as well as industry norms.

I really believe in the future of the company and love the people so I am comfortable taking on more risk and near term trade offs, but I'd expect to participate more meaningfully in the potential upside. Thus, I propose the following adjustments to the offer.

a) Increase the options from 10,000 to 15,000 over the same vesting period.

b) Increase the signing bonus to 10-15K, payable back within 1 year of leave or termination.

On an easier note, since this process took a bit longer than expected, I'd need to push back the start date to October 5th, which I believe still aligns with new hire orientation next month (I need ~3 weeks to give notice / allow time to wrap up my project at McK and move).

Thanks again for all of your help and support throughout this process. I look forward to hearing back and please let me know if you'd like to discuss by phone.

best,
Mae

Joseph,

Good morning.

As you probably know, we only manufactured the shades, we did not install nor program. While we could certainly make a service stop, there would be a minimum service charge of $250 + tax for this kind of repair.

I suggest you contact International Blind who did both the installation and programming and who should still be providing this service. We of course are responsible for any additional window treatments we have and will be providing to residents.

Professor Francois taught at Knox from 1963 until his retirement in 2002, and held positions as the faculty representative on athletics, assistant to the president of the College, vice president for development, and served as ambassador for Knox in Galesburg. At the time of his retirement he held the Szold Distinguished Professorship in Psychology.

Professor Francois taught virtually every course in the psychology curriculum, many of which he developed. His high standards and rigorous expectations won him the respect of students and colleagues.

Hi Everyone

I wanted to follow up for advice on a point coming out of last night's labor dinner. The IAM is hosting their board in NYC from August 12-14th, Buffenbarger will be calling for the endorsement vote during this time. Tom requested that the Secretary stop by Sec. Roach's retirement dinner August 14th to accept the endorsement from the board. I understand that the Secretary is scheduled to be in Iowa. I'd like to get back with IAM on a alternative plan that works for both of us. The tricky part is that Buffenbarger is having his entire board fly in for the August 12-14th dates.

Suggestions...

1. Would the Secretary's schedule permit her to be in NYC either August 12th or 13th? Could she stop by?
2. If she can not make those dates, perhaps she could call into the board meeting and thank them? I think we should try and find out a alternative date in the future that would work for a in person stop by and touch with Tom's board as well. I could find out from IAM what those alternative dates might be, not sure that they exist yet.

Other ideas? I'm hoping to follow up with IAM today if possible. Thank you!

Dear VoteVets.org Supporter,

The Senate will soon vote on an amendment that will repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell. Backed by the White House and Congressional leaders, the amendment will make clear that the policy is on track to be repealed, as soon as the Pentagon develops a plan to institute the repeal. The amendment (sponsored by Iraq vet Patrick Murphy, who you helped get to the House in 2006 and 2008) was passed by the House yesterday and the Senate Armed Services Committee. This is a crucial moment, and we need your help.

CALL YOUR SENATORS NOW DEMANDING THE VOTE
FOR THE REPEAL AT 202-224-3121

When you call, be polite, but firm. Tell the person who answers the phone that you are a constituent, and a veteran. Let them know when and where you served. Say that you want your Senator to vote for the amendment to repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell, that would be attached to the Defense Authorization Bill.

Every single call matters, so please, take a moment to call the Congressional switchboard above, to speak with your Senators' offices.

Let's get this done.

E-mail is great and all, but wouldn't this look prettier in a browser?

Office of Advancement

July 28, 2015

Dear President's Circle Members,

It is my pleasure to share with you some good news this morning. We just closed the books on the 2014-15 fiscal year, and I'm proud to report that donors gave more than $18 million to Knox this year.

This year's fundraising success follows on the heels of two record-setting years. You may remember that we set a fundraising record two years ago in 2013, when we raised $17.7 million in a single year. And last year, a $5-million gift from Dick '57 and Joan Whitcomb '56 to support a new art building set a record as the largest gift from living donors in College history. The Whitcomb's gift significantly contributed to $19.5 million in total giving for fiscal year 2014, the most Knox ever raised in a single year.

This year's total of $18,794,112 in cash came from 7,743 alumni, parents, friends, and private organizations, and the donations support Knox faculty and students, the College's educational program, annual operations, and capital improvements. To give you a sense of how the $18.8 million is being used by the College, here's a quick breakdown of the total:

- $3.6 million in recurring gifts to the Knox Fund;
- $2 million for enhancements to the physical campus, including completion of the renovation of Alumni Hall, upgrades to Turner Track at Trevor Field and the Meridan Tennis Courts, and gifts toward the new Whitcomb Art Building;
- $3.2 million in endowment to support faculty compensation and student experiences; and
- $10 million in realized estate gifts in support of faculty, scholarships, and College operations.

This year marked the return of Alumni Hall as a functioning hub of the campus after being shuttered for nearly 40 years, and design work continues on the new Whitcomb Art Building with plans to begin construction later this year. Design work is also progressing on creating a contemporary, environmentally-sustaining, educational and residential facility at the College's Green Oaks Biological Field Station.

Each of these efforts is part of the ongoing Above & Beyond: Initiatives for Knox. Since 2011, the Above & Beyond initiatives have raised $12.6 million for Alumni Hall and $38.6 million in support of faculty, students, and other campus facilities, for a total of more than $50 million.

Please join me in congratulating Advancement's dedicated staff for yet another extraordinary fundraising year. And, on behalf of all members of the Knox community, I'd like to thank you for your continued generosity. President's Circle donors represent 13 percent of all donors to Knox, but provide 90 percent of all dollars raised. Your leadership and support allows the College to provide a 21st-century education for 1,400 talented and promising students.

And this isn't the only good news coming from Knox. As of today, we are set to welcome 435 new students to campus this fall -- the second largest entering class in more than 40 years -- and 30 students more than where we stood last year at this same time. I am pleased to share that nearly one-third of the entering class is recruited student-athletes, a share comparable to other highly selective liberal arts colleges. We received a record number of applications for the class and admitted 63 percent of them -- the second lowest admit rate in the College's history. This success was made possible by the hard work of many offices and individuals across campus, including Admission, Athletics, and Communications, whose renewed efforts to communicate with, recruit, and welcome prospective students to Knox are seeing tangible results.

As you can imagine, the College is busily working to welcome our new students to Knox this fall. Facilities workers are hard at work preparing the campus for new and returning students, painting dorm rooms, renovating learning spaces, and making other necessary upgrades to campus facilities. Two weekends ago, Laura Behling, dean of the College, and a group of faculty traveled to Chicago to meet with 30 incoming students and their families as they prepare to enter Knox this fall, and Knox faculty and staff are in the final stages of planning a new summer bridge program that is designed to help students with the transition to college life.

We simply could not do this work without you. Your support makes all of this, and more, possible. On behalf of our students, faculty and staff, I thank you, again, for all that you do for Knox.

Sincerely,

Teresa L. Amott
President

Subject: Please Rally in Tel Aviv draws thousands plus Eyeless in Gaza by Uri Avnery, chair of the Israeli peace movement: Gush Shalom

Tikkun { tē-kūn } to heal, repair, and transform the world

Editor's Note: For those who think all Israelis are rallying around the war efforts of the Netanyahu government, the big peace rally Saturday night in Tel Aviv comes as an important corrective! See the stories below. And please read Uri Avnery's article below that substantiates the point I'm about to make in the next paragraph. Avnery's Gush Shalom peace movement helped create the intellectual foundation for this demonstration--which is what we in the Network of Spiritual Progressives also focus on: consciousness transformation, because that is the necessary prerequisite for building a transformed political reality. So, to get to my latest reflections on the Gaza war:

One of the most bizarre responses I've gotten to some of what I've written on Gaza is the whine "What can we do? They are shelling us?" This rarely comes with an acknowledgment that the shells almost never get through (for which I'm quite thankful, because I want my people to be safe). Of course, the obvious answer that seems beyond the capacity of these respondents to imagine is: What Israel can do is apologize for its part in creating the Palestinian refugee problem and for all the damage that has happened since then (not 100% responsible, but apologize for its part instead of pretend to be the righteous victim), end the occupation of the West Bank and the blockade of Gaza (my book Embracing Israel/Palestine lays out how that could be done in a way that would be both respectful to Palestinians and safe for Israelis www.tikkun.org/eip) and assist in creating an economically and politically viable Palestinian state, and do so in a spirit of repentance, and genuine open-heartedness. That's what Israel could do. It reminds me of the days when US liberals would say to us in the anti-war movement against the war in Vietnam, "You are right that this is a mess, but how can we get out now?" Our answer was simple: with boats and airplanes. At the time that was dismissed as simplistic, but after another thirty thousand Americans were killed, the ruling elites of the country figured out just what we had figured out years before--that it was as easy as getting into planes and boats and leaving. Of course, Israel is not the same situation--they live next door to the Palestinian people. But they could try generosity and caring for the other (no, when Israel left Gaza before, it wasn't with a spirit of generosity, but as a trick, refusing to give control to the Palestinian Authority, saying there was no one to talk to, and knowing that that would be giving Gaza to Hamas, which is what the rightwing strategists wanted in order to precipitate a civil war among the Palestinians). This time they could try an honest strategy of generosity. Unlikely that they will until lots of more innocent people, both Israelis and Palestinians lose their lives or their limbs. And this continues to break my heart. -Rabbi Michael Lerner

Eyeless in Gaza

by Uri Avnery

THE TROUBLE with war is that it has two sides.

Everything would be so much easier if war had only one side. Ours, of course.

There you are, drawing up a wonderful plan for the next war, preparing it, training for it, until everything is perfect.

And then the war starts, and to your utmost surprise it appears that there is another side, too, which also has a wonderful plan, and has prepared it and trained for it.

When the two plans meet, everything goes wrong. Both plans break down. You don't know what's going to happen. How to go on. You do things you have not planned for. And when you have had enough of it and want to get out, you don't know how. It's so much more difficult to end a war than to start a war, especially when both sides need to declare victory.

That's where we are now.

HOW DID it all start? Depends where you want to begin.

Like everywhere else, every event in Gaza is a reaction to another event. You do something because the other side did something. Which they did because you did something. One can unravel this until the beginning of history. Or at least until Samson the Hero.

Samson, it will be remembered, was captured by the Philistines, blinded and brought to Gaza. There he committed suicide by bringing the temple down on himself and all the leaders and people, crying out: "Let my soul die with the Philistines!" (Judges 16:30)

If that's too remote, let's start with the beginning of the present occupation, 1967.

(There was a forgotten occupation before that. When Israel conquered the Gaza Strip and all of Sinai in the course of the 1956 Suez war, David Ben-Gurion declared the founding of the "Third Israeli Kingdom", only to announce in a broken voice, a few days later, that he had promised President Dwight Eisenhower to withdraw from the entire Sinai Peninsula. Some Israeli parties urged him to keep at least the Gaza Strip, but he refused. He did not want to have hundreds of thousands more Arabs in Israel.)

A friend of mine reminded me of an article I had written less than two years after the Six Day War, during which we occupied Gaza again. I had just found out that two Arab road-construction workers, one from the West Bank and one from the Gaza Strip, doing exactly the same job, were paid different wages. The Gaza man was paid much less.

Being a member of the Knesset, I made inquiries. A high-level official explained to me that this was a matter of policy. The purpose was to cause the Arabs to leave Gaza and settle in the West Bank (or elsewhere), in order to disperse the 400 thousand Arabs then living in the Strip, mostly refugees from Israel. Obviously this did not go so very well - now there are about 1.80 million there.

Then, in February 1969, I warned: "(If we go on) we shall be faced with a terrible choice - to suffer from a wave of terrorism that will cover the entire country, or to engage in acts of revenge and oppression so brutal that they will corrupt our souls and cause the whole world to condemn us."

I mention this not (only) to blow my own horn, but to show that any reasonable person could have foreseen what was going to happen.

IT TOOK a long time for Gaza to reach this point.

I remember an evening in Gaza in the mid-90s. I had been invited to a Palestinian conference (about prisoners), which lasted several days, and my hosts invited me to stay with Rachel in a hotel on the sea-shore. Gaza was then a nice place. In the late evening we took a stroll along the central boulevard. We had pleasant chats with people who recognized us as Israelis. We were happy.

I also remember the day when the Israeli army withdrew from most of the Strip. Near Gaza city there stood a huge Israeli watchtower, many floors high, "so that the Israeli soldiers could look into every window in Gaza". When the soldiers left, I climbed to the top, passing hundreds of happy boys who were going up and down like the angels on the ladder in Jacob's dream in the Bible. Again we were happy. They are probably Hamas members now.

That was the time when Yasser Arafat, son of a Gaza Strip family, returned to Palestine and set up his HQ in Gaza. A beautiful new airport was built. Plans for a large new sea-port were circulating.

(A big Dutch harbor-building corporation approached me discreetly and asked me to use my friendly relations with Arafat to obtain the job for them. They hinted at a very large gratuity. I politely refused. During all the years I knew Arafat, I never asked him for a favor. I think that this was the basis of our rather strange friendship.)

If the port had been built, Gaza would have become a flourishing commercial hub. The standard of living would have risen steeply, the inclination of the people to vote for a radical Islamic party would have declined.

WHY DID this not happen? Israel refused to allow the port to be built. Contrary to a specific undertaking in the 1993 Oslo agreement, Israel cut off all passages between the Strip and the West Bank. The aim was to prevent any possibility of a viable Palestinian state being set up.

True, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon evacuated the more than a dozen settlements along the Gaza shore. Today, one of our rightist slogans is "We evacuated the entire Gaza Strip and what did we get in return? Qassam rockets!" Ergo: we can't give up the West Bank.

But Sharon did not turn the Strip over to the Palestinian Authority. Israelis are obsessed with the idea of doing things "unilaterally". The army withdrew, the Strip was left in chaos, without a government, without any agreement between the two sides.

Gaza sank into misery. In the 2006 Palestinian elections, under the supervision of ex-President Jimmy Carter, the people of Gaza – like the people of the West Bank – gave a relative majority to the Hamas party. When Hamas was denied power, it took the Gaza Strip by force, with the population applauding.

The Israeli government reacted by imposing a blockade. Only limited quantities of goods approved by the occupation authorities were let in. An American senator raised hell when he found out that pasta was considered a security risk and not allowed in. Practically nothing was let out, which is incomprehensible from the "security" point of view of weapons "smuggling" but clear from the point of view of "strangling". Unemployment reached almost 60%.

The Strip is roughly 40 km long and 10 km wide. In the north and the east it borders Israel, in the west it borders the sea, which is controlled by the Israeli navy. In the south it borders Egypt, which is now ruled by a brutal anti-Islamic dictatorship, allied with Israel. As the slogan goes, it is "the world's largest open-air prison".

BOTH SIDES now proclaim that their aim is to put an end to this situation. But they mean two very different things.

The Israeli side wants the blockade to remain in force, though in a more liberal form. Pasta and much more will be let into the Strip, but under strict supervision. No airport. No sea-port. Hamas must be prevented from re-arming.

The Palestinian side wants the blockade to be removed once and for all, even officially. They want their port and airport. They don't mind supervision, either international or by the Palestinian Unity Government under Mahmoud Abbas.

How to square this circle, especially when the "mediator" is the Egyptian dictator, who acts practically as an agent of Israel? It is a mark of the situation that the US has disappeared as a mediator. After the futile John Kerry peace mediation efforts it is now generally despised throughout the Middle East.

Israel cannot "destroy" Hamas, as our semi-fascist politicians (in the government, too) loudly demand. Nor do they really want to. If Hamas is "destroyed", Gaza would have to be turned over to the Palestinian Authority (viz. Fatah). That would mean the re-unification of the West Bank and Gaza, after all the long-lasting and successful Israeli efforts to divide them. No good.

If Hamas remains, Israel cannot allow the "terror-organization" to prosper. Relaxation of the blockade will only be limited, if that. The population will embrace Hamas even more, dreaming of revenge for the terrible devastation caused by Israel during this war. The next war will be just around the corner – as almost all Israelis believe anyhow.

In the end, we shall be where we were before.

THERE CAN be no real solution for Gaza without a real solution for Palestine.

The blockade must end, with serious security concerns of both sides properly addressed.

The Gaza Strip and the West Bank (with East Jerusalem) must be reunited.

The four "safe passages" between the two territories, promised in the Oslo agreement, must at last be opened.

There must be Palestinian elections, long overdue, for the presidency and the parliament, with a new government accepted by all Palestinian factions and recognized by the world community, including Israel and the USA.

Serious peace negotiations, based on the two-state solution, must start and be concluded within a reasonable time.

Hamas must formally undertake to accept the peace agreement reached by these negotiations. Israel's legitimate security concerns must be addressed.

The Gaza port must be opened and enable the Strip and the entire State of Palestine to import and export goods.

There is no sense in trying to "solve" one of these problems separately. They must be solved together. They can be solved together.

Unless we want to go around and around, from one "round" to the next, without hope and redemption.

"We" – Israelis and Palestinians, locked for ever in an embrace of war.

Or do what Samson did: commit suicide.

10,000 protest in Tel Aviv for a just peace, end to occupation

Under a coalition of Israeli left-wing political parties and organizations, thousands gathered in Tel Aviv's Rabin Square in the largest anti-war demonstration since the outbreak of violence in Gaza. =====

Some 10,000 Israelis flooded Tel Aviv's Rabin Square under the slogan "Changing direction: toward peace, away from war" in the largest anti-Gaza war demonstration in Israel since the outbreak of hostilities more than one month ago.

The protest was scheduled to take place last week, but was postponed after the police and Home Front Command revoked its permit, ostensibly to stop large gatherings during a time when missiles were being fired at Tel Aviv and other Israeli cities. Roughly 500 non-aligned activists flooded Tel Aviv's Rabin Square anyway, in defiance of the ban.

At tonight's demonstration the major left-wing parties, including Meretz and Hadash, as well as Peace Now and other left-wing organizations, joined tonight's demonstration, calling for a wide range of demands, from continuing negotiations between Israel and Hamas to an end to the occupation and Israel's blockade of Gaza. Many who have demonstrated throughout the past weeks of hostilities expressed disappointment at Meretz and Peace Now for their refusal to support anti-war demonstrations until now.

Meretz MK Zehava Gal'on addressed the protest, affirming that her party was against the Israeli military operation in Gaza all along. She lashed out at Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for not immediately recognizing the Palestinian unity deal and instead choosing war.

To large applause, Hadash MK Mohammad Barakeh stated in Hebrew and Arabic, "We are building a partnership against the occupation, for a free Palestine." He continued, "We are here for a two-state solution, for life and a future for people in Gaza and the South."

Famed Israeli author David Grossman addressed the large crowd, saying, "We won't be able to breathe deeply in Israel as long as people in Gaza feel choked," adding, "We will always be neighbors with people in Gaza. We must live together."

Naomi Tzion, a resident of Sderot, called on the crowd to think of those in Gaza who have now been made refugees twice or thrice, adding, "The true spitting in the face of the residents of Sderot? The attempts to paint us all as a single stereotyped collective." Gaza is "the biggest jail in the world," she continued.

Along with anti-war sentiment, protesters expressed their anger at the Israeli government for its lack of leadership, chanting "Bibi, go home!"

According to the protest organizers, the demonstration was organized to send the following message to Israel's political leaders:

"The next round of fighting can be prevented. No to the way of wars – we must have a political solution! After an agonizing month of war and death, in the face of mounting waves of incitement and hatred, which increasingly tear up the Israeli society, we stand up to demonstrate for peace and for democracy."

The rally at Rabin Square came two days after another demonstration was held to express solidarity with the residents of communities along the Gaza border.

Thousands of demonstrators gathered Saturday evening for a pro-peace rally in Tel Aviv under the slogan, "Changing direction: toward peace, away from war."

The rally at Rabin Square comes two days after another demonstration expressing solidarity with residents of communities along the Gaza border.

Right-wing activists planned a counter-demonstration, which will be held nearby at the same time. The Israel Police is planning to keep the two camps apart.

At the main rally, which began at 8 P.M., speeches were slated to be made by author David Grossman, journalist Zuheir Bahloul, Meretz chairwoman Zahava Gal-On, Hadash chairman Mohammed Barakeh, a resident of Sderot, a representative of bereaved families and other left-wing activists.

The rally will also host performances by Achinoam Nini, Mira Awad, Yair Dalal and Adam Gorlitsky.

The rally was originally due to take place last week, but was postponed at the request of the police and the Home Front Command, which prohibited gatherings of more than 1,000 people at the time in the Tel Aviv area.

The event's Facebook page states that, "following a painful month of war and death, in view of waves of incitement and hatred that are tearing apart Israeli society, we call for a demonstration for peace and democracy. The next round (of violence) can be avoided. We don't have to sink into an abyss of ever-crueler wars, of extreme hatred and a destruction of our neighbors and ourselves.

"Only an agreement will ensure long-term security and quiet for residents of the south and of the entire country. There is another way – immediate dialogue with Palestinians to ensure a fair peace, the opening of Gaza and a determined stand of Arabs and Jews against racism and for life. Only a two-state political solution will guarantee independence, justice, security and hope for all people living in this land."

Speaking at the demonstration, Meretz chairperson Zahava Gal-On lashed out at Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, saying, he has failed miserably, not as a result of this operation, but of refusing for five years to take the diplomatic path to peace.

Gal-On accused the prime minister of a "diplomatic freeze: refusing to adopt the Arab Peace Initiative; the so-called blowup of the talks with (Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas) Abu Mazen after 9 months, the breakdown of U.S.-Israel relations, the refusal to recognize the Palestinian unity government, and the widely authorized building in the settlements, which destroyed any chances of a peace agreement with the Palestinians."

She continued, "You could have achieved the framework you're willing to accept now without paying the price of 64 dead soldiers and civilians, the death of 2,000 Palestinians, and the horrible destruction in Gaza, including almost half a million people uprooted from their homes."

During his speech, author David Grossman, said "Neither side in this war has a victory picture. There are only indescribable images of death and destruction. Every image depicts defeat for both peoples.

"There is no military solution for the conflict between Israel and Hamas. There is no military solution that will end the suffering of Israelis in the south and the inhumane suffering of people in Gaza. People in Israel won't be able to breathe freely either, until the stranglehold on Gaza is lifted."

Many streets in the area were closed during the rally.

Gal-On calls for Netanyahu's resignation at Rabin Square rally

On Saturday night at Rabin Square, in a rally for a political solution to the Palestinian conflict, many carried signs proclaiming "Whoever doesn't want peace is making excuses" and "Yes to democracy, no to incitement." Meretz Chairwoman Zahava Gal-On called for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to tender his resignation at the rally. "Bibi, you failed. You need to leave the keys and go home. You failed this badly because of five years of refusing diplomacy, of refusing to adopt the Arab Peace Initiative."

Gal-On harshly criticized the prime minister. "You failed because of your refusal to recognize the Palestinian unity government, the destruction of our relations with the United States and the obsessive building in the territories."

The demonstration was organized by two left-wing parties, Meretz and Hadash (the Democratic Front for Peace and Equality), as well as Peace Now and the forum for bereaved families.

Gal-on also said: "We had enough of the silencing and the incitement. Two days ago we came out here to support Gaza-border residents. The agreement which you are now ready for could have been reached without paying the ultimate price of 64 fallen soldiers and 2,000 Palestinians."

Gal-On further criticized Netanyahu's inaction during Operation Protective Edge. "What did you do Mr. Prime Minister? You dragged us into a war of choice in Gaza. You threw Hamas a lifeline and provided them achievements for no reason. You proved to the extremists that you only understand force."

Hadash MK Mohammad Barakeh, and noted Israeli author David Grossman also spoke at the demonstration.

Yona, a protester from Kfar Saba, said she came to "protest because, unfortunately, the Left has been silent too long and all you hear is the Right. That's why we came to show we exist. The solution we should have adopted long ago is to return the territories for peace; it will be much harder to achieve today."

Tali, another demonstrator, said that "we better protest while we still can, because I have a feeling they don't want us to talk."

The protest is being held under the banner of "Taking a turn towards peace."

Meretz MK Nitzan Horowitz, one of the rally's organizers, said: "It is our right and our obligation to call for a political solution which is the only solution that will assure peace and security. No one will silence us or scare us."

As you are well aware, seafood is becoming an increasingly talked-about topic of conversation not only among environmental advocacy groups, but also at the governmental level. I am a Minnesota-based researcher working on a project funded by the National Center for Food Protection and Defense. Our purpose is to learn not only how consumers make their purchasing decisions, but also how industry is viewing such subjects as seafood sustainability, local sourcing and labeling. The results will be utilized nationally to help guide fraud-avoidance best practices for the grocery, restaurant, processor and other industries working with fish and seafood.

I read with great interest the recommendations of the Presidential Task Force on combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and seafood fraud that you were involved in preparing. Given your experience with the Task Force, I would consider it a great privilege to gain your observations on mislabeling and what can and should be done. I realize that the Task Force's findings are currently under review. My hope and intent is to simply gain your perspectives on them.

I will be in Washington, D.C. on March 18th. Would you be willing to spend even a brief amount of time with me on the above? If that date does not work, we could do by phone at your convenience.

Thank you in advance for your consideration. This is an important project and your thoughts would be most welcomed.

Subject: For WJC: articles on Mexico City landfill closure
Attachments: Marcelo Ebrard Announces Closure of Bordo Poniente.docx

Dear Hannah, the President asked why CCI isn't mentioned in any articles about the Mexico City landfill closure. Below and attached are some articles that do mention CCI, including some comments by the Mexico City Mayor. Perhaps more importantly, although the landfill closure has been announced, Mexico City is receiving increasing criticism for not effectively handling the waste that continues to be generated. In some ways, it's good for us to NOT be in the current wave of stories. We will work on ways to enhance communications around this when the story (and reality on the ground) improves. CCI staff have offered to help the city better handle this process, but CCI staff say the City is unfortunately not currently taking any tangible/urgent steps to correct the situation or improve the collection/diversion of garbage being generated at present. According to CCI staff, Mayor Bloomberg was going to call the Mayor of Mexico City to congratulate him on the closure of the landfill but then punted on making that call as it became clearer that the city isn't implementing this effectively. We'd be happy to provide more information if it would be helpful, and we'd welcome his feedback. Thanks, Ami Attached is the statement made by Mayor Ebrard regarding the closure of the Bordo Poniente landfill. This was sent to us by CCI and is translated from Spanish into English.

The following press release was issued directly by C40-CCI: <http://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/bordo-poniente-landfill-closing-helps-green-mexico-city-136063528.html>

Below are related articles that mention CCI or WJC. There were far more Spanish ones, which are not included here. The statement by the Mayor is the strongest endorsement of WJC. Most of these simply mention the partnership.

Jake,

I am doing some reporting on the finances of the Clintons, both for ProPublica, where I work, and in partnership with the Washington Post.

At the outset, I informed the Clinton representatives, including John Podesta, of my project and the partnership with the Post.

My daughter just got married so I am now turning my attention to this area of reporting.

After the Clintons left the White House they retained Citi to handle their finances. The officer who signed that agreement in 2001, Timothy Paul, is now with Goldman Sachs, as chief trust officer for your trust company.

I am wondering if he might be available to discuss a few matters, on whatever basis that might be amenable to him.

I am happy to discuss this further with you or him at your convenience.

I have asked the Clintons whether they would waive any client confidentiality with regards to Citi ---or JPMorgan, the current trustee of their finances---but have not yet heard back.

Thanks for considering my request,

Jeff Gerth

We are going around and around on the merry go round. I think Fallon's point is fine, but to Nick's we can't go in and out of that meeting with the group thinking she's on their side on this.

On Wednesday, September 9, 2015, Nick Merrill <nmerrill@hillaryclinton.com> wrote:

I wholeheartedly agree with this. I just don't see how this won't come off as incredibly disingenuous, and I fear the crowd we are looking to placate is exactly the crowd that is most predisposed to seeing this move as purely political. We solve one problem and create another with the very same crowd, while upsetting those on the other side in the process. The irony of all of this is that while not recognized as such, her not taking a position is a pretty risky and honest move, particularly for so long. She was trying to respect the process and the WH. That's honorable even if we can never sell it that way.

So while I'm not sure we should say we're against it to a labor crowd that supports it, I really like the original plan of telling a sympathetic group and being ready when it leaks.

On Tuesday, September 8, 2015, Brian Fallon <bfallon@hillaryclinton.com> wrote:

I know it is late in the game and we have gone round and round on edits on the oped, but just throwing this out there:

Given that we just offered an apology on emails that some reporters think happened "on a dime" after months of resistance, do we worry that publishing an oped that leans this aggressively into our newfound position on Keystone will be greeted cynically and perhaps as part of some manufactured attempt to project sincerity?

I think we could seem consistent with our past statements about not wanting to get ahead of POTUS on Keystone if her position merely leaked out of the labor meeting. That would seem like a private comment that she didn't intend to become public -- to an unfriendly audience, no less -- and so it might achieve the same effect of getting her on the record on this issue, but with less perception that she is putting a finger to the wind. I just worry that announcing our position so fulsomely in an oped amounts to leading with our chin and will inspire loud cries of hypocrisy from reporters.

Perhaps we could just issue an infrastructure fact sheet, acting like that was our planned announcement, and rely on the Keystone to leak, either organically or with an assist from us.

Keystone XL points us toward an energy future that puts the United States and our global climate at even greater risk. But building clean, secure, and affordable North American energy future is bigger than Keystone XL or any other single project.

We can make the United States the global leader in the fight against climate change and the clean energy superpower of the 21st century. That's why today I am announcing a comprehensive strategy to modernize American energy infrastructure and forge a new partnership with Canada and Mexico to cut carbon pollution across the continent and combat climate change, unleashing billions in investment, delivering reliable and affordable energy, protecting the health of our families and communities, and creating good-paying jobs and careers.

We have to have a single big idea that encapsulates her vision on this and link it to our country's future. The clean energy superpower is her line; leading the world in running our homes, factories, offices and schools on clean energy is a big idea

I'm worried that if we don't have something like that we are light on her core values and beliefs on this issue and we are missing those, she risks looking very political, especially on this.

Recirculating both the fact sheet and op-ed reflecting edits and comments from Jake, Nikki, and Joel. In answer to research: changed 20 to 40, and Trevor can provide calculations based on EIA data, if reporters need it, on the Mexico/Canada trade point. It isn't written up neatly in one place online, unfortunately.

Joel, we pumped up the climate impacts but in discussing with Jake decided we do still need to address why she's making her position known, when she has previously said she will wait for the President to make a decision. Added a line about wanting to let voters know where she stands, and added a more expansive graf about making the US the leader in fighting climate change and becoming a clean energy superpower. Nipped and tucked elsewhere to keep the word count down.

Knowing we are still working out rollout timing - comms, policy, political, do you clear these to go forward to the book?

Thanks all.

Team,

Attaching a draft HRC op-ed which uses opposition to KXL as a pivot to talk about a plan for broad investment in modernizing our energy infrastructure and forging a climate compact between the US, Mexico, and Canada. These versions reflect initial edits and comments from the policy team, JDP, and Nikki.

The current thinking is to have HRC address this in her meeting with the building trades on Wednesday and roll out the fact sheet and op-ed in conjunction with that. Please send edits and clearances from comms, policy, research, and political to me, Trevor, Ben, and Pete no later than 10 am tomorrow so we can get this to HRC with plenty of time for her review and clearance.

Thanks,

Kristina

It's now more traffic than our website could handle. So we've been working on something bigger, better, and easier to use that will reach more people than ever. I'm proud to unveil the new

EndCitizensUnited.org :

Visit the new EndCitizensUnited.org >>

Why is it so important that we update our site? Most Americans have never even heard of the Supreme Court's Citizens United ruling. Now, we can expand our reach and educate more voters about the dark money polluting our Democracy.

Every visitor to EndCitizensUnited.org will be presented with a cutting-edge design that works well on all devices -- PCs, Macs, smartphones, tablets, etc. We've loaded the site with engaging, compelling content that is ready to be shared over social media. Subject: March 2016 Funders Table materials

Dear ClimateWorks Board,

The following materials related to next week's Funders Table (FT) meetings are available:

Schedule and participants: The schedule for all of the meetings next week (the FT itself meets on Wednesday and Thursday), and the list of FT participants, are in Tab 2 of your board packet.

Reading materials: We have placed the pre-read materials for the FT meetings on the Board Portal (in the Reference Materials folder) for those of you who want a more thorough scan of what will be discussed.

Funding landscape: Due to its highly confidential nature, we will review hard copies of the funding landscape data in the board meeting itself as we have in the past. We can discuss the option of putting some or all of this data on the Board Portal when we meet.

Warm regards,
Gretchen

New TV Ad: Will Congress Stand With Joe Barton, BP and Big Oil -- or Stand Up for a Clean Energy Future?

With Major Clean Energy and Climate Legislation on the Horizon in the Senate, It's Gut Check Time for Senate Republicans Addicted to Big Oil Money

Washington D.C. – With a likely vote in the Senate on the horizon on major clean energy and climate legislation, Senate Republicans need to make clear whether they stand with Congressman Joe “I apologize” Barton (R-TX) and big oil -- or with the American people who ready more than ever before for a clean energy future in the wake of the Deepwater Horizon disaster. Americans United for Change unveiled a new TV ad in the nation’s capital making the choice clear, which begins airing this Thursday on MSNBC, FOX News and CNN in Washington.

Tom McMahon, Executive Director, Americans United for Change: “Even in the face of the worst oil spill in U.S. history, the reaction was the same it’s always been for Joe Barton, potential chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, and many of his Republican colleagues: ‘big oil’s bottom line always comes first.’ Barton took the Grand Oil Party’s longstanding governing philosophy towards oil companies to absurd new heights by worrying about whether BP’s feelings were hurt over the needs of the spill victims in the Gulf. And now it’s gut check time for Senate Republicans who need to decide if they’re going to continue to stand with the likes of Joe Barton and do the bidding of big oil – or participate constructively towards building a clean energy future. Big oil money has polluted our politics and environment enough.”

“If Republicans continue to stand in the way of clean energy legislation, they need to explain to their constituents why they want to keep America on the course of importing more and more Mid-East oil and putting more and more money into the hands of our enemies,” added McMahon.

Narrator: The same people who are apologizing to BP...	U.S. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) “apologized” directly to BP CEO Tony Hayward at a Congressional hearing: “I am ashamed of what happened in the White House yesterday, that a private corporation would be subject to what I would characterize as a shake down,” said Barton. The fund, he said, “amounts to a $20 billion slush fund that is unprecedented in our nation’s history” and “sets a terrible precedent for the future. “I apologize...I do not want to live in a country where any time a citizen or a corporation does something that is legitimately wrong it is subject to political pressure that amounts to a shake down,” Barton continued. [Mother Jones, 6/17/10] The 114 Member Republican Study Committee Called The The $20 Billion BP Escrow Account A “Chicago-Style Political Shakedown.” The Republican Study Committee, a conservative caucus with 114 Republican members, released a statement calling the $20 billion BP escrow account a “Chicago-style political shakedown.” “BP’s reported willingness to go along with the White House’s new fund suggests that the Obama Administration is hard at work exerting its brand of Chicago-style shakedown politic... These actions are emblematic of a politicization of our economy that has been borne out of this Administration’s drive for greater power and control.”[RSC, 6/16/10] Michele Bachmann Said That Holding BP Accountable Is “Extortion” And A “Redistribution-Of-Wealth.” Appearing at a Heritage Foundation event, Michele Bachmann characterized the $20 billion escrow fund that the administration brokered with BP amounted to “extortion.” She went on to say “The president just called for creating a fund that would be administered by outsiders, which would be more of a redistribution-of-wealth fund.” [Minnesota Independent, 6/16/10] Republican Congressman Said Barton Was “Spot On.” Appearing on the conservative Laura Ingraham Show, Republican Rep. Steve King said “I think Joe Barton was spot-on when he called it a ‘shakedown.’ That’s part of this administration’s process.” [The Hill, 6/21/10]
Narrator: and taking record amounts of big oil contributions...	Senate Republicans Have Accepted At Least $18.6 Million From Big Oil. Since 1989, members of the Senate Republican Caucus for the 111th Congress have accepted at least $18,690,814 from the oil and gas industry. [Center for Responsive Politics, 6/4/10; CQ MoneyLine, 6/7/10]

Narrator: are now blocking clean energy and climate legislation.	Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell Is Committed To Killing Comprehensive Climate And Energy Legislation. In an article about bipartisan negotiations to introduce a climate and energy bill sponsored by Kerry, Graham and Lieberman – the foundation for the American Power Act – Bloomberg report “The measure will need ‘significant bipartisan cooperation’ to pass, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Nevada Democrat, said today in an e-mail. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky said in an e-mail he will oppose it. ‘Whatever its intentions, this bill is little more than a job-killing national energy tax,’ McConnell said.” [Bloomberg, 5/12/10]
Narrator: Congress has a choice: Will they stand with Joe Barton, BP and big oil or with a clean energy and climate plan and the new jobs, less pollution and greater security it brings?	The American Power Act Invests $5 Billion In Clean Energy And Reigns In Offshore Drilling Rules. According to the executive summary of the American Power Act, the bill would expand the clean energy manufacturing tax credit by $5 billion and forces offshore drilling rigs further offshore. [Kerry, 5/12/10] A Berkley University Study Concluded That Comprehensive Climate Legislation Could Create Up To 1.9 Million Jobs. “A New analysis by the University of California shows conclusively that climate policy will strengthen the U.S. economy as a whole. Full adoption of the ACES package of pollution reduction and energy efficiency measures would create between 918,000 and 1.9 million new jobs, increase annual household income by $487-$1,175 per year, and boost GDP by $39 billion-$111 billion. These economic gains are over and above the growth the U.S. would see in the absence of such a bill.” [UC Berkley, 9/28/09] Pentagon: “Climate Change, Energy Security And Economic Stability Are Inextricably Linked.” In 2010, the Department of Defense released the Quadrennial Defense Review and for the first time ever, the report included a section on climate change. The report said that “Climate change and energy are two key issues that will play a significant role in shaping the future security environment. Although they produce distinct types of challenges, climate change, energy security and economic stability are inextricably linked.” [New York Times, 2/1/10]

Subject: We'll have to make some hard decisions, John

I'll be straight with you, John:

After tomorrow's fundraising deadline, we'll have to sit down and make some hard decisions.

Unlike some of our opponents, we don't have endless resources -- we have to spend smart and count on grassroots donations to come through in the clutch. And that's why we send you all these emails.

If you believe in this work, you have a decision to make:

Chip in to help before midnight tomorrow, or hope that someone else does it for you:

P.S. -- When I first started working with OFA, I didn't truly understand what people meant by "grassroots" support. It didn't take long -- during a fundraising deadline like this, I saw firsthand what everyone meant: thousands of small donations coming in from all over the country. Truly inspiring.

I know you believe in this, and I know how powerful we all can be when we each do our part. Don't let this deadline go by without making a donation.

--Preview of HRC's economic speech. Says it is her first speech on the economy since announcing her presidential bid. --Joe Scarborough talks to Al Hunt about the role of Donald Trump. Mentions that Trump was at one time a contributor to HRC and Republicans are becoming indignant that he is now grabbing a large chunk of the Republican base. Says that Republicans are concerned that Trump's gathering votes in the party and being so polarizing could pave the way to the White House for HRC and for Democrats to take more seats in the House and Senate. Says they are treating him very gently because of the concern that he might run as an independent which would be devastating for the Republican Party. Morning Joe . 2015 07 13,Hillary Clinton;Donald Trump,Role of Donald Trump.mp4

--Preview of HRC's economic speech. Host says that this speech is being billed as her first policy speech. Jeff Zeleny says this is all about Bernie Sanders although she is not going to mention him. Says it's a left-leaning speech where she is going to say she is a fighter for the middle class and she is going to call on companies to expand profit sharing. Says he was told by one of her advisors that this was the plan, although he's not exactly sure how you would legislate that. Chris Cuomo says that calling on companies to profit share is not realistic. Zeleny says companies may need to be shamed into it rather than legislated. Says HRC will outline her plans for growing the economy and tout the job-growing record of two presidents, WJC and Obama, and will throw a bone to unions by criticizing the sharing economy – companies such as Uber which don't offer employees benefits. Quotes HRC's speech preview as saying, hard-working Americans deserve to benefit from the record corporate earnings they helped produce, so I will propose ways to encourage companies to share profits with their employees. Americans. Reporter says HRC said the minimum wage should be raised and companies should share more of their profits with workers. Bloomberg Markets . 2015 07 13, Hillary Clinton, Commentary, National, Recap of HRC's economic speech.mp4

Hi Everyone,

As some of you may have seen, Secretary Clinton did a press conference today where she talked why she was there today, commented on recent developments regarding Iran, and about all the recent issues surrounding her email at the State Department, so we wanted to follow up with a transcript of her statement along with a Q&A document that lays out many of the questions that have been raised in the last week along with the answers to them.

Please be in touch with any questions or comments.

Dear Megan -

Julie has kindly passed along your information so that you may be able to help introduce "us" to your father.

By way of introduction, I am a member of the Genentech Business Development team located in South SF, CA. My BD colleague and I are planning our annual offsite BD meeting for our group (~30 members). The theme of our offsite is Design and we are taking an interdisciplinary approach by featuring speakers from multiple disciplines and industries. Your father is distinguished and experienced in the art of "politics" and I am confident our group would be very interested in his background.

If you might kindly pass along this email to your father, I'd be happy to pick up discussions with him.

Thanks

Kate

Subject: [big campaign] NYT: McCain Heads Today for Colombia, Where Adviser Has Long Had Ties

July 1, 2008

McCain Heads Today for Colombia, Where Adviser Has Long Had Ties

By LARRY ROHTER

At a time when the role of lobbyists and special interests are at issue in the presidential campaign, Senator John McCain leaves Tuesday on a trip to Colombia, where a senior adviser to him has long had business and political ties.

Since 1998, the lobbying firm headed until recently by Charlie Black, one of Mr. McCain's closest confidants, has earned more than $1.8 million representing the Occidental Petroleum Corporation, the leading foreign producer of gas and oil in Colombia. The lobbying firm, BKSH & Associates, has also represented Colombian textile and apparel manufacturers and a former foreign minister and presidential candidate who is also a prominent businesswoman.

According to official filings, Mr. Black, who resigned as chairman of BKSH in March, lobbied Congress, the State Department and the White House on Occidental's behalf regarding "general energy issues" and "general trade issues" involving Colombia. His list of activities also included winning "foreign assistance for Colombia" and efforts to block an economic embargo against the country, which has a questionable human rights record.

"Though he did not have high visibility, we encountered his shadow often," said Larry Birns, director of the Council on Hemispheric Affairs, an advocacy group that monitors Latin American human rights and political issues from Washington.

Mr. McCain is making the trip in part to highlight his support for a free-trade agreement with Colombia that the Bush administration wants to see approved by Congress by year's end. The senator, a strong free-trade advocate, has spoken in favor of the accord on the campaign trail.

His presumed Democratic opponent, Senator Barack Obama, opposes the deal and frequently cites it in campaign speeches as an example of what he sees as the administration's wrongheaded trade policies. Mr. Obama has expressed environmental and human rights concerns, including what he describes as the Colombian government's repression of labor unions.

Mr. Black has recently been at the center of campaign controversy over an interview, published in June by Fortune magazine, in which he said that another terrorist attack on the United States would benefit Mr. McCain's candidacy. The McCain campaign declined to make him available to discuss his lobbying activities on behalf of Colombia for BKSH.

"The campaign has no connection to that firm and therefore no connection to the questions you are asking," said Tucker Bounds, a campaign spokesman.

Occidental's activities in Colombia have long been controversial, both within that country and among human-rights, indigenous-rights and environmental groups abroad. The groups have accused the company of complicity in the killing of peasants thought to be sympathetic to the left-wing guerrilla groups that operate in the area where Occidental has pipelines or drilling activities. They have also blamed Occidental for the polluting of rural areas and have accused it of intimidating Indian tribes seeking to prevent drilling on their ancestral lands.

Occidental has long denied the accusations, maintaining that its practices are environmentally sound and describing its critics as unrepresentative.

The most controversial episode dates from December 1998, when the Colombian Air Force dropped cluster bombs on Santo Domingo, a village near an Occidental pipeline, killing 18 people. Human rights groups and Colombian government officials say the bombing was a mistake that occurred because three employees of a Florida-based aerial security company employed by Occidental to monitor guerrilla movements had provided incorrect coordinates to the Colombian military pilots.

The American employees of the security company dropped out of sight, and Colombian government efforts to have them handed over for questioning and perhaps trial were fruitless. Frustrated by what they consider the security company's stonewalling, human rights groups filed suit in California in 2003 and 2004 against Occidental, whose headquarters is in Los Angeles.

Occidental has denied any responsibility for the bombing of Santo Domingo, saying when the first suit was filed that it "has not and does not provide lethal aid to Colombia's armed forces."

Even as the Santo Domingo attack became a cause célèbre among human rights groups in Washington, as well as some lawmakers there, Congress approved a special appropriation of nearly $100 million for the protection of oil pipelines in Colombia in 2003, when Mr. Black's firm was lobbying on Occidental's behalf.

Atossa Soltani, executive director of Amazon Watch, a human rights group that works on behalf of Colombian Indian tribes opposed to oil drilling and pipelines on their lands, said Mr. Black was also "very active" while Congress was debating a $1.3 billion military assistance package to Colombia that became law in 2000. "We'd be making the rounds in Congress," Ms. Soltani said, "and Oxy would be there making the rounds, too."

Occidental has come under fire as well in connection with the 2003 killing of three Colombian labor leaders who were initially and erroneously said to be affiliated with one of the guerrilla groups that regularly attack Occidental's installations. Three Colombian soldiers, all of them members of a special unit that guards an Occidental pipeline, were charged with murder.

Kitty Bennett contributed reporting.

Dear Alliance Advisors and Partners,

Yesterday our Catholics in Alliance Community met with the Obama-Biden Transition team. Catholics in Alliance organized the meeting as part of our movement coordination and support work. The agenda and Catholics in Alliance participating organizations (14) that attended are copied below.

It was a very productive conversation, and we felt that the transition staff understood the breadth and strength of the Catholic common good movement, as well as our community's policy priorities and expertise. We also had substantive policy dialogue around various justice and peace concerns within the policy categories we discussed. The transition staff included the Director of Public Liaison, Mike Strautmanis, and top staff to the Domestic Policy Council director Melody Barnes; as well as the transition's religious outreach staff, Joshua DuBois (Director), Mark Linton (Catholic outreach) and Mara Vanderslice (public liaison-faith community). The issues priorities we presented were the top 5 themes that were represented in the Platform for the Common Good which 20 participating organizations and over 800 grassroots Catholic leaders affirmed in July at the first-ever national Convention for the Common Good.

Thank you for your continued support that makes this work possible. As always, your comments and questions welcome!

Marc made a convincing case to me this am that these sorts of restrictions don't really get you anything...that Obama actually got judged MORE harshly as a result. He convinced me. So...in a complete U-turn, I'm ok just taking the money and dealing with any attacks.

Are you guys ok with that?

Subject: Re: Foreign registered agents

If we do it case by case, then it will be subjective. We would look at who the donor is and what foreign entity they are registered for. In judging whether to take the money, we would consider the relationship between that country and the United States, its relationship to the State Department during Hillary's time as Secretary, and its relationship, if any, to the Foundation. In judging the individual, we would look at their history of support for political candidates generally and Hillary's past campaigns specifically.

Put simply, we would use the same criteria we use for lobbyists, except with a somewhat more stringent screen.

As a legal matter, I am not saying we have to do this - we can decide to simply ban foreign registrants entirely. I'm just offering this up as a middle ground.

Responding to all on this. I was not on the call this morning, but I lean away from a bright line rule here. It seems odd to say that someone who represents Alberta, Canada can't give, but a lobbyist for Phillip Morris can. Just as we vet lobbyists case by case, I would do the same with FARA. While this may lead to a large number of FARA registrants being denied, it would not be a flat out ban. A total ban feels arbitrary and will engender the same eye-rolling and ill will that it did for Obama.

Hi all – we do need to make a decision on this ASAP as our friends who happen to be registered with FARA are already donating and raising.

I do want to push back a bit (it's my job!): I feel like we are leaving a good amount of money on the table (both for primary and general, and then DNC and state parties)... and how do we explain to people that we'll take money from a corporate lobbyist but not them; that the Foundation takes $ from foreign govts but we now won't.

Either way, we need to make a decision soon.

Following up on the call from 9:30.

The policy would be to not allow any currently registered foreign agents (those who register with FARA) to contribute or raise for the campaign. If someone terminates their registration, they would be allowed to contribute or raise for the campaign.

Marc, we'd especially like your perspective on adopting this policy..

Wanted to follow back up on this.

We're consistently flagging more FARA registrants daily. In terms of # - we're at 27 out of 370 prospective bundlers - but to Jesse's question - that does not represent the costs of how much these folks would likely raise.

If we were looking at these folks below on a case by case basis, I'd want to specifically raise: Tony Podesta (Iraq, Azerbaijan, Egypt), Ben Barnes (Libya), John Merrigan (UAE), Wyeth Weidman (Libya), and Mike Driver (UAE connections)

Yes, it's attached and also copied/pasted below.

This is only 23 names of the first 350 prospective bundlers we looked at pre-launch. I anticipate more coming down the pipeline.

Subject: Abolish the Benghazi Committee

Reply-To: info@iveyforcongress.com

Dear Cheryl,

Watching the coverage of the Benghazi Committee's interrogation of Secretary Clinton Thursday brought back a lot of memories from my time on Capitol Hill. As Senator Paul Sarbanes' Legal Counsel, I sat on the Whitewater Committee and had to put up with a lot of the same partisan political games. And now, as was then, the Republican machine's obsession with taking down the Clintons failed, backfired even.

In the process, all House Republicans seemed to achieve was wasting a lot of taxpayer dollars on a partisan witch hunt.

So, in recognition of the House Republicans' failure to ruin Secretary Clinton's chances at becoming our next President, I am calling on Congress to put an end to the partisan political games and abolish the Select Committee on Benghazi.

If you agree with me, then I encourage you to sign your name to our petition here and I will personally hand deliver it to Paul Ryan's desk when he becomes Speaker.

They can only ignore us if they can't hear us. Be heard. Sign your name today.

Thank you for all that you do,

Glenn

Subject: he's a real hero

John -

I am writing to express my support for Brigadier General John Douglass' candidacy for the House of Representatives. During my last assignment in the Army I was General Douglass' driver and a member of his security detail. I was severely injured during an attack on General Douglass' home by terrorists. General Douglass' faith in me never wavered and I was asked to resume my duties after I was released from the hospital. I have been with General Douglass in times of extreme danger and stress and know him to be a true leader.

Now he is defending my benefits as a 100% disabled veteran. He will never allow our country to turn its back on those of us who have served. I urge all veterans in Virginia to support General Douglass in this coming election. Now politicians who have never served a day in the uniform of our country are attempting to swift boat General Douglass. Those of us who served with him there during the multiple attacks on his life know the truth. He is a leader who will never let us down.

Subject: Voting on ENDA today!

John,

In just a few hours, the Senate's due to vote on the Employment Non-Discrimination Act.

Finally.

This is a HUGE step for equality, but only if it passes: Mere consideration is not enough - not even close.

There's nothing controversial about extending basic workplace protections to LGBT employees. Unfortunately, there are forces of the status quo determined to stand against anything and everything.

Don't let them stop what's right. Speak out before the vote!

Join my colleagues and me to tell the Senate: Pass ENDA and protect Americans everywhere from workplace discrimination.

Thank you for always fighting for progress,

Sean

John - I wanted to say that although I'm not sold on Hillary Clinton's politics, the non-stop, egregious, vacuous, and antagonistic pummeling she's getting from the press (who seem to revel in their vapidness) is making me more and more supportive of the campaign every day. I honestly think the debates can't happen soon enough - it might help the other candidates a bit but Clinton deserves some unfiltered time with the national public.

I hope you're well -

Hello John,

I talked to Herb today about Ira and Herb would like to see the memo about the board. I'd like to send him, Susan, and Steve the attached memo but it discusses a role for Steve Daetz, which you and I discussed a while back. However, you said in our last conversation that you wanted to check with Herb first — did you? I don't want to edit out a "Sandler role," and we discussed Steve being on the board in our March meeting, but don't want to send this if having Steve's name in here is weird from your perspective. Please let me know how to proceed.

We had a good meeting today to ratify the research plan and discuss staffing structure and talent. Few things to report out:

1. We seem to have a settled on a team for the research project--we just need to lock in the media people. Attached is the latest draft of the one pager. I'm hoping to get the team discussing and editing the project design over the holiday so we can present a proposal to HRC at the beginning of Jan. Fingers crossed.
2. Good discussion about digital and tech. I think we have some good digital options...she approved setting up an interview process for CTO candidates, since we want someone outside politics for this role and we need outside advice on candidates.
3. Self research: Cheryl, she wanted to keep Heather and the team going from DC. I flagged that we will likely need to expand the team to 5-10 people, which she seemed fine with. I also flagged that self research is so integral to rapid response, vetting, content, etc that we'd probably want a contingent in HQ to prevent bottlenecks. We agreed I'd loop back with you to discuss options--I think a hybrid model may work. Let's discuss.
4. We had a good discussion about communications. John there are some WH people I'd like to discuss. I'll follow up. Any names welcome!

Skimm for August 21st

Skimm'd while packing for Napa.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'I have been the biggest hypocrite ever' — The ever-charming Josh Duggar. The recent Ashley Madison hack revealed he'd been cheating on his wife, in between dealing with the fall-out from accusations that he molested his sisters. 19 problems and counting.

SNAPS FOR GREECE

THE STORY

Yesterday, Greek Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras decided Greece's summer wasn't eventful enough. So he resigned and called for snap elections.

REFRESHER PLEASE.

Greece went broke a few years ago. In exchange for bailout money from international creditors, the country had to accept austerity measures (think: tax hikes and pension cuts). Greeks hated austerity. So earlier this year, they elected Tsipras, who promised he'd get rid of it. But it turns out when you have hundreds of billions of dollars in loans to pay back, you can't always call the shots. After missing a payday deadline, Tsipras had to accept a new bailout deal with – surprise, surprise – lots of austerity. The eurozone officially approved that deal last week.

SO WHAT'S HAPPENING NOW?

Snap elections– AKA elections that happen way before they are supposed to. Lots of people in Tsipras's left-leaning party are not happy with the recent new deal. So instead of talking it out, Tsipras is having Greeks go back to the polls for a snap election to vote for a new government as soon as next month. The catch? All signs point to Tsipras getting re-elected. See what he did there?

the SKIMM

Greece has been to financial hell and back, and it's not out of the woods yet. The snap elections are Tsipras's way of making a bet on himself, hoping that voters will stay behind him...even after he's gone against his original campaign promises.

SKIMM THIS

REPEAT AFTER ME...

WHAT TO SAY TO YOUR FRIEND WHO'S TRYING TO 'LIVE IN THE MOMENT'...

Take a page from Jimmy Carter. Yesterday, the 39th US president announced that he's undergoing treatment for melanoma on his brain. The 90-year-old also managed to do this while smiling, making lots of jokes, and saying he is "perfectly at ease with whatever comes." Last week, Carter announced that doctors had removed cancer from his liver, and that it had spread to other parts of his body. After yesterday's press conference, Carter began radiation treatments on his brain.

WHAT TO SAY WHEN YOUR DATE THINKS OYSTERS ACTUALLY WORK...

Not like this. Earlier this week, the FDA approved a drug called Addyi that promises to rev up women's libidos. And since sex sells, a big pharmaceutical company would like to tap it. Yesterday, pharma giant Valeant said it's buying Sprout Pharmaceuticals - the company that makes Addyi - for $1 billion. Addyi's the first drug on the market that promises to bring women more "sexually satisfying events." Yes, plural. But it's not clear whether the drug will be a commercial hit like Viagra. It comes with side effects like fainting and low blood pressure, especially when paired with alcohol. Buzz, killed.

WHAT PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT...

Wildfires. This week, three firefighters died in Washington state while fighting massive wildfires. More than 100 wildfires have recently broken out in the western US, and about one million acres have been burned. And it's not the only reason meteorologists are pulling all nighters. Yesterday, the first hurricane of the season arrived in the Atlantic Ocean. It's named Danny because Dan sounded too threatening. It won't make landfall until next week, and it's expected to hit somewhere in the Caribbean.

WHAT TO SAY TO YOUR BROTHER WHO'S A WWII HISTORY NERD...

Heard about the Nazi train? Legend has it that at the end of WWII, a Nazi train carrying looted gold and art disappeared into an underground tunnel system in Poland. It hasn't been seen since. Yesterday, Polish officials said they've been contacted by a lawyer representing two men who say they know where the train is. But the men aren't telling...unless they get 10% of the value of what's in it. Classy. Some historians are throwing shade, saying they doubt the claim is legit. But, based on the documents sent by the lawyer, Polish officials say they are taking this seriously. They've also been meeting with firefighters, police, and military. That's because if this really is the train, it could be armed with explosives. Nicolas Cage is now on standby.

WHAT TO SAY WHEN YOU HEAR ABOUT BANKSY'S DISNEYLAND SPOOF...

Sounds about as fun as being eaten alive by bugs at Burning Man.

SKIMM READS

Subject: Draft AGENDA Jan. 12th Union Presidents Mtg.

Attachments: Labor Meeting 1.12.16.docx

Hi John- We're hoping to get your feedback on agenda by Thursday morning if possible.

Navin and I worked thru this draft agenda for the Labor Presidents meeting on Jan. 12th from 9-11am at AFT. I have shared a preliminary agenda with Randi as well for feedback, since I know some of this meeting's idea came from a conversation with her. We have incorporate her feedback.

Please let us know your feedback and once this agenda is confirmed Navin is going build a presentation. Confirmed to attend for the campaign, will be Navin, Joel Benenson, myself and you of course.

Confirmed Union Attendees:

- President Randi Weingarten and John Ost (AFT)
- President Jim Callahan and Jeff Soth (IUOE)
- President Doug McCarron, Frank Spencer (VP) & Tom Flynn (UBC)
- President Sean McGarvey and Mike Monroe (NABTU)
- Special Assistant to President Rick Terven (UA)
- Vice President Terry Lynch and Chip Gardiner (Insulators)
- Chief Of Staff Owen Hernstadt and Hasan Solomon (IAMAW)
- Other unions confirmed to attend and waiting on attendees names: AFSCME, SEIU, NEA, IUPAT, AFGE, LIUNA, Ironworkers

Feedback and comments on attached agenda:

- Under "Introductions" I think a big thank you will be important. Labor in 2015 contributed $5.75 to Priorities and $1 million to the Hillary Victory Fund in addition to the member to member paid mail communications program and on the ground resources (AFSCME had 70 members hit yesterday in IA, as an example). The NEA is moving forward on a message training with 80 of their rank and file members from the March primary states to prepare them to be communicators. They are bringing these members into DC on Jan. 22-24th and the campaign will participate in this program.
- Under the section of "Goals & Overview of Meeting"-John, I think it would be helpful if you could provide a quick snapshot/lay of the land for the primary. I think they will be interested in pre NH and then our March plan. Can I help you with any preparation?
- What are your thoughts about me speaking to our labor mobilization efforts in state and where our needs are moving forward in the primary? This seems like a good opportunity to outline where our most pressing field needs are while we have a captive audience. I know that's not the primary purpose of the meeting, so wanted to run by you.
- Feedback from Randi was to focus on the primary and message and spend less time on general. The agenda reflects that but connecting the primary and general are obviously important so its in there.
- Regarding the bullet point for "Discussion, how to engage union members" I thought I would tee up a few unions (NEA and AFSCME and a trade union) to talk about their member engagement programs to date and what they're hearing on the ground. I thought this could help initiate discussion and Q&A.
- One thing to flag is that the public sector unions have invested a lot in economic framework messaging, I am sure they will refer to this in the meeting. They did this in coordination with the AFL-CIO. I don't think we need to proactively add it to the agenda unless you disagree, but I'm sure they will mention it.

Navin and I will await your feedback and then prepare documents from there. I'll have a event memo for you.

I agree that it's a good idea. Though hard to imagine doing it without giving them some kind of campaign briefing or discussion.

Which reporters are you thinking about?

Very strong night for HRC. Have had several conversations today with folks who were previously lukewarm and now are fired up. Most interesting was my former HHS career assistant, mid-50's AA woman who LOVES POTUS but never liked HRC. She told me today that she really liked her for the first time, and is ready to roll up her sleeves. Hope the Team is feeling good about the night.

Manny's cell: 415-203-7122. He will be there to greet you when you arrive at Zynga. He says that the building is a bit of a (giant) maze so you might want to meet around 10:50 or 10:55.

Mark's assistant reserved a private room for you to take the GOP call from 12:00-1:00 pm. And they have parking.

Zynga HQ Parking: 650 Townsend Street, SF CA 94103

Please enter the Zynga Parking garage to the right of the 650 Townsend entrance with the circular ascending ramp. A Zynga security guard will be waiting for you upon arrival. They will direct you to park on level 2 and escort you into the building where I will collect you.

Subject: Econ speech

Team, after a lot of back and forth with HRC, the attached draft is where we've landed with the econ speech. She's reading it one more time and we're still looking for cuts and small corrections.

And here's the Bush sound bite I'd propose:

You may have heard Governor Bush say last week that Americans just need to work longer hours. Well, he must not have met very many American workers. Let him tell that to the nurse who stands on her feet all day or the trucker who drives all night. Let him tell that to the fast food workers marching in the streets for better pay. They don't need a lecture – they need a raise.

I'll let Senator Sanders talk about the polls. Let me talk about the voters. Donald Trump has gotten X.X million votes so far this election. That's a lot of support. And there's only one candidate for President – only one in either party – who has gotten more votes than Mr. Trump. And that's me. I've gotten 700,000 more votes than Trump. Not Senator Sanders – he's running 1 million votes behind Donald Trump. I'm the only one who has brought more voters to the polls, to vote for me, than Donald Trump.

If current #s hold up through Saturday races how about something like this:

Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders have both talked a lot about how many voters they're turning out but so far I've won 10 states, and I have won 700 thousand more votes than Donald Trump and Sen Sanders has 1 MM fewer votes than Donald Trump. I think Sen Sanders would also have to acknowledge that I have not outpolled him significantly among African-Americans & Latinos, but among all voters over that age of 30, who total 83% of all Democratic votes cast, I beat Sen Sanders by 2 to 1 or 1.4 MM voters. I have also won our primaries in key swing states like Virginia, Iowa and Nevada and about 8 states Sen Sanders has won fewer voters than either Trump or myself.

The point is that winning in Nov. will take building a strong, diverse coalition. We are going to have to do what both Bill Clinton and Barack Obama did to win – appeal to and actually turnout the diverse coalition of voters we need to win the presidency. So far, it's fair to say that my message, my campaign is doing a much better job of building that coalition and actually getting our voters to the polls.

Subject: Debate Book - for tomorrow's prep

Dear all,

Here is the Debate Book -- this document is exactly what HRC currently has in hard copy. (We swapped in updates for about 5 sections this morning; the rest of the book was printed for her on Wednesday). Also attached are a few additional background pages that HRC asked for yesterday.

The yellow highlights on the table of contents are the sections we told her to focus on. Kristina and I will bring 7-10 hard copies of those questions, to Detroit tomorrow.

One thing that HRC asked for a good response on, is Bernie's claim that "he is the one who can beat Trump, because he is still doing better than her against Trump, in national polls." She wanted a smart reply -- whether it is saying that polls always change; or pointing to other polls; or whatever. Do people on this chain have any good ideas about that, as she will likely bring it up tomorrow?

Finally, below are a few final things Kristina and I are running down, for prep tomorrow. She also wanted some good Trump hits, and we've thought of the fact that he opposed the auto bailout, and Trump University. Please let us know if you have other ideas.

Thanks so much,

Sara and Kristina

Subject: Profiteers of Pain

I don't think it's unfair to say that certain news profiteers actively hope for the next cataclysm or catastrophe. Why? Because murder sells. War sells. Earthquakes sell. Human misery and disaster sell. For-profit media is often, in essence, just another form of disaster capitalism.

Media patterns of behavior - like blaming the victim or demonizing those who fight for justice - are carefully constructed strategies designed to exploit a story for ratings and profit. Looking at certain cable news networks it's sometimes difficult to differentiate between institutional prejudice and cynical malice. But whatever lies behind the mask, the end result is too often a loss for humanity and a gain for corporate stakeholders - again and again.

At Truthout, we resist the corporatization of media. You can see that in both the stories we publish and the way we do business - refusing advertising or corporate sponsorship.

Lebanon Daily News: Children's issues close to Hillary Clinton's heart

By Ann F. Lewis

January 27, 2015 6:24 p.m. EDT

What do Hillary Clinton, former Republican Whip Tom DeLay, and the founder of Wendy's have in common?
Hint: It isn't politics.

This unusual coalition worked together to make a better life for children in orphanages and foster care; work that has made a real difference for tens of thousands of young people.

Orphans and foster care children are not a high-powered political group in Washington. There were no lobbyists; no one demanding Clinton take this on. I was working in the White House at the time, so I got to watch up close, but otherwise I might never have known.

So why did she do it? Because Clinton believed it was the right thing to do.

From working at the Children's Defense Fund right after law school to her efforts to expand early learning for children today, Hillary Clinton has worked throughout her adult life — in and out of public office — to improve the lives of children. Her work on behalf of orphans and foster care children is not an exception, but an important example.

As First Lady, Clinton made adoption and foster care one of her priorities. She worked across the partisan aisle, with two unlikely partners: former Republican Minority Whip Tom Delay of Texas and business leader Dave Thomas of Wendy's, a lifelong Republican.

Together, they held events at the White House to raise awareness, and built support for legislation that would encourage adoptions, provide more aid for foster families, and help foster children find permanent, safe, loving homes.

The first piece of legislation was the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997, which provided support and services for adoptive families and increased foster adoptions by 64 percent by 2002. The Washington Post called the law "the most significant change in federal child-protection policy in almost two decades."

The second piece of legislation, the Foster Care Independence Act of 1999, was focused on children who "age out" of the foster care system when they turn 18. Too often, these children leave their foster home with only a green plastic bag of their belongings — and too little hope. The purpose of this legislation was to make the transition easier for these kids and to give them, as President Bill Clinton said, "the tools they need to make the most of their lives." Access to health-care, education, housing assistance and counseling services are just some of the tools this law provided.

Clinton introduced legislation in the Senate to help interested adults learn more about adoption. She was also a member of the Congressional Coalition on Adoption and partnered with Democrats and Republicans alike to remove barriers to adoption and support the adoption of children in foster care.

At the State Department, Clinton brought the issue to the world stage. She appointed the first ever special adviser on international children's issues and worked with other countries to improve foster care programs worldwide.

Adoption and foster care are not likely to be an issue in any political campaign. But they're important to Hillary Clinton. That is what her life has been about: building coalitions, working with partners, doing whatever it takes to make a real difference on issues that make a real difference in people's lives — beginning with the very youngest among us.

That's the Hillary Clinton I know.

Lewis served as White House director of communications from 1997-2000.

This caucus season, we Iowans find ourselves at the epicenter of a national discussion about the intersection of immigration policy, race, families, and the economy. As a state that is experiencing a relatively new growth to our immigrant population (from 1.6% of the population of the state in 1990 to 4.8% in 2013), outsiders may not recognize Iowa's unique and potentially powerful place in the conversation.

Once informed about Hillary Clinton's letter opposing BDS, the favorable/unfavorable views held by students regarding pro-BDS arguments shifted 11 points in the right direction.

Just a reflection that she remains a trusted source to students on these issues, and I'm glad to see she is out there conveying this viewpoint.

In just a short few years, Progress Iowa has worked with allies to achieve legislation for an increased minimum wage, an expansion of Medicaid, and an environment that is protected for generations to come. I am writing to make you aware of some concerning incidents we have experienced with your reporter David Maratosko.

On two separate occasions during trips to Iowa and New Hampshire, David attempted to trail the motorcade between event stops, getting dangerously close to the point where the state police escorting the motorcade had to pull him over on more than one occasion.

He also made a false report about the speed of the motorcade, claiming that it was traveling at speeds higher than it was, and posted video that indicated he was speeding in pursuit of the vehicles, which the Iowa Department of Transportation and others refuted and cited concerns about.

We strive to run an open campaign that facilitates journalists' ability to cover us in a safe and professional environment. At times David has conducted himself perfectly professionally at our events. At times he has been disruptive – shouting over and disrupting other reporters to the point that other journalists have complained to the campaign. We expect that kind of exchange during the rough and tumble of a presidential campaign. But we find the motorcade incidents disturbing and wanted to bring them to your attention.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Palmieri

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
STATEMENT ON HIV AND AIDS

Yesterday, at Nancy Reagan's funeral, I said something inaccurate when speaking about the Reagans' record on HIV and AIDS. Since then, I've heard from countless people who were devastated by the loss of friends and loved ones, and hurt and disappointed by what I said, and I understand why. I made a mistake, plain and simple.

10/18/2016

I want to use this opportunity to talk not only about where we've come from but where we must go in the fight against HIV and AIDS.

To be clear, the Reagans did not start a national conversation about HIV and AIDS. Unfortunately, the opposite was true. That distinction belongs to generations of brave men and women who started not just a conversation but a movement that continues to this day.

The AIDS crisis in America began as a quiet, deadly epidemic. Because of discrimination and disregard, it remained that way for far too long. When many in positions of power turned a blind eye, it was groups like ACT UP, Gay Men's Health Crisis and others that came forward to shatter the silence. They organized and marched, held die-ins on the steps of city halls and vigils in the streets. They fought alongside a few courageous voices in Washington, like U.S. Representative Henry Waxman, who spoke out from the floor of Congress.

Then there were all the people whose names we don't often hear today – the unsung heroes who fought on the frontlines of the crisis, from hospital wards and bedsides, some with their last breath. Slowly, too slowly, ignorance was crowded out by information. People who had once closed their eyes opened their hearts.

If not for those advocates, activists and ordinary, heroic people, we would not be where we are in preventing and treating HIV and AIDS. Their courage – and their refusal to accept silence as the status quo – saved lives.

We've come a long way. But we still have work to do to eradicate this disease for good and to erase the stigma that is an echo of a shameful and painful period in our country's history.

This issue is important to me. At the 1992 Democratic National Convention, when my husband accepted the nomination for president, we marked a break with the past by having two HIV-positive speakers -- the first time that ever happened at a national convention. As First Lady, I brought together world leaders to strategize and coordinate efforts to take on HIV and AIDS around the world. In the Senate, I put forward legislation to expand global AIDS research and assistance and to increase prevention and education. And as Secretary of State, I launched a campaign to usher in an AIDS-free generation through prevention and treatment, targeting the populations at greatest risk of contracting HIV.

The AIDS crisis looks very different today. There are more options for treatment and prevention than ever before. More people with HIV are leading full and happy lives. But HIV and AIDS are still with us. They continue to disproportionately impact communities of color, transgender people, young people and gay and bisexual men. There are still 1.2 million people living with HIV in the United States today, with about 50,000 people newly diagnosed each year. In Sub-Saharan Africa, almost 60 percent of people with HIV are women and girls. Even though the tools exist to end this epidemic once and for all, there are still far too many people dying today. That is absolutely inexcusable.

I believe there's even more we can – and must – do together. For starters, let's continue to increase HIV and AIDS research and invest in the promising innovations that research is producing. Medications like PrEP are proving effective in preventing HIV infection; we should expand access to that drug for everyone, including at-risk populations. We should call on Republican governors to put people's health and well-being ahead of politics and extend Medicaid, which would provide healthcare to those with HIV and AIDS. We should call on states to reform outdated and stigmatizing HIV criminalization laws. We should increase funding for the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR). And we should cap out-of-pocket expenses and drug costs, and hold companies like Turing and Valeant accountable when they attempt to gouge patients by jacking up the price of lifesaving medications.

We're still surrounded by memories of loved ones lost and lives cut short. But we're also surrounded by survivors who are fighting harder than ever. We owe it to them and to future generations to continue that fight together. For the first time, an AIDS-free generation is in sight. As president, I promise you that I will not let up until we reach that goal. We will not leave anyone behind.

Have floated this idea in a couple of places, but putting it on this thread as well--we have two places online that we could respond to in terms of digital organizing perspective. There is an Out for Hillary group with 14k members that I think some kind of extended engagment over this would be helpful--an AMA with Dominic/Robby/Dennis, a special Note (which is a long form format over Facebook), re-purposing the Medium piece there, etc would go a long way. Our other option is Reddit, which has an extremely vocal core of LGBT members, but I would prioritize this Facebook group, which is the largest LGBT community of Hillary's supporters I know. These are friendlies, they are already carrying water for us making sure the apology is out there, and they firmly sit in groups 1 and 2 that Dom identified.

Whatever we did to send our LGBT talking points to folks has really worked, they are popping up everywhere on the supporter Facebook groups.

Hi all,

I wanted to start a new thread to give a brief update about what I'm hearing from folks and get up to speed on how we're thinking of responding in the short and long term. (Sending to a smaller group from yesterday's call but please do loop in others who should be a part of this convo.)

First, as you can imagine, most people are expressing palpable anger and hurt over the comments. I won't belabor the point because I'm sure we all fielded calls, texts, tweets in the last 24 hours over this. But suffice to say, we aren't in a good place with the community right now.

If I had to break things down, I'd put people into three categories: 1) supporters who were horrified at the comment but accept the apology; 2) supporters who are angry and can only be mollified with a longer statement, tv appearance, roundtable, or something else big that shows she "gets it." They will continue to make hay in the meantime; and 3) Bernie folks who are happy to have a new line of attack.

What concerns me is that in that second group are a lot folks from Queer Nation, ACT UP, and other activists who are out, loud, and not afraid of direct action or aggressive confrontation. Given that, I'd love if we could build on yesterday's response -- and quickly. I don't want this to fester.

I assume we're prepping an answer for tomorrow's town hall, but has there been talk in the office of doing more today?

Looking ahead, is it possible to bump up an HIV / AIDS policy rollout? Is there any interest in putting a roundtable conversation or OTR together? (Robbie Kaplan has already volunteered GMHC.)

Would love to know where your heads are at and to be a part of the conversation today about next steps and moving forward.

Thanks,

D.

There’s no sugar coating this:

- Polls show the race for IL10 is a TOSS UP
- Republicans are spending $4 MILLION to defeat Brad
- and now Roll Call named Brad one of the MOST VULNERABLE members of Congress.

Our race will go down to the wire: There’s 32 days to go, and we have a huge grassroots goal for October: $250,000.

So John, we need you: Will you pitch in $5 or more for Brad’s progressive campaign?

Subject: Invitation For Support --- Scholarship Fundraising Event To Support School Which Suffered Tragic Shooting --- Please forward to proper party.

Mrs. Clinton,

Throughout my childhood and early adult years I've grown up watching and admiring your rise to become one of the most influential women on the planet. At a time when you are entrenched in battle with other candidates and the press, seeking any sort of positive momentum for your campaign is pivotal. I believe I may have an opportunity to help not only your campaign, but to give our next generation a real shot at being successful individuals who positively contribute to society.

On October 24th 2014 my former high school Marysville Pilchuck in Marysville, Washington suffered a tragic shooting which took the lives of many promising young students. Since the tragic event the community has pulled together but still needs help and positive's to rally around as school is newly back in session. I've come up with a scholarship fundraising event which would provide $1,000 to EVERY graduating senior as a way to help offset costs they may encounter when seeking continuing education. Achieving this fundraising target would require the raising of $265,000. Funds would then be distributed by established 401c3 MP Memorial Fund.

In my initial planning phases I've gained support from a large Seattle radio station along with securing support from a tribal partner who is more than happy to provide a 3,000 seat amphitheater at no cost for our event. We just need the talent and support!

We could use your help!

At the end of the day I truly believe that this fundraiser will receive nothing but positive press which could only bolster Mrs Clinton's poll numbers as she continues her historical career.

Please consider running this fundraising idea up the flag pole, before one of your fellow running candidates do...

Thanks for your time and consideration.

The series of tweets where he defines what it means to be a progressive seems really consequential to me because they exclude Obama from being a progressive. He's turning this into a referendum on Obama which seems like a really really bad place for him.

LCV is honoring Robert Redford with a Lifetime Achievement Award – will you add your name to our “thank you” card?

John,

Most people probably know Robert Redford from his incredible movie career. But to me, he's always been an inspiring environmental leader and a great friend of the League of Conservation Voters.

For more than two decades, Robert has worked with LCV to elect environmental champions to Congress, defeat members of the “Dirty Dozen” and pass laws that protect the air we breathe and the water we drink.

That's why I'm excited to announce that LCV will be honoring Robert with a Lifetime Achievement Award at our annual New York dinner later this month. Additionally, we also plan to give him a “thank you” card signed by LCV supporters.

Will you join us in thanking Robert Redford for his fierce commitment to protecting our environment? Add your name to our “thank you” card and we'll present it to him at our annual dinner.

Robert is an ardent conservationist and environmentalist who stands for social responsibility and political involvement. His life-long passion for nature and issues of justice have resulted in Robert being widely acknowledged as a highly effective and dedicated political and environmental activist.

But for Robert, actions speak louder than words – and over the years he's been deeply involved in many of LCV's most important campaigns. From recording radio ads that appear in congressional districts around the country to helping LCV raise money to ensure we have the resources we need to run hard-hitting campaigns, Robert has been with us every step of the way.

You probably noticed the bold declaration that's currently at the top of our homepage: YOU ARE NOT ALONE.

To me, those words bring to mind the workplace recycling memo that I pinned to the office door of the small record store I worked in when I was twenty. They bring to mind the courage it takes to broach a topic of conversation at a family gathering, or on Facebook, that you know full well no one wants to talk about. They remind me of every person who ever dared to swim against the tide, whether as an individual or as part of a broader community of activists.

I know first-hand that it's not always possible to join a march or investigate an issue oneself. There are many ways to be involved and show solidarity, one of which is through supporting an organization like Truthout.

 Organizing for America

John --

Last night President Obama marked the end of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

As the President said, the struggle for peace is not over, but the progress we've made is undeniable.

This moment also represents a promise kept. As a candidate, President Obama laid out a vision for this country -- and bringing our troops home from Iraq was a defining part of that vision. It was one of the reasons that all of us knocked on doors, made phone calls, and voted.

Keeping that promise is important, not only for our brave women and men in uniform, but also for their loved ones, and for all Americans who have hoped and prayed for a resolution to this war.

Please take a moment to watch the President's speech if you missed it last night:

And so on. I will send the substantiation for each soon. I am listening to each ad and making sure it matches the substantiation correctly.

Re: Apollo Astronaut, Dr. Edgar Mitchell's, Request for Meeting to discuss Disclosure

Dear John Podesta:

As we move into the last half of 2014, the need for extraterrestrial disclosure intensifies. Thank you for your kind consideration and response to my email.

This 4 July weekend I will meet with President Obama's friend, Ambassador Hamamoto, at the US Mission in Geneva during their Independence Day Celebration. While in Geneva I will also speak at the UN and the European Space Agency regarding why we must move forward with disclosure and specific programs such as manned moon missions, since some scientists and others are calling for moon colonization due to what they perceive is happening on Earth.

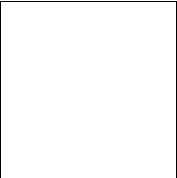

John, with this email I am requesting a conversation with you and President Obama regarding the next steps in extraterrestrial disclosure for the benefit of our country and our planet.

Fifty years ago Battelle, Brookings and RAND studies on UFOs convinced the government to remove knowledge of the extraterrestrial presence from the citizens of our country. These organizations advised with their best information. However, today much, if not most, of the extraterrestrial reality they examined is known by our citizens. These organizations' resultant strategies and policies of 50 years ago no longer hold credibility or benefit.

Five decades of UFO information have dramatically shifted the public awareness of an extraterrestrial presence. And yet, our government is still operating from outdated beliefs and policies. These are detrimental to trust in government transparency, science, religion, and responsible citizenry embracing the next step in our country's space travel and research.

Three disclosure issues are prominent: 1) planet sustainability via next generation energies such as zero point energy, 2) galactic travel and research undertaken as an advanced species aware of the extraterrestrial presence, not as uninformed explorers who revert to colonialism and destruction and 3) the example of a confident, engaged government who respectfully regards the wisdom and intellect of its citizens as we move into space.

I respectfully receive your response to my request for conversation on disclosure.

Subject: LTC Commission - ADAPT calls on the Disability Community - establish federal pol

Attachments: ADAPTLTCCSept2013[1].doc

Although the ADAPT Community had hoped the Federal Commission on Long Term Care would produce important recommendations improving the lives of people with disabilities who use long term services and supports, we are deeply disappointed with the recommendations the Commission has released which fail to address critical issues.

The report:

- fails to address Medicaid's institutional bias in any substantive and actionable way, instead talking vaguely about promoting "options for people who would prefer to live in the community";
- demonstrates a complete lack of awareness about the Olmstead rights of people with disabilities to live in "the most integrated setting" by using language from IDEA;
- fails to address the need for affordable, accessible integrated housing which forces people to remain in institutions;
- promotes unwanted medicalization and over-regulation of home and community-based services which undercuts the availability and intent of consumer-directed services;
- assumes people with disabilities are passive, establishing the expectation that family members and attendants should be part of the person- and family-centered planning approach and included on "treatment teams," but never acknowledging the role that people with disabilities should have in developing their own person-DIRECTED plan; and
- fails to provide any specific, actionable recommendation for moving forward to develop a system that meets the needs of people with disabilities who want to manage their own services and live independently in the community, but including a specific recommendation to increase available funding to nursing facilities.

It is notable that Henry Claypool and Lynnae Ruttledge - the two representative who come from the Disability Community - voted "no" on this plan. From what we have read, it seems clear why they did. If it doesn't do anything else, this report reaffirms the need for fundamental change in the systems that provide Long Term Services and Support and demonstrates that people with disabilities cannot rely on others to advocate for such change.

ADAPT calls on the Disability Community to work together so we finally establish federal policies which will FREE OUR PEOPLE!

Keeping Val in the loop, we will work with JB and team on the following for CGI America:

- 1) Potential speaking/welcoming role for JB at the meeting
- 2) Opportunity for JB/MK to spend time with WJC at/around meeting
- 3) Ensuring the sponsor reception occurs when JB/MK are available
- 4) Soliciting input (no guarantees) around topics of importance to JB
- 5) Soliciting relevant panelist input (again, no guarantees)
- 6) Drafting our standard 2-3 page agreement

I think that is it. Val, let me know what I missed.

Thanks.

YEAR-END FUNDRAISING GOAL: $2,311 LEFT TO GO. Contribute \$5 now >>

John --

I'm Luke, Baron's campaign manager.

I wanted to take a minute to tell you where we are with our big year-end fundraising push. Folks across Indiana are stepping up in a big way, and we're almost there. Right now we're only $2,311 away from hitting our goal.

It's my job to keep the campaign on track and to make sure we're hitting all of our goals. That's why we send emails like this -- so we will have what we need to start next year strong.

Pitch in \$5 right away and help us hit our year-end goal.

Reaching this goal will keep us on pace so we can win next year. Each goal we hit helps us be in the best possible position. If we fall short, we'll have to make some tough choices. Let's not go down that road.

If you've ever wondered why you get so many emails asking for contributions, it's because grassroots supporters like you are what makes a winning campaign. We can't do this without you. Baron isn't going to call on folks like the Koch brothers to help him out. He's going to win this because folks like you pitched in what they could.

Can Baron count on you in our final push of the year? Contribute \$5 or whatever you can today.

Thanks,

Luke Quandt

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive thought leaders.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a small group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive collection of how to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, but no later than this Friday, May 1.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.

- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit “performance pay” write-offs.

Subject: The Second Annual Georgetown Law Halloween / Fall Decoration Contest

Dear Community Colleagues,

Put on your thinking caps this weekend - the Building Community Committee is pleased to announce the Second Annual Georgetown Law Halloween / Fall Decoration Contest!

All Georgetown Law community members may participate. You may choose either a Halloween or a fall seasonal theme and you can partner with other staff/offices if you wish. There are three broad groupings: Individual Workspace/Office, Door Decoration, Offices/Teams.

The "Rules"

Decoration can begin at any time. To encourage the opportunity for the entire community to view the decorations, please put up your decorations as early as possible. The decorations will be judged on October 30th.

Our Georgetown Law Communications colleagues may wish to incorporate the decorations into various messages for our internal and external communities. Obviously, if your decorations are done earlier, your work has a better chance of being memorialized.

Please keep costs in mind – our prior decoration contests were offered at minimal cost by staff donating or bringing from home most of the materials used outside of a small amount of office supplies. The decorations are for everyone and they are greatly enjoyed by the students and the enhanced community spirit benefits all. In my other role as Assistant Dean for Financial Aid, I thank you in advance for balancing both fun and finances.

Finally – HAVE FUN!

Online registration information will be provided next week so everyone will have the opportunity to see who is participating! A viewing guide will be provided as well.

Happy Fall from the Building Community Committee!

From Finance-- HRC is going to do a roundtable with top African American donor/bundler-types on the afternoon of March 30th in NYC. We are starting to make calls now. It would be really helpful if you could call Tracy to invite him – he attended the first dinner that Frank White organized for you at the beginning of the campaign. Tracy raised a lot for Obama but has not done anything for us yet.

He needs to hear that this meeting is an important one and coming from you, the message will be clearer. We expect to keep the roundtable to no more than 25 people – all who have a history of raising significant political dollars but have not yet stepped up for HRC yet.

From Finance-- Michael is one of the campaign's top targets to contribute $353,400 to the Hillary Victory Fund in 2016. At the least, we think a call back from John could help us get Michael's $33,400 to HVF, Michael's wife's $33,400 to HVF.

Public education is essential to our democracy — but big corporations and their front group ALEC see it as just another way to make money. They're working to ensure your tax dollars get diverted to private companies that skimp on quality, sometimes foregoing school buildings and classrooms altogether, to maximize profits. They might as well put a dollar sign on students' foreheads.

Subject: [big campaign] Tracking Update: McCain Press Avail in Everglades, FL 06/06/08

Hello BigCampaign,

We were not able to get a tracker to McCain's exotic event today in the Everglades. However, we were able to monitor his press avail via streaming video. Below are notes from the event.

Big Highlights

- McCain says Bush did not overstep his authority by wiretapping
- McCain spent most of the event defending his opposition to Everglades preservation bills; also his cap-and-trade proposal and catastrophe insurance
- McCain also took questions on unemployment #s and yesterday's report on Iraq

Everglades, FL: McCain Press Avail 06/06/08

Background Details

- Gov. Crist and Congressman Diaz-Balart were with McCain.
- Small- to mid-sized gaggle of national/traveling and local press
- Event took place on site of the Everglades Safari Park near Miami. McCain did not appear to weather the heat too well—appeared very sweaty.

Opening Remarks

MCCAIN: On the topic of FISA. I've always said I'd obey any law that's passed by the US congress. Right now the courts are taking up issues of powers of President. Unfortunately FISA bill is hung up in the House – hopefully they'll be able to get something good done. Our ability to counter terrorists acts is impeded by our failure to pass the FISA bill. Therefore it is a priority. I believe the telecoms companies shouldn't be retroactively held liable for cooperating with our govt's requests to monitor communications from and with other countries. We need to pass the FISA bill that went through the Senate – this clears up a lot of the ambiguities.

Press Avail

- Q1) KELLY O'DONNELL: Prior to this revamping of FISA, do you feel Pres Bush overreached his authority?
MCCAIN: No. one court said he was legal in what he did. Other courts have said he was not. the whole issue can be resolved by passing this FISA bill. I'm not interested in going back... let's move forward. Let's address the challenge we face today to counter individuals that threaten this country.
- Q2) Dems have been critical of you for not supporting the WRDA (Water Resources Development Act)?
They said you didn't get it, that it wasn't an appropriations bill; it was an authorization bill.
MCCAIN: I'm astonished that they are critical of me. Yeah it was a bill with 900 projects on it, with $58B already on the books. They added another $23B. this is the game in DC. And then the appropriators pick which one of those projects that are authorized to fund. That's how you get museums funded rather than the Everglades restored. I'm glad that Feingold and I worked on it. And McCaskill. I'm disappointed that Obama became part of the same old system, not only authorizing pork-barrel projects but seeking 10s of millions of dollars in earmarks in his short time in the Senate. They don't get it. The American people are fed up with wasting money and out of control spending. We've spent trillions that have exceeded our budget.
- Q3) That water bill as an example. If you're elected, the authorizations committee isn't going to change. How are you going to work with them?
MCCAIN: I'll make them famous. They'll know their names. The American people resoundingly reject this practice which has mortgage our childrens futures.
- Q4) jobless numbers. How can you convince Americans that you're better to help than Obama?

MCCAIN: I should've mentioned that in my intro comments. This is the worst # in 22 years, I'm told. Americans are hurting.

- o (1) Get spending under control.
- o (2) We need to give people FHA loans so they can stay in their homes,
- o (3) don't raise taxes, eliminate our dependence on foreign oil because it's hurting us on gas prices,
- o we have to restore trust and confidence in our govt ability to restrain spending.
- o (4) Invest in job training and education programs to help people that have lost their jobs or those that are about their jobs.
- o It's going to require change, the right kind of change. Obama wants to go back to big govt of 1960s. we will recover. The question is how long and how hard it's gonna be. I have fundamental optimism about the economy.

- Q5) What's your position on whether Jerusalem should be the undivided capital of Israel? Reaction to Obama's comments on the subject.

MCCAIN: I can't react to every comment by Obama because it will probably change, as it did with sitting down with Ahmadiyad. Jerusalem is undivided, it's the capital. We should move our embassy to Jerusalem before anything else happens. The subject will be addressed by the Israeli govt and people.

- Q6) Response to Obama's criticism that cap and trade program didn't go far enough? And what more would you do?

MCCAIN: I've been heavily engaged on this issue since 2001. I know of none on Obama's part. I have fought this administration tooth and nail about this. I've done everything I can to make my constituents and America aware of the problems of global warming. McCain – Lieberman was not perfect, but it's far better than a carbon tax.

- Q7) Reporter apologizes for hoarse; stumbles.

MCCAIN: – I get that way myself.

- Q7) How do you get money to Everglades. Crist has lobbied DC far for this in Washington.

MCCAIN: There are 900 projects proposed in this bill. Isn't the Everglades of sufficient urgency that it shouldn't be tied with all these other projects, like museums? It should be a stand-alone appropriation. I'll encourage Congress to care. I'll try to educate the American people that we're all in this together.

- Q8) follow up on emissions trading. Obama's criticism is not about the overall aim of your plan, but rather the plan auction permits to factories instead of giving them away. How do you feel about that?

MCCAIN: I have worked in bipartisan effort for years. We don't come up with perfect solutions. I know of no record of Obama's. I'd like to see him come up with his own proposal and I'll examine it. I am committed to this issue and have a clear record, so people can have confidence.

- Q9) On employment numbers, everything you talk about are long-range plans. Do you think there is short-term relief, like extension of unemployment benefits and insurance benefits?

MCCAIN: Yes I think we have to do all of those things. Also, This brings me to the gas tax holiday. All I wanted to do was give Americans a little relief. Obama opposed that as a "gimmick." I've talked to a lot of Americans, especially older Americans, who wish they had this. I think it's out of touch with average Americans not to want this. We need to examine every option, short-term and long-term.

- Q10) Start of hurricane season, and Floridians are worried about skyrocketing property insurance. Obama campaign says they support national catastrophic insurance and say you oppose it.

MCCAIN: I discussed this in the primary with straight talk. The bill that passed the House would never pass the Senate. We will establish risk pools and ways to provide insurance to all states at risk of hurricanes. I don't think it's fair just to do this for the state of FL. We'll come up with comprehensive insurance that will take care of a risk for all people of Gulf states.

- FOLLOWUP- but you voted against the WRDA bill.

MCCAIN: And I'm so happy that I did. It was littered and filled with pork projects. And there's a ton of projects that have been authorized that haven't been funded. We've fought to get it prioritized but it's not.

- Q11) yesterday's report on Iraq. What is your feeling about that and does that change your early support on Iraq?

MCCAIN: Every intelligence agency in the world concluded that Saddam had WMDs and was planning to use them. The sanctions were breaking down, American planes were being shot down, there was a multibillion oil for food scandal in the UN, the world is better without Hussein. The problem was the early mishandling of the war. I warned against that. I proposed the strategy that is now succeeding. Obama has never acknowledged this. And has never arranged a meeting with Petraeus, which is especially bad since he doesn't have experience in military. We're winning. If we'd done what Obama had wanted, we'd have had chaos and genocide in the region and elevation of Iran. I'll stand on my record and I'm proud of it and I'm proud of the people serving who will tell obama he was wrong.

- Q12) Can Congressman Diaz and Gov. Crist comment on McCain's opposition to the WRDA bill?
 - o CONGRESSMAN DIAZ: McCain has always been consistent. it was a $23B bill out of which $2B was for Everglades. McCain has been consistent not supporting pork. Everglades was part of a big bill. McCain has been very consistent on Everglades restoration.
 - o CRIST: McCain is right. If they'd been able to separate it out and prioritize it, much more important to a museum in MS...
 - o MCCAIN: You want to say something in Spanish?
 - o DIAZ: [in Spanish] "gang leader" on the restoration of Everglades. He's been very consistent.
 - o MCCAIN: "I agree with every word he just said."

Team,

There will be two meetings with HRC on Tuesday--the first will be about debate prep program and timeline and the second will be to discuss our latest thinking on strategic imperatives and message (agenda below).

Joel is going to send us a revised strategic imperatives document today to discuss on our call tomorrow morning. This will also help with our media planning, per Jim's comments yesterday. Joel and Anzo--it would be helpful to have as much insight as possible from the IA and NH polls on demographics and vulnerabilities to inform imperative(s) related to the primary. I assume these imperatives will evolve slightly after we have more time with the data.

After our discussion tomorrow morning, Joel is going to work with Jen and Dan on a draft message document for HRC. They're going to circulate for comments, but for efficiency and sanity, we're going to want them to drive this.

Let me know if there are any questions or flags--otherwise, I'm looking forward to our discussion tomorrow and the meeting Tuesday!

TUESDAY AGENDA

1. Feedback on post-launch stump
2. Discuss draft strategic imperatives and message docs

Mark is meeting with people to learn more about next steps for his philanthropy and social action and it's hard to imagine someone better placed or more experienced than you to help him. As you may know, he's young and hungry to learn — always in learning mode — and is early in his career when it comes to his philanthropic efforts. He's begun to think about whether/how he might want to shape advocacy efforts to support his philanthropic priorities and is particularly interested in meeting people who could help him understand how to move the needle on the specific public policy issues he cares most about. He wants to meet folks who can inform his understanding about effective political operations to advance public policy goals on social oriented objectives (like immigration, education or basic scientific research).

In case you have time on any trip, Andrea can schedule. And if it has to wait until after the campaign, we will all understand.

Julie, you know far more about this than I do, but just passing along something I heard that seems – if true – could be an interesting / relatively easy thing for WJC to fix that would impact/improve several million households in the US. is it true that when you use a debit card (as opposed to credit card), it doesn't impact/get reported to credit reporting agencies?

So in a perverse way, you have to use credit cards in order to improve your credit score, but you can't use your debit card (although ironically of course debit behavior is more responsible than using credit cards)

If that's true, maybe there's some way for WJC to get the credit agencies and card issuers to hammer out a deal (perhaps announceable at CGI America, or as a standalone event), that would help millions of credit card debt-laden US households improve their credit ratings by using debit cards rather than using their credit cards?

It would be impactful and is something that probably only someone like WJC could get done. Just a random thought and of course defer to you completely on this. We know VISA well.

Sincerely,
Ami

Subject: Welcome to Medium, John

Hello John-

I lead on outreach to high-profile political figures, policy makers, and advocacy organizations here at Medium and just wanted to reach out and say hello.

We are thrilled to have you and others from Hillary's campaign publishing on Medium.

"The Briefing" sounds very interesting and smart. We are happy to help integrate Medium as seamlessly as possible and share some thoughts on how best to do so.

As you may be aware, Medium is a self-publishing platform and network started by Twitter co-founder Ev Williams. You can read about Ev's vision here.

We believe Medium will play an increasingly important role in how individuals and campaigns tell their stories, publish op-eds, and communicate with the American electorate.

We have some big plans for the 2016 cycle.

It has been a pleasure to connect with Teddy Goff, Brian Fallon, and Jenna Lowenstein to share some ideas and best practices for the campaign to deploy Medium during the election.

Best,
Matt

WILL BILL GET A MINDER? NYT A1, "Clinton Team Hopes to Keep Bill at His Best," by Patrick Healy and Amy Chozick: "In hopes of collaborating with Mr. Clinton better than in 2008 ... advisers to Mrs. Clinton are involving him more closely in early campaign planning, and they are discussing whether to deploy a senior aide to travel with him to keep him focused on his wife's central message. ...

"Mr. Clinton has ... brushed up on ... modern campaigns ... 'The Victory Lab: The Secret Science of Winning Campaigns,' a 2012 book by Sasha Issenberg about how data and analytics have upended presidential campaigns, caught Mr. Clinton's eye in an article he read." <http://nyti.ms/1Hdft3l>

John:

Realize you are busy. Soldiers and their trained and valiant companion dogs form a unique bond. Keeping them together after service seems like the right thing to do. PTSD is often reduced. The bond that is formed in danger and combat deserves to be enjoyed in relative peace and recovery.

If you can look into this and make an inquiry it would be deeply appreciated.

John, can we follow up on my role this week? While I think we have done a pretty good job of managing the legal issues, we do need to make decisions on who will manage this piece post-election. I have one volunteer ethics lawyers who is interested in coming in-house as a deputy or could take the lead. Also, we need to add to the ranks of our volunteer lawyers to manage the ethics vetting process. Thanks, Cassandra

Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation Donates Again To The Republican Governors Association: $250,000

In June, Fox News' parent company News Corporation gave a $1 million donation to the Republican Governors Association. This evening, IRS disclosures reveal that News Corporation gave another check, time for $250,000, bringing his total donation amount to $1,250,000. Other donors include Bill Koch, who donated $100,000, Swift Boat-funder Bob Perry, who gave $3.5 million, and right-wing casino billionaire Sheldon Adelson, who gave $1 million to the Republican campaign group.

News Corporation chief Rupert Murdoch recently stated that he directed his company's donation in order to help his friend John Kasich, the Republican nominee for governor in Ohio. As ThinkProgress' Ian Millhiser noted, there actually are laws against corporate managers treating a publicly-traded corporation as if it were their own personal bank account. Although News Corporation was founded in Australia, it was recently reincorporated in Delaware and thus must comply with key Delaware court decisions. Significantly, the Delaware Supreme Court determined over 70 years ago that "[c]orporate officers and directors are not permitted to use their position of trust and confidence to further their private interests."

To quote Jake Sullivan, less is more. She can really command tomorrow night, as long as she doesn't over do it, needlessly inflame our base, or overplay 9/11. She should convey the gravity of the situation, but also, show her moderation in response. She should stare down the terrorists, but also, the right wingers in Europe and the US who will spew hatred, and those who want to overreach.

I'm looking (again) for an opportunity to join the Obama administration and could use your advice and help.

DOI seems to be the best opportunity at present and people know of my interest there.

Would you have some time to talk on the phone or in your office?

Thanks,

Subject: Keeping up the fight

John,

Our race in Arizona is starting to take shape.

- MSNBC's Rachel Maddow said the map is "looking good for Democrats," and Arizona is one of the top races.
- Larry Sabato's Crystal Ball changed our race rating to make it more competitive.
- Even a Republican member of Congress has come out and said Ann can win. This race is close. Everyone knows it. Help us keep up the power we need to win by hitting our \$15,000 October goal. Make a contribution today.

Unfortunately, no competitive race these days would be complete without the special interests.

Dark money groups are already attacking Ann. And they'll keep up a steady stream of attacks from now through Election day.

There's one critical piece of this campaign that determine our success: You.

Your contributions help us fight these attacks and stand with Ann. Let's make sure we have everything we need to keep it up and win this competitive race.

Make a contribution today.

Thanks.

Hi Pop,

I told Andy that you were going to see John and asked if he could provide a bit of background on a couple of topics.

The one that I had contacted John about concerned the use of air guns by oil companies in their search for oil on the sea floor. There are two issues here. One is that the air guns themselves kill and injure marine mammals as well as other marine life at high rates. The other issue regards the dangers of oil spills surrounding offshore drilling.

Andy also included something on seafood fraud. It seems overly detailed for the purpose of giving you a brief overview, but you may find it interesting none the less. The take home I believe is that Oceana is very pleased with the White House's position and actions they have taken on this issue and wants to thank John for being a champion on this topic. He is, however, nervous that the momentum could flag and wants to encourage John to keep up the pressure.

Let me know if you want to talk about any of these.

Also, please inquire if it would make any sense for John or somebody else at the White House to talk with Andy on either of these topics.

Thanks.

♥Jim

Jim:

Here are the two briefers for you. Let me know if they are what you expected. I'm really glad that you and your Dad are following up on this with John. Bottom line, the message on seafood fraud to John is "You did a really important thing, thank you," and on Atlantic Ocean seismic testing, is "especially after BP and the Deepwater Horizon disaster, why are you taking these extraordinary risks, and expanding into an area that had been off limits to international oil companies for thirty years?"

Best,

Andy

Subject: I'm honored to be a father

View this email in your browser

Dear Friend,

My daughter, Samariah, is about to turn 14. It's an honor to be her father, and it's a lot of fun. But fourteen is such a vulnerable age. It's the age at which many of the young women I work with are first sexually exploited. Most of these young ladies have never had a strong male role model in their life. And the men they've spent time with—solicitors and pimps—have destroyed their ability to trust.

I remember the first time Ciara, a young woman in the program, casually called me 'Poppa Darian.' It happened within my first week at Not For Sale and it reminded me of what a privilege it is to work with these ladies every day. Helping them perfect their cover letters, chatting about life, talking about where they are and who they're going to become—I love every minute of it.

These bright young women have come so far in such a short time. It's a constant reminder of how much one person, one man, one father can impact someone's life. This Father's Day, you can be that person to young women like Ciara. By taking part in the Not For Sale Throwdown and working free for a day so that others can be free for a lifetime, you can also turn the lives of young people around.

Please show these young ladies that you care. We're doing real work here, but we just can't do it without you.

Happy Father's Day,

Darian Eastman

Subject: This week - transition block for November

This is the block updated from our conversation Saturday. A few things:

it sounds like getting a picture of taking the girls to school would involve a waiver. What is a 2nd option for a photo that day?

Do we have a podium sign with the seal being printed somewhere?

We have locked a ballroom at the Hyatt for avails. We are trying to lock an additional ballroom for the meeting followed by avail for Friday.

We are close to having office space locked for Wed-Friday. Adam Hitchcock will update later today. Hopefully Ariel Cap which is one block from our HQ and one block from Hyatt.

We should get this to BO if no one has issues.

This has come up most recently with Samantha Power. We have allowed it for volunteers if it was scheduled prior to their involvement with the transition and we can include specific language in the code to that affect.

A related question is whether we should have a specific bar on volunteers accepting travel and accommodations to conferences and events. We've interpreted this as barred by the gift ban.

I told Caitlin I just need a few minutes of your time this AM.

I want to talk about CDA- I know they are still working with there lawyers for a plan to give to FFA BOard (Marc has not seen a draft yet). But I am sensitive that they are looking for some grant money next week. Frank had also asked for a line item accounting of the previously sent $ but we have not seen that yet- I believe Tom is working on it)

I wanted to talk to you about getting approval from the Board today to move $2 million dollars on Monday March 3rd. Then considering moving the additional $2 million mid month.

If we can talk first, I would then like to email the Board as soon as possible to get sign off today. This is time sensitive so I was hoping to move on this early today. Unless you think the money should not be moved forst thing next week.

This is what I expect our expenses will be in March-

Subject: URGENT: FEC Deadline in 5 hours

"McCain can't beat Democrat, GOP congressman says"

- 12 News, 9/27/15

John,

We've been through a lot of change this quarter. We were ranked one of the top races in the country. I've been attacked online.

Now, Rep. Schweikert has said that he doesn't think John McCain can beat us.

While we've got the momentum, we need to remember that John McCain has a lot of resources and a lot of allies. But we will not back down.

Our FEC deadline is in 5 hours. And this is no time to start missing goals.

We're only $217 away from our $35,000 goal. Please, before the deadline hits, give $5, $10, or whatever you can.

Yes, this race is heating up. Let's make sure we're up to the challenge.

Thanks for your help.

Ann

Subject: HRC and the Business Council

Attachments: Business Council Members.pdf

John,

Great to see you on New Year's Day.. so glad you could join us...

As you might know, one of my clients is the Business Council — 120+ of the biggest CEO's in the US. The new Chairman is Jeff Bezos, CEO of Amazon... the past two Chairs have been Andrew Liveris of Dow and Jamie Dimon of JPMorgan. Their next meeting is going to be in Silicon Valley on Feb. 27-28. We usually get a good group of approximately 100 CEO's at each meeting. The meetings are for CEO's and their spouses only and off the record.

I saw a blurb on Politico a few days ago saying that Hilary Clinton was going to be in the area a few days before the meeting. (--"Hillary ... to Deliver Keynote Address at Inaugural 2015 Watermark Lead On Silicon Valley Conference for Women" on Feb. 24).

There are two key speaking spots open on the agenda of the Feb. 27-28 meeting — one for the dinner on Thursday, Feb. 27, and one for the closing spot at 11:00am on Friday, Feb. 28th. I would love to see if Ms. Clinton could join the meeting and speak in one of those spots. I think it would be a great group for her to talk with and because it is private, think she could engage in real conversations with them. I would also be delighted to help set up some one off meetings for her with some CEO's if that would be helpful.

I am pretty sure the Business Council will not be able pay her normal speaking fees - but could pay her hotel room/expenses etc if she can stay in the area for a couple days to be able to participate in the meeting.

Do you think she would be interested/able to attend the meeting? And if so, how should I proceed from here?

I am attaching a list of the Business Council member for you here..

Many thanks and I look forward to getting your feedback, best, Melissa

At john's suggestion, we would like to get together for half an hour or so before the 9:30 to nail down the final details as we launch the deep dive. We still have a few details outstanding before we go. As I have said to each of you we need to tell the subject exactly what will happen to the information and who it will be shared with. We need to go over this one more time and be in agreement before I start taking the subjects through the process. If it is convenient we can meet at my office, or where ever you like. Let me know if 8:30 or so works for all of you and if you would like to do it at my office. thanks C

Pope Francis "The poor and the earth are crying out." Who are the poor in the US and CA?

Pope Francis calls for action to care about climate, care about creation, and care about the poor in his encyclical on caring for our common home. Climate change and environmental degradation disproportionately impact the poor and disadvantaged, and cannot be solved without addressing poverty and inequality. The Pope intricately weaves moral and spiritual teachings with science, economics, and politics, addressing environmental values as well as human dignity and human rights.

"A true ecological approach," writes the Pope, "always becomes a social approach; it must integrate questions of justice in debates on the environment, so as to hear both the cry of the earth and the cry of the poor." ¶ 49 (original emphasis).

Who are the poor and disadvantaged in the U.S. and in California?

Poverty, Race, and Ethnicity

People of color disproportionately suffer from poverty and income inequality. The official poverty level in the US from 2007 to 2011 is about 25% for African Americans, 26% for Native Americans, and 22% for Hispanics, compared to 11% for non-Hispanic whites, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

Figure 1.
U.S. Poverty Rates by Race and Hispanic or Latino Origin: 2007-2011
(For information on confidentiality protection, sampling error, nonsampling error, and definitions, see www.census.gov/acs/www/)

| Race or Hispanic origin                          | Percent below poverty |
|--------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| White alone                                      | 11                    |
| Black or African American alone                  | 25                    |
| American Indian and Alaska Native alone          | 26                    |
| Asian alone                                      | 11                    |
| Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islander alone | 18                    |
| Two or More Races                                | 19                    |
| Hispanic or Latino                               | 22                    |

Note: Persons who report only one race among the six defined categories are referred to as the race-alone population, while persons who report more than one race category are referred to as the Two or More Races population. This figure shows data using the race-alone approach. Use of the single-race population does not imply that it is the preferred method of presenting or analyzing data. The Census Bureau uses a variety of approaches. Because Hispanics may be of any race, data in this figure for Hispanics overlap with data for race groups.

According to the Stanford Center on Poverty and Inequality, 22.0% of Californians lived in poverty in 2011, using the California Poverty Measure. There is wide variation in poverty rates across California, with especially high rates in counties with high housing costs, such as Los Angeles County (26.9%).

Wealth Inequality, Race, and Ethnicity

Pope Francis writes about economic inequality:

[W]e should be particularly indignant at the enormous inequalities in our midst, whereby we continue to tolerate some considering themselves more worthy than others. We fail to see that some are mired in desperate and degrading poverty, with no way out, while others have not the faintest idea of what to do with their possessions, vainly showing off their supposed superiority and leaving behind them so much waste which, if it were the case everywhere, would destroy the planet. In practice, we continue to tolerate that some consider themselves more human than others, as if they had been born with greater rights. ¶ 90.

There are wealth inequalities based on race, color, and national origin. According to Prof. Thomas Piketty, “The United States to this day is a country of extremely brutal inequality, especially in relation to race, whose effects are still quite visible. [B]lack people were deprived of civil rights until the 1960s and subjected to a regime of legal segregation . . . . This no doubt accounts for many aspects of the development – or rather nondevelopment – of the U.S. welfare state.”

Wealth by Race and Ethnicity, 2007-13

PEW RESEARCH CENTER

The wealth of non-Hispanic white households was 13 times the median wealth of black households in 2013, compared with eight times the wealth in 2010, according to the Pew Research Center. The wealth of non-Hispanic white households is now more than 10 times the wealth of Hispanic households, compared with nine times the wealth in 2010. The Great Recession, fueled by the crises in the housing and financial markets, was universally hard on the net worth of families in the U.S. Although asset prices have started to recover, not all households have benefited alike, and wealth inequality has widened along racial and ethnic lines.

Income Inequality

Income inequality has exploded in the U.S. and in California since 1980. There are extreme income inequalities for the top 1% and the 10% in the U.S. Income inequality is even worse in California, as shown in the following chart. A large portion of this increase in inequality is due to an upsurge in the labor incomes earned by senior company executives and successful entrepreneurs.

The share of the top 1% in the U.S. national income rose dramatically from less than 10% in the 1970s to about 17-23% in the 2000s-2010s. The pattern of inequality is generally similar in California, with the top 1% receiving over 25% of the income in 2012. The top percentile included families with income above $394,000 in 2012. The bottom half includes families whose income falls below about $50,000. Blacks and Latinos are disproportionately excluded from the top incomes.

Pope Francis writes: "Hence every ecological approach needs to incorporate a social perspective which takes into account the fundamental rights of the poor and the underprivileged." ¶ 93. We agree.

ABC: Jeb Bush is clarifying his answer as to whether or not he would have done the same thing as his brother in Iraq. Bush said he misrepresented the original question; this is the fifth time in one week he has clarified his position.

NBC: Jeb Bush attempted to answer a question about whether he would authorize the Iraq War again today; reporters noted this was different than what he said Monday and Tuesday; showed clips of Cruz and Christie criticizing Bush's answer; used footage of the college student telling Bush that George W. Bush created ISIS; used footage of Bush's slip of the tongue that he may run for President, yesterday, and footage from today of Bush demurring when he was asked if he would run.

CBS: Jeb Bush adjusted his answer to the predictable question about whether he would have invaded Iraq knowing what we know now; mentioned Bush changing his answer throughout the week; interview with CBS News Political Director John Dickerson; Dickerson said that the GOP candidate would face the likely nominee HRC who voted to authorize the Iraq War.

Hey:

I am working through line edits on the poll, but the first draft ignores some of what I think are the most devastating hits on the GOP candidates (eg: Mitt laid off hundreds of workers, invested in firms that do business in Iran; Rudy protected a child molesting priest, his kids won't speak to him because he divorced their mom on TV, etc.) This is, of course, not the fault of GQR, rather, we presented them with very limited research.

Attached are potential negative narratives on Rudy and Romney (I'll get to Huckabee on the long flight to San Francisco tomorrow). My belief is that this poll should tell us how to define the opponent; what the frame through which we attack him should be -- not merely which specific charges hurt the most. To that end, I thought it would be useful to collect up a lot of the discrete, scattershot charges and try to put them into a narrative, then test the different narratives, and run against the guy who polls the worst. Maybe the best way to go after Mitt is as a phony. But maybe it's as a multimillionaire who screwed the middle class. I don't know. But that's what I hope to learn from the poll.

Will send line edits on the poll tomorrow, as well as my best efforts at Huckabee narratives.

All best,

Paul

Congressional Investigations
Spring 2015

Topic Selection and Description

In July 1861, the U.S. House of Representatives created the Select Committee on Government Contracts.<sup>[1]</sup> The Committee arose out of allegations that numerous government contracts granted in connection with the Union Army during the Civil War were entered into fraudulently.<sup>[2]</sup> During the Committee's tenure, its work was the subject of media and political interest.<sup>[3]</sup> The Committee issued three reports after numerous hearings that demonstrated the truthfulness of the allegations.<sup>[4]</sup> As a result of this Committee's work, the House passed the False Claims Act in 1863.<sup>[5]</sup>

The False Claims Act remains an important tool in the government's toolbox to investigate and deter fraudulent government contracting. Therefore, the work the Select Committee on Government Contracts did, in light of media attention and political rivalries, can provide a benchmark for other Select Committees today, such as the recent Select Committee on Benghazi. For my paper topic, I would like to evaluate the Select Committee on Government Contracts, comparing and contrasting where possible with recent Select Committees, in order to see what lessons can be learned for future committees that wish to make a lasting impact in the area they investigate.

John --

Since the Supreme Court's Citizens United decision, there has been a flood of money from corporations and the wealthy into our elections.

The New York Times found that just 158 wealthy American families are responsible for around 5 out of every 10 dollars donated to a political campaign this cycle.

Citizens United gives a few Americans outsized influence on our elections and allows these very wealthy people to "buy" elections. In response, many are seeking a Constitutional Amendment that would undo Citizens United.

The most likely paths for changing the Constitution to overturn Citizens United require either passage by two-thirds of both the House and Senate or a progressive majority on the Supreme Court to overturn the Citizens United ruling itself.

So, no matter what, Democrats need to be elected in strong numbers for Citizens United to be overturned.

We want to know what you think, John. Do you support a Constitutional Amendment to undo Citizens United?

Dear Colleagues,

This week, the Law Center will host the Board of Directors during its Winter meeting. The meeting will take place Wednesday and Thursday, February 10th and 11th, and the Board will be utilizing various spaces on campus, throughout their two day meeting. To accommodate their space needs, we are rescheduling the Faculty Lunch in the Faculty Lounge. It will take place from 11:30 am to 1:00 pm (rather than from noon to 2 pm) to assist facilities in setting up the lounge for a meeting scheduled at 3:00 pm.

Thank you for your consideration.

Best,

Bill

Hello John,

Great! We requested three meetings:

(1) ZHANG Gaoli, Executive Vice Premier

(2) LIU He, co-head of the Specialized Group for Economic System and Ecological Civilization System Reform and Minister-Level Vice-Chairman at the National Development and Reform Commission

(3) ZHANG Yong, Vice Chairman, National Development and Reform Commission

CPIFA is handling those requests via official diplomatic channels as per usual. So far, CPIFA heard back from ZHANG Gaoli's office that he will not be available due to travel. We have not yet heard back from LIU He or ZHANG Yong. I can send Lawson at CPIFA a text message to see if there are new updates they haven't shared yet. If anything comes back I'll forward immediately.

I shared the three names above with CH team so they are in the loop. We are also working to confirm a good slot for a breakfast or lunch meeting with you and CH. Details still TBD but that meeting will certainly happen at some point while you are in Beijing.

Three people died in illegal human experiments carried out by John Podesta backer's firm

BY RICHARD POLLOCK | JULY 23, 2014 | 5:00 AM

TOPICS: WATCHDOG BARACK OBAMA CENTER FOR AMERICAN PROGRESS FDA ACCOUNTABILITY JOHN PODESTA

John Podesta, one of President Obama's closest White House advisers, counts among his key financial supporters Hansjorg Wyss, a reclusive Swiss billionaire whose company conducted illegal human experiments that resulted in the deaths of three elderly patients.

Justice Department attorneys negotiated a $23.8 million plea deal in 2011 with Synthes Inc., and Norian Corporation, its wholly owned subsidiary, and sent four of its U.S. executives to prison. The money was paid to the federal government.

Two of the victims died in a California hospital and the third perished in a Texas medical facility. One of the California victims was Ryoichi Kikuchi, 83, who died on the operating table at John Muir Hospital in Walnut Creek on Sept. 19, 2009.

He was a prize-winning physicist who analyzed the thermodynamic behavior of liquids and gases and worked at scientific centers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of California at Berkeley, the Max Planck Institute in Germany and the National Bureau of Standards.

The federal judge who heard the case said the company's "pattern of deception is unparalleled."

Synthes was a Swiss medical device firm with U.S. corporate offices in West Chester, Pa. Wyss opened the U.S. office in 1974 and was CEO until the company was bought by Johnson & Johnson in 2012 for $21.3 billion.

The Washington Examiner asked a White House spokesman whether the president was aware of Podesta's relationship with Wyss or of the three deaths when Podesta was invited to join the chief executive's inner circle. The spokesman declined to respond.

Podesta, who was White House chief of staff under President Bill Clinton, and Wyss have been financially linked for years. Among the Swiss billionaire's largest gifts in recent years have been those made to the Center for American Progress.

CAP received $4.1 million from Wyss during Podesta's tenure as the liberal nonprofit's founding president and chief executive officer. A CAP spokesman declined to respond to the Examiner's request for information about the Podesta-Wyss relationship.

The HJW Foundation, which is Wyss's private foundation, hired Podesta in 2013 as a paid consultant, for which he was paid $87,000 that year, according to the presidential counselor's financial disclosure statement.

A HJW spokesman declined to respond to the Examiner's questions about the kind of work Podesta performed for the fee.

Wyss has a seat on CAP's 10-member board of directors, which also includes former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright; former Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.; and Carol Browner, Obama's first energy czar and administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency under Clinton.

Podesta's think tank is the fourth-largest recipient of Wyss money among 27 liberal nonprofit activist groups the Swiss billionaire has supported since 2008, according to the HJW Foundation's Internal Revenue Service tax returns.

The IRS 990 tax returns for all of the groups can be reviewed via the Examiner's Citizen Audit database.

CAP itself was the largest single recipient of HJW contributions in 2011 and 2012, according to the foundation's IRS filing.

Wyss and other Synthes executives decided to enter the highly profitable field of spinal surgery in 2000 with Norian XR, a cement-like mixture of calcium phosphate with barium sulfate.

Company managers claimed the compound could act like bone when injected in the spine in a procedure called "vertebroplasty."

Federal prosecutors noted that at the time there was "excitement about using Norian for vertebroplasties" at Synthes, even though the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had not approved its use on the spine. FDA approval could take at least three years.

Company managers, however, decided not to seek FDA approval for Norian XR on the spine. Instead, they conducted unauthorized human experiments over a four-year period that included the three deaths.

FDA officials got wind of the deadly experiments and dispatched Capt. Joseph Despina in May 2004 to conduct an unannounced inspection, which kept him at the company until June 18.

Despina's findings subsequently became the basis for a federal indictment of the company, its subsidiary and four of its officers, which was filed June 16, 2009.

U.S. District Judge Legrome D. Davis said during a 2011 sentencing hearing following the plea agreement that the two firms ran "rogue clinical trials," conducted "illegal training of spine surgeons" and "in search of profits, chose not to tell the FDA the truth."

He also said they "did not stop the testing until three elderly patients had died on the operating table over the period of a year. ... This pattern of deception is unparalleled."

Four Synthes executives went to jail, each for varying terms of less than one year, in the plea agreement. They admitted their company had feloniously conspired "to defraud the United States" in an effort "to impair and impede the lawful functions of the Food and Drug Administration."

Wyss was not named in the indictment but was referred to as "Person No. 7" and the "CEO and a major stockholder of Synthes." Wyss was CEO and major stockholder at the time of the indictment and the experiments.

Wyss, who now lives in Wyoming, is a major donor to scores of liberal groups in this country, with his contributions estimated to total more than $110 million, according to the HJW Foundation's tax filings with the IRS since 2008.

The Swiss Broadcasting Corp. reported last year that Wyss was the second-richest person in Switzerland. He is the 112th wealthiest man in the world, with a net worth estimated at $11.2 billion by Forbes magazine.

Despite his relationship with Podesta and active role in funding liberal political activism, Wyss is not well known to the American public.

In fact, George Soros, the high-profile financial supporter of many liberal groups, has given less to CAP than Wyss.

Wyss told a Swiss newspaper in a rare interview in 2011 that "nobody knows me, and I hope that it stays like this," according to Fortune.

But federal court documents paint a graphic description of his firm's brazen decision to ignore the FDA's drug approval procedures, which are intended to assure patient safety.

The FDA had previously approved another Synthes-produced substance for use in treating injured bones in the arm.

But in order for XR to be used in spinal cases, the company had to complete the government's Investigational Device Exemption process.

Regardless of whether the company pursued the IDE process, however, the FDA required Synthes to include a warning label on the XR compound's container stating it was "not intended for the treatment of vertebral compression fractures."

Wyss and his subordinates decided during a Nov. 15, 2001, meeting to forgo the IDE process and to proceed with the unauthorized human experiments, according to the indictment.

"Person No. 7 decided that Synthes would not pursue an IDE study," the indictment said, referring directly to Wyss. The meeting minutes noted the CEO and his subordinates ordered 60-80 test procedures without FDA approval.

In a pre-sentencing report, Assistant U.S. Attorney Mary Crawley described Wyss's role: "After this [November] meeting Wyss, the CEO and major shareholder of Synthes, directed that Synthes would not pursue FDA approval of Norian XR via an IDE," but "would press on with a 'test market'" with surgeons.

Crawley also said the Synthes test market programs "were not slow or cautious, or careful, or motivated by patient safety."

Davis said at a Dec. 13, 2011, sentencing hearing for Michael D. Huggins, one of the convicted Synthes executives, that "the safer and lawful approval route was expressly rejected."

"One of the most offensive things was the little piddly sentence they got for this," complained Eva Sloan, whose elderly mother, Lois Eskind, died during an XR experiment, according to Fortune.

Sloan filed a separate wrongful death lawsuit against the company in 2012 that charged "willful, wanton, malicious and reckless misconduct."

The four executives "could have gone to 7-Eleven and stolen a six-pack of beer and got more time," she said.

Sloan's lawsuit was settled out of court. Laura Feld, Sloan's attorney, said she could not comment because the settlement included a confidentiality agreement.

Defense attorney Brent J. Gurney told Davis at a sentencing hearing he thought Wyss was the missing person at the table.

"There is another person who is not present in this process," he said while representing former Synthes executive Richard E. Bohner, "and that is the former chairman, CEO, controlling shareholder of the company, Mr. Wyss."

Gurney, a former U.S. attorney, said, "Mr. Wyss was a highly involved owner of Synthes. The record shows that at the very beginning, it was he who made some of the very critical decisions that put the company on its ultimate pathway."

* House To Vote On "Secret Science" Bills This Month***

The House will vote later this month on a pair of bills aimed at increasing transparency in the scientific process behind President Obama's environmental rules. One bill would prohibit the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) from issuing any regulations whose scientific backing is not publicly available. The other would reform the EPA's Scientific Advisory Board to allow public participation in their proceedings and introduce additional peer review. Republicans have long said that the EPA relies on "secret science" to justify its regulations and the agency does not allow public scrutiny of its research. EPA chief Gina McCarthy started to fight back against the allegations this year, saying in a speech that her agency relies "on real scientists to conduct research, and independent scientists to peer review it, and scientists who've spent a lifetime studying the science to reproduce it." [The Hill]

Subject: DEADLOCKED

We just don't know what else to do:

- The latest polls show we're DEADLOCKED against Barbara Comstock.
- Boehner's spent $1 MILLION to eviscerate John on Northern Virginia T.V.
- and now, we're dangerously behind on our fundraising goal.

This is as bad as it gets: if we don't have the resources to fight back, our chances of winning will drop to ZERO. That might sound grim, but it's the truth.

Tomorrow night marks a critical ad buy deadline for us -- exactly 11 days to go. It's our last chance to turn things around.

John, we're urging you -- please don't wait until tomorrow. We need you to chip in today.

Hey Jerry,

I'm the Chief Analytics Officer for Hillary's campaign. John Podesta suggested I reach out regarding Nevada data you might be able to help with.

I know tomorrow is a holiday, but is anyone on your team available to speak with me or my colleague Simon (cc'd) tomorrow. Otherwise, maybe Tuesday?

Thanks!

Subject: 130 million tons of toxic coal ash

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

The League of Conservation Voters and CREDO Action are teaming up to help protect our planet from dangerous coal ash.

Coal-fired power plants are producing more than 130 million tons of coal ash every year. That's enough waste annually to fill train cars from the North Pole to the South Pole!

And you know what is even more alarming? Coal ash contains toxins like arsenic, chromium, lead and mercury. And there are next to no federal regulations on it.

Right now, the EPA is considering options that could either reel in Dirty Coal's assault on the environment or maintain the status quo. Will you let them know which option you support?

Click here and tell the EPA: No to the status quo! Set protective and federally enforceable regulations for toxic coal ash disposal NOW!

Coal ash is loosely regulated on a state-by-state basis. In some states, it's less regulated than household waste. All too often, coal ash gets dumped into waste ponds and even our landfills— and from there it leaks into our drinking water and fragile ecosystems. The EPA is currently reviewing two options for the regulation of coal ash:

- Option One: Set federally enforceable standards for coal ash disposal. The EPA would set storage and handling safeguards and strict pollution prevention and monitoring requirements for coal ash disposal sites. And companies wouldn't be allowed to operate a plant if they couldn't prove they could pay for the consequences of a disaster.
- Option Two: No federal enforcement. The EPA would give non-binding "suggestions" instead of enforceable standards - and would maintain today's unsustainable status quo where the states with the greatest amount of coal ash have the weakest regulations. Unsurprisingly, Dirty Coal and the powerful energy lobby are giving their full-throated support to this weaker option.

Tell the Environmental Protection Agency: Protect the environment, not Dirty Coal profits >>

With your help, we can ensure that the EPA strengthens coal ash regulations and protects the environment from the perils of failed coal ash handling.

Thank you for all that you do for the environment.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski
President
League of Conservation Voters

action

Option 1: Federal regulations for toxic coal ash disposal.

Option 2: Non-binding "suggestions" that Dirty Coal clean up its act.

Subject: My story

John,

My name is Kashif Firozvi, and I am a doctor in Maryland. I had the pleasure to get to know Governor O'Malley this year. In the recent New Hampshire debate, he told my family's story. You can watch it online here -- my family is referenced at the 45 second mark.

Governor O'Malley gets it. In this age of Donald Trump fear-mongering, it is important that we have somebody like Governor O'Malley fighting for us.

Please join me in supporting Governor O'Malley at my home in Potomac on January 13th as we build a more inclusive country together.

Click here for details.

Today, we have a choice. We can either sit on the sidelines and complain about the absurdity of the Republican Party's immigration proposals, or we can stand beside a candidate who has the courage to stand up to Donald Trump and his party's bigotry. I have made my choice, and I hope that you will do the same and consider a contribution to this campaign.

Please RSVP here , or you can contact Annie with the campaign at aosborne@martinomalley.com or 978-771-1510.

I look forward to welcoming Governor O'Malley and you into my home on January 13th. Thank you.

Kashif Firozvi

Attachments: 6.15.15.docx

Document attached, 2016 highlights below:

ABC: Two-minute report that Jeb Bush planned to enter the 2016 race today; noted HRC had a kickoff rally on Saturday with WJC looking on; interviewed Matthew Dowd; Dowd said Bush tried to raise money instead of momentum which was a problem for him; discussed an ABC News/ WaPo poll that showed HRC beating Bush by only three points; Stephanopoulos noted that was a big drop for HRC from the Spring; Dowd said that's why so many Republicans were running; Dowd said it was an open race; Dowd said Bush and HRC have to figure out how to separate themselves from their presidential families that represent the past.

CBS: Jeb Bush is expected to announce his presidential campaign. Bush has stated that he is not trying to distance himself from his family. The report covered his struggle to answer a question about the Iraq War. HRC's first campaign rally. Played a clip of HRC saying that no one has ever called her a quitter.

NBC: Jeb Bush spent yesterday relaxing with his family. Today he will give a speech that will announce his bid to the presidency. The introductory videos are rolling, reporters say. After six months of planning, Jeb Bush wants to continue the Bush legacy. There has been a staff shakeup and policy concerns that make his staff nervous. Other politicians claim that his campaign could be impressive. Jeb Bush's logo does not show his family name. He will be talking about his role as governor and the dysfunction in D.C.

Subject: Crossroads GPS radio in New Hampshire

We've started seeing Crossroads GPS place some radio in New Hampshire to run 2/26-3/7. We're trying to get our hands on content – not sure if it mentions HRC or if it's unrelated – but wanted to send around the details of the buy tonight. As soon as we get the content, we will send it back around to this group.

Total is $73,350. Around 100 GRPs in each market over the 10 days, Boston is running just a handful of GRPs. Let us know if you have any questions. Thank you.

Subject: Don Siegelman case

John-

This is Jack Brown Knox 68. We met this AM while you were running the promenade along the East River. I thank you for your offer to contact the White House Counsel to see where clemency for former Governor Siegelman stands. He is currently incarcerated in Oakdale Correction Facility in Louisiana.

It would be timely to issue a pardon before the accumulation of evidence of prosecutorial and judicial misconduct explodes under the Obama administration. The grotesque railroading of a Progressive and good man who Rove could not legitimately defeat at the polls is clearly a scandalous black mark in the history of American justice. Better to rectify it before it's too late.

On another note-you may be interested in a book by David Wilcock called "The Source Field Investigations". Nominally about the 2012 phrophecies-it incorporate possible explanations for UFO experiences.

Hope it was a good run.

Regards,

Jack Brown

Subject: For the first time ever...

Dear John,

Right now leaders from all across the world are convening in Paris for what many believe to be the most important climate change negotiations the world will see. For the first time ever, organizers for the United Nations are seeking a binding, universal agreement to keep global temperature rise less than 2 degrees Celsius—the tipping point at which further increases will have devastating consequences for our planet and humanity.

On this national day of giving—Giving Tuesday—we're excited that the BlueGreen Alliance Foundation will be attending the Paris Climate Talks fighting for climate action that protects both the environment and our workers.

Join our chorus of voices this Giving Tuesday, and in honor of the Paris Talks, by making a contribution of \$25, \$50, \$100 or more to the BlueGreen Alliance Foundation.

In an era of increasing climate disruption and monumental partisan divides, blue-green collaboration is needed now more than ever. Support the BlueGreen Alliance Foundation and we promise to:

- Support worldwide measures to cut carbon pollution and accelerate the transition to a clean energy economy;
- Initiate, defend, and promote national and state clean energy policies, such as the new U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) rule establishing methane standards for the energy industry that will reduce pollution, protect workers and communities, and put people to work;
- Help states plan common-ground strategies to implement the EPA's Clean Power Plan (the first-ever carbon pollution standards for existing power plants). That means bringing together labor unions, environmental groups, government agencies, community organizations, and more to craft State Implementation Plans that achieve carbon reduction goals, create quality jobs, and generate investment in new, cleaner technologies; and
- Support workers and communities affected by our country's transition to a clean energy economy. The BlueGreen Alliance Foundation has been forging common ground to find solutions that will protect workers and their communities, such as in Southwest Pennsylvania. We are on the ground working with unions, environmentalists, community organizations and elected officials to make the transition to the clean economy fair and just.

The BlueGreen Alliance Foundation is making tremendous progress and your support is critical to our momentum.

Please support the BlueGreen Alliance Foundation today and let's

I hope most of you had an opportunity to watch Secretary Clinton's speech at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City this morning, where she laid out her vision for combatting terrorism and taking down ISIS.

Attached are talking points that we hope you will find helpful. You can also read more about her speech on The Briefing by clicking here.

Guys, my thoughts on yesterday's briefing

If the AfAm vote is Hillary's firewall, we need to do more to ensure it stays that way.

Notwithstanding the political schedule, the Secretary should have been there. This was the first real attempt to touch AfAm bundling elites. A lot of them didn't show because she wasn't coming. Result is that donors don't feel like the campaign thinks they're important. This spreads. Squashes enthusiasm. We need more people singing her praises. Elite donors are the ambassadors of the campaign. People are taking their cue from them. Right now, a lot of the donors we need are not engaged. We should plan a couple of follow up mtgs where the Secretary can briefly stop in and say hello. This can probably be in DC or NY.

Hope you are doing well, and enjoying the growing family a bit more over the Summer than you normally get the opportunity to do so ..... :)

As you know President Clinton called me last week to recognize the Carbon War Room for our work on Island Nations, specifically with Aruba. It was indeed very kind of him. We would like to follow up on his call by getting together with the persons at the Foundation who are working on islands, as it would seem there must be areas in which we can collaborate and work together. Previously, Peter Boyd our COO and myself had met with Ed and his team over at CGI, with some of your team on the phone. I had also contacted Ira via e-mail.

I will be in NY next Wednesday afternoon and available to meet as of 16:30, or available again on Thursday as of 14:00. Please let me know what would work.

We have no greater resource and legacy to leave our children than these special, fragile and very important places. I truly appreciate all the work you have done at the WH with climate change and so many other things. You have really helped move the needle on so many issues of importance to me, and to all of us.

I know you will be busy with your new job but just in case you have a free moment, I wanted to invite you and your wife to Palmyra Atoll, part of the PRIMNM, about 500 miles south of the Big Island. Nature Conservancy manages a research station out there for most of the year, but in the fall there are a few groups that visit there. I have been four times now and can't tell you what an amazing "life soup" it is out there and I would hope that you and your wife could come visit it yourselves to see. The birds, the fish, sharks and mantas are really spectacular in their abundance. And I am not sure if you are a fisherman but the bone fishing is fantastic too. We would love to have you visit this special place that you have helped protect. The trip dates would be Oct 22-27, leaving out of Honolulu. I know this is a long shot, but when I saw your tweet, I thought I really must at least reach out to you and extend an invitation. Given the nature of your new job, a few days off the grid might be just what you need before the run up to the election.

All my very best to you. Please let me know if it is possible and we will make it happen. Or perhaps after the election?

[Subtitle:] 1,000-Plus Evening Benghazi Segments From Fox

On September 6, Republican Congressman Lynn Westmoreland spoke at a Cobb County Republican breakfast in Georgia to an audience of 75 people, who each paid $10 to attend his "update on the Benghazi investigation."

Westmoreland is one of seven Republican members picked to serve on the House select committee, which holds its first public hearing tomorrow and could stretch its inquiries into the 2016 election year. The latest Republican-run body follows what has been a parade of costly and repetitive investigations into the Benghazi terror attack that killed four Americans.

Despite a laundry list of nearly identical conclusions about the events, and the complete absence of a White House cover-up or wrongdoing, Republicans, spurred on by Fox News, press ahead in search of "answers" to supposedly elusive questions.

But in Cobb County that Saturday morning, Westmoreland insisted the committee's not "a partisan witch hunt." He stressed another point, according to a report in the Marietta Daily Journal [emphasis added]:

"I think our enemy stands on 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.," Westmoreland said to loud applause."

And so it goes.

Last week, as Fox's Benghazi cover-up conspiracy sputtered across the two-year anniversary line, Roger Ailes' team was furiously promoting not one but two new books, claiming both tomes boasted revelations that deepened the alleged controversy. (They do not.)

Benghazi, of course, has been politicized in the most disturbing way possible, to the point where Fox News and conservatives have turned an American tragedy into something of a macabre Twitter punchline. It's become sort of a Groundhog Day of exploitation and fakery with more than one thousand on-air Fox segments -- during evening coverage alone -- devoted to the endless pursuit. And now the Republicans' select committee, virtually sponsored by Fox News, is set to add more chapters to the sprawling production, which conveniently doubles as a GOP fundraising tool.

According to press reports, the committee's first hearing will focus on the State Department's Accountability Review Board, which looked into the details surrounding the Benghazi attacks. In other words, Republican investigators have decided to investigate the Benghazi investigators. Again.

And at this point, does anyone even remember in 2012 when the family of slain U.S. Ambassador Chris Stevens beseeched opportunists not to politicize his death? ("It would really be abhorrent to make this into a campaign issue.") Or when the mother of one of the other murdered Americans in Benghazi scolded Mitt Romney when he kept referencing her son on the presidential campaign trail? ("It's wrong to use these brave young men, who wanted freedom for all, to degrade Obama.")

Those wishes were almost instantly trampled and are now long forgotten by most; distant echoes drowned out by the churning gears of phony outrage.

The professionally sustained hysteria over the minutia of Benghazi --the YouTube video, Susan Rice's talking points, the allegedly nefarious White House emails, and the imaginary stand-down order -- they were all constructed for partisan purposes and none of them were based on fact or common sense.

Increasingly, and somewhat belatedly, some mainstream press players have figured this out. Many reporters and pundits who were open and eager to follow every conceivable right-wing allegation about Benghazi (while playing down good news for the White House) have cooled to the chase in recent months and coverage has been slim. There's also been surprisingly little chatter in anticipation of the select committee's proceedings. After two years of dry holes, it's difficult to feign interest any more. And poor CBS. It took a newsroom scandal of historic proportions to drive home the painful lesson of chasing bogus, partisan Benghazi allegations.

But at Fox News, the ratings-grabbing obsession remains strong. And now, thanks to Media Matters' meticulous research, we know just how far and how all-consuming that obsession has stretched. It's hard to even wrap your heads around some of these numbers from Fox's coverage in the 20 months following the attack:

-1,098 total Fox News evening segments that included significant discussion of Benghazi -- an average of about 13 segments per week.

-144 interviews with GOP members of Congress versus only five interviews with Democratic members of Congress and Obama administration officials.

Note the relentless and out of control focus showered on the story by Special Report, which Fox executives often point to as its premiere and serious news program, not just a partisan talk show. Serious news program? It aired nearly 400 Benghazi reports in less than two years.

Please also pay attention to the fact that despite its flood-the-zone coverage, Fox has been unable to move the Benghazi cover-up story one foot in two years. Almost nothing Fox has reported over the last 24 months has added in any significant way to the understanding of what happened in Benghazi the night of the attack. And considering Fox has set aside more than one thousand segments to the topic, that fact simply confirms the team's collective impotence.

A Benghazi "stand down order" coming from Obama or Hillary Clinton? A cold, calculated move to leave wounded and dying Americans behind? Give me a break.

From the Associated Press, July 10:

"The testimony of nine military officers undermines contentions by Republican lawmakers that a "stand-down order" held back military assets that could have saved the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans killed at a diplomatic outpost and CIA annex in Benghazi, Libya."

If, when Fox first made the fantastical claim of a White House-given "stand down" order the centerpiece of the channel's cover-up production, someone then had told you that nine U.S. military officers would eventually debunk and deny that claim under oath, you'd assume the issue would be dropped, right? (And if the accusers were admirable people they'd apologize, too.)

Still, Fox's breathless "stand down" segments live on, in perpetuity.

The truth is, in the absences of any evidence supporting an alleged cover-up, Benghazi as a partisan pursuit has failed, propagated by the thousand-plus Fox News reports and endless Congressional investigations. Now it's time for the sponsors to admit defeat and go home so that an American tragedy can be remembered with the dignity it deserves. Not as a tarnished, political sideshow.

By Elias Isquith

September 16, 2014, 10:42 a.m. EDT

[Subtitle:] Media Matters claims the right-wing news channel spent "about 13 segments per week" talking about the 2012 attack

Having presumably decided not much else was happening in the news during the 20-month period between the 2012 attacks on the U.S. mission in Benghazi and May 2 of this year, Fox News aired no less than 1,098 primetime segments devoted to the #Benghazi pseudo-controversy, liberal media watchdog Media Matters claims in a new report.

According to Media Matters, Fox News' decision to air that many Benghazi segments during such a short and constrained period of time meant that the network was churning out an average of 13 Benghazi bites per week. In 18 of the 20 months Media Matters took a look at, the report claims, there were at least 20 Benghazi segments per month. (As you'd expect, October 2012 was the highest with 174.) Perhaps most tellingly, Media Matters also found Fox had tied Benghazi to Hillary Clinton, who was secretary of state at the time of the attack and is widely expected to run for president in 2016.

One piece of particular interest in Media Matters' report is the breakdown of how often each member of Fox News's primetime lineup had a segment about Benghazi. Close observers of Fox News and connoisseurs of the many talking points and excuses of its master, Roger Ailes, will notice that "Special Report with Bret Baier" host Bret Baier is leading the pack. Here's a graphic, via Media Matters:

[GRAPH]

Here's why this is notable. Baier is supposed to be one of Fox News's "voice of God," Walter Cronkite-esque old fashioned news men. He may have opinions, the theory goes, but he keeps them to himself and simply delivers the straight news. Granted, Baier no doubt did many segments about Benghazi during October and November and December of 2012 that one could legitimately classify as news. But to be outpacing O'Reilly by more than 200? Sometimes it feels like Ailes and Rupert Murdoch are no longer even trying.

You can read the whole Media Matters report here. The main takeaway is — yep, you guessed it: #Benghazi.

Washington Post blog: Post Politics: "In a preemptive push, House Democrats unveil new Benghazi site"

By Wesley Lowery

September 16, 2014, 12:01 a.m. EDT

House Democrats on the Benghazi Select Committee plan to address lingering public questions surrounding that attack -- and drown out any potential leaks with a flood of information -- with a new Web site Tuesday, as that panel prepares to meet publicly for the first time.

Democrats are looking to influence the direction and tone of the committee, which will focus its first open hearing Wednesday on a review board the State Department created after the attack to examine the government's security systems abroad.

"It is critical that the Select Committee make full use of the extensive investigations that have already been completed—which are compiled here—to define its scope, avoid duplication, and conserve taxpayer dollars to help improve the security of U.S. facilities and personnel around the world," House Democrats on the committee wrote in an executive summary of the compendium they are releasing in conjunction with the site.

The Select Committee, chaired by Rep. Trey Gowdy (R-S.C.), has a $3.3 million budget for 2014, and its activities are expected to stretch into 2015.

The Obama administration's handling of the Benghazi attack, which left four Americans dead in September of 2012, has been a major rallying point for Republicans in the years since. The incident, the administration's response to it and the political aftermath have all already been the focus of several congressional and external investigations, culminating in the creation of the Select Committee this year.

Previous panels were plagued by selective leaks and the release of limited information that Democrats say distorted events. Now they're flooding the zone with a site that collects and curates the results of those investigations. It allows a user to search for what statements or questions are still being asked about the attacks, shows which members of Congress have been asking them, and provides a swarm of documents and evidence in response to some of the public's most-asked questions about the Benghazi attack.

Staffers for committee members on both sides of the aisle have expressed guarded optimism that despite the political firestorm that ultimately resulted in the panel's creation, members may be successful at analyzing whether or not the recommendations of previous congressional investigations into the attacks -- specifically, recommendations about how the State Department can improve security measures at diplomatic outposts -- have been adequately implemented.

Breitbart: "Rep. Cummings Says Maxwell Never Mentioned Document Sifting by State Department"

By John Sexton

September 16, 2014, 9:42 a.m. PDT

Ray Maxwell reportedly told Congress about the State Department's sifting of Benghazi documents a year ago. However, ranking member Elijah Cummings tells Dave Weigel he never heard about it. Something doesn't quite add up.

Yesterday Sharyl Attkisson published a genuine blockbuster story related to Benghazi. One of the four employees who was disciplined by the State Department revealed he had witnesses individuals with close connection to Hillary Clinton sifting out damaging documents, apparently before turning them over to the Accountability Review Board. If accurate, this would obviously be a major blow to the credibility of the ARB and to Hillary Clinton.

After the story broke, Dave Weigel wrote a piece relating the basic claims in Attkisson's report but also expressing a bit of incredulity that Maxwell sat on the story for so long.

"That's what makes the new story so baffling. If it's true, Maxwell has been sitting for at least 18 months on a story that puts Hillary Clinton's political advisers at the center of a conspiracy to conceal documents that could be damaging to the 2016 presidential frontrunner."

It's perhaps worth noting that all four of the disciplined employees were eventually called back to work in August 2013. Perhaps Maxwell was waiting to see how things worked out before going public with his most explosive claim. But rather than return, Maxwell chose to resign.

10/18/2016

In any case, Attkisson noticed Weigel's take on the story and praised it on Twitter. But she also added a bit of information that hadn't been clear before.

Sharyl Attkisson @SharylAttkisson: Nice article @daveweigel (PS Maxwell told members of Congress a year ago.) 9/15/14, [10:38 p.m. EDT ]

After Weigel responded, Attkisson expanded on this in a 2nd tweet:

Slate's David Weigel @daveweigel: @SharylAttkisson It's amazing. He held onto it that long, as did they? Talk about a long game. 9/15/14, [10:45 p.m. EDT ]

Sharyl Attkisson @SharylAttkisson: @daveweigel Yes..I think he didn't think Cong. would hang onto it that long. He spoke of it for well over a yr. Just not in public. Wow. 9/15/14, [10:48 p.m. EDT ]

And here is where things get really interesting. Maxwell was interviewed by the Oversight Committee on May 30, 2013. We know because some of what he said in that interview appeared in a Majority Staff Report published in September. If Maxwell told Congress about the sifting more than a year ago, that would likely have been when he did so. And if so then one of the people who would be expected to hear about it is the ranking member on the Oversight Committee, Rep. Elijah Cummings. But Weigel reports this morning that Cummings says Maxwell never brought it up:

Slate's David Weigel @daveweigel: Cummings skeptical of Ray Maxwell's claim that Clintonites hid Benghazi dox. He "did not bring it to our attention when we interviewed him." 9/16/14, [11:31 a.m. EDT ]

What are we to make of this new wrinkle? I can see several possibilities. One, Maxwell may not have told Congress a year ago as he claims. That would mean he misled Attkisson and would cast doubt on his entire story. It would also be at odds with the poetry (yes, he wrote poetry) which suggested in 2013 that he had something on the Department.

Another possibility is that Maxwell revealed the information to the Majority of the Committee but that it was somehow withheld from the Minority. Maxwell (or Rep. Issa?) may have believed Cummings was only working to kill the story and couldn't be trusted with the damaging information.

The third possibility is that Cummings is denying knowledge of something he has known about for some time as way to discount the story. This seems unlikely since Rep. Issa would presumably have a transcript somewhere.

If Maxwell told Congress that certainly reinforces the credibility of his story and of Attkisson's report. What we still don't know is how Cummings could have missed something this significant for an entire year.

The New Yorker: "Hillary's Challenge: Dealing With Bill and Barack"

By John Cassidy

September 15, 2014

Given the advance of satellite technology and the pressure on editorial budgets, you might have thought that the bean counters at the networks and other media outlets would have agreed upon a pooling system for events such as the weekend appearance at Tom Harkin's annual steak fry, in Iowa, by Hillary and Bill Clinton. Not so. This is another case where individual self-interest militates against an economically efficient collective solution. And that's great. Rather than having to rely on a single pool report or the local papers, we have a wide range of dispatches to go by.

opportunity' and warning Democrats of the consequences of complacency."

As far as it went, that was accurate and helpful. (It's good to see that the Clinton speechwriters still know how to use alliteration.) Before we get to 2016, or even 2015, we all have to get through the midterms. But if you are willing to believe that Hillary's primary purpose in travelling to Indianola, a small town south of Des Moines, was to influence the outcome this November, I have a bridge, and several 2007 vintage CDOs, that I think might interest you.

Politico's Maggie Haberman, in her report, made clear up front that Hillary was preparing the ground for her Presidential campaign and seeking to lay some ghosts in a spot where she lost a key 2008 primary to Barack Obama. It was, Haberman wrote, Hillary's "first step toward moving past her phobia of the state that helped shatter her 2008 presidential hopes." Hillary didn't acknowledge this, of course, or even that she's running again. "It is true, I am thinking about it," she said. "But for today, that's not why I am here."

Until they officially declare for office, candidates are allowed a few fibs. The crowd, which the Des Moines Register estimated at about ten thousand, gave Hillary a warm reception, and she appeared to enjoy herself. After starting out with a rousing "Hello, Iowa, I'm ba-a-a-ck!", she delivered a twenty-minute speech that hit most of the right notes. She talked about the economic challenges facing middle-class families, called for equal pay for women, delivered a well-earned tribute to Harkin's long career in the Senate, and endorsed Bruce Braley, the Democratic candidate who is trying to replace him.

For many political insiders, though, the real topic of interest was how Hillary would deal with her husband, Bill, and her former boss Barack Obama, both of whom loom large over her prospective campaign. In 2008, according to the conventional wisdom touted by campaign books, Bill's indiscipline was a significant handicap to her. Now, in addition to delineating a role for the Big Dog in the run-up to November, 2016, she needs to define, or redefine, her relationship with a President whom she served for four years but whose low popularity ratings could be a big drag on her own Presidential hopes.

How Hillary deals with Bill and Barack could be her greatest challenge or her greatest opportunity—or perhaps both.

On the face of things, having a popular former President by her side is a great opportunity. After Bill Clinton left the Oval Office, he could be relied upon to rally the Democratic base, especially minorities. Today, his popularity extends to independents and even some Republicans. In the past year or two, his approval rating has consistently been in the mid or high sixties, which means he's a lot more popular now than he was for most of his two terms in office. His ratings are also a good deal higher than Hillary's. A new NBC/Wall Street Journal survey puts her approval rating at just forty-three per cent, which represents a steep fall from her figures a couple of years ago.

Of course, it's not clear how much of a boost the former President can give his wife. If he plays an active role in her campaign, his image as an elder statesman may be tarnished, in which case his own approval rating would fall. Something like this appears to be what has happened to Hillary. A couple of years back, she was a hardworking Secretary of State, flying all around the world representing the United States and, seemingly, above the daily Washington squabbles. Now many Americans see her as another partisan politician, and her popularity has suffered accordingly.

Bill's presence should help his wife at least somewhat. According to Jordan Ragusa, a data analyst at the Rule 22 blog, "when Bill's approval rating increases by 1 unit, Hillary's approval increases by just under 1/2 in the same direction." I'm not sure how this finding can be reconciled with the recent sharp decline in Hillary's numbers. But given the halo that now surrounds the late nineteen-nineties, a period of peace and prosperity, it only makes sense for Hillary's campaign to remind voters of Bill. One of his adages from 1992 might go over better now than it did back then: when you elect a Clinton, you get "two for the price of one."

The danger for Hillary's campaign is that her husband's presence becomes an unwelcome diversion—a story that some parts of the media are already running with. "It was a preview of coming distractions" was the first line in the New York Times piece about Hillary's return to Iowa. "As is often the case wherever Mr. Clinton goes, what amounted to the unofficial start of the next Iowa presidential caucuses was as much about the Clinton who already served as president as the one who appears to have designs on the office," the reporters Jonathan Martin and Amy Chozick continued.

Maybe that's how it seemed from the press area. But were the ordinary attendees at the steak fry so distracted by the former President that they failed to get Hillary's message? On Monday, the Web site of the Des Moines Register, which presumably knows its readers pretty well, featured a video of Hillary's entire speech. The paper's coverage of Bill's speech, in which he took a few swings at the Koch brothers and recalled that the 1993 steak fry was so wet it reminded him of Woodstock, focussed on how he had mispronounced Bruce Braley's name.

For now, at least, a bigger challenge for Hillary than handling Bill Clinton is figuring out how to position herself in relation to Obama. Last month, when she appeared to criticize the President's non-interventionist stance on Syria, she had to call him and clarify her remarks. In Iowa, by contrast, she went out of her way to ally herself with the domestic policies and economic record of the Obama Administration—a record that has helped earn the President a thirty-seven-per-cent approval rating in the state. Although it didn't garner many headlines, it was probably the most important and substantive thing to come out of her speech.

Near the beginning, she artfully acknowledged her 2008 defeat in the Iowa caucus by a young senator from Illinois, joking, "I wonder whatever happened to him." Then, after recounting how she and the President had become colleagues and friends, Hillary bracketed him with the two iconic men with whom she appeared: "And when it comes to moving America forward, we know what it takes," she said. "We've seen it in Tom Harkin. We've seen it in Bill Clinton. And we've seen it in Barack Obama. Under President Obama's leadership, our country is on the road to recovery."

To support this argument, she cited rising exports and falling unemployment, which has seen the jobless rate in Iowa fall to just 4.5 per cent. She mentioned a surge in energy production from renewable sources, and she defended the Affordable Care Act, Obama's signature policy initiative, saying that it had generated $1.7 million in refunds for Iowa families. To be sure, she qualified this praise by saying that she and Obama would agree that there is "a lot of work ahead" "Maintaining a middle class life feels like pushing a boulder up hill every day," she added.

By then, though, Hillary had sent an important political message. While she may still try to put some distance between herself and the President on foreign issues, when it comes to domestic policy she and Obama are as one.

In many ways, of course, that shouldn't come as a shock. In fighting a deep recession with Keynesian stimulus policies, raising tax rates on the rich, boosting the minimum wage, and seeking to provide health care for all, the Obama Administration was pursuing a mainstream progressive agenda that virtually all Democrats support, and, to a large extent, it has worked as advertised. Moreover, much of this agenda can be traced to the Administration of Bill Clinton. In the case of universal health coverage, the lineage can be traced back to Hillary herself.

No surprises there, then. Still, it was helpful of Hillary, at this early stage, to make things clear: her 2016 campaign will rise or fall on defending the economic record of the past six years.

Washington Post opinion: Eugene Robinson: "Hillary Clinton, tell us your vision"

By Eugene Robinson

September 15, 2014, 7:56 p.m. EDT

Judging by her weekend appearance in Iowa, it looks as if Hillary Clinton is indeed running for president. Now she has to answer one simple question: Why?

"It is true, I am thinking about it," she said Sunday at the final Harkin Steak Fry, an annual cholesterol-boosting fundraiser that Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa), who is retiring, has hosted for 37 years. Given the context, this was pretty close to an announcement of the Clinton 2016 campaign.

She was in Iowa, whose first-in-the-nation caucuses kick off presidential primary season. She was accompanied by her husband, Bill, who did his best to play the supporting role of a candidate's spouse, although second fiddle is an instrument he has not quite mastered. She greeted the crowd by announcing, "Hello, Iowa, I'm baaaaack," stretching the word for emphasis.

The last time she barnstormed through Iowa, it did not go well. The 2008 caucuses were supposed to ratify her status as the Democratic front-runner and show her challengers the futility of their puny efforts. Instead, she finished third, behind Barack Obama and John Edwards. The Clinton machine lost the air of inevitability that had been its greatest asset — and turned out to lack a compelling message that could compete with Obama's promise of hope and change.

Now Clinton begins another campaign — perhaps — in which she is seen as the inevitable winner. She has said she will make a firm decision “probably after the first of the year.” But if she has reached the point of dropping broad hints, she needs to begin telling the nation how and why she proposes to lead.

The election of the first woman as president would be a great milestone, but a glance at the headlines — economic and social dislocation at home, terrorism and war abroad — suggests that voters will not likely be in the mood for symbolic gestures. To win the nomination, let alone the general election, Clinton will have to lay out her vision of the way forward.

Her memoir of the years she spent as secretary of state, “Hard Choices,” offers little guidance. My view is that Clinton did an excellent job as America’s chief diplomat, but if she has an overarching philosophy of foreign relations, she left it out of the book. We know that President Obama believes in multilateralism and the sparing use of U.S. military force. We know that some critics believe we should be more interventionist and others believe we should be more isolationist. “Hard Choices” doesn’t really tell us which way Clinton leans, though her record suggests a slight nod toward the hawkish side.

In the book, Clinton rejects the idea of choosing between the “hard power” of military might and the “soft power” of diplomacy, sanctions and foreign aid. Instead, she advocates “smart power,” which seems to mean “all of the above.” When I hear officials talking about “smart” this or “smart” that, I hear a buzzword that is often meant to obscure policy choices rather than illuminate them.

Clinton’s message on domestic affairs is also unclear. At the Iowa event, she sounded what is sure to be a major theme for both Democrats and Republicans in the coming campaign: the need to ease the plight of the beleaguered middle class.

“Today, you know so well, American families are working harder than ever, but maintaining a middle-class life feels like pushing a boulder uphill every single day,” she said, adding that “we can build a growing economy of shared prosperity.”

If this indicates she is beginning to formulate a populist appeal, she will find that territory already staked out by Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) — a non-candidate who nevertheless had sign-carrying supporters in the Iowa crowd. Warren’s blistering critique of structural economic inequality is popular with liberal Democrats, some of whom see Clinton as too cozy with Wall Street.

When Warren is asked about her intentions, her standard formulation is “I am not running for president,” using the present tense — which doesn’t definitively rule anything out. It seems likely, in any event, that someone will challenge Clinton from the left.

After Clinton’s brief speech, her husband tried his best not to steal the show. Bill Clinton tossed out lines that can only be called Clintonesque — “We have got to pull this country together to push this country forward” — and implored Democrats and Republicans to find ways to work together.

Centrist pragmatism as a campaign theme? In U.S. politics today, the middle is a dangerous place to be.

MSNBC: “Immigration activists put Democrats on notice”

By Alex Seitz-Wald

September 16, 2014, 8:04 a.m. EDT

It was always a matter of when — not if — a young undocumented immigrant known as a “DREAMer” would confront Hillary Clinton. The confrontation came early on for the likely 2016 presidential candidate.

“Hello my name is Monica Reyes and I’m an Iowa DREAMer,” the senior at the University of Northern Iowa told Clinton as the former secretary of state worked a lengthy rope line at the Iowa Steak Fry. "Yay!" Clinton replied, flashing a thumbs up as she kept moving.

The former secretary of state has spent the past six years behind a wall of Secret Service agents and staffers, and three Latino activists took advantage of Sunday's event in Iowa to put Clinton on the spot as she signed hats and shook hands with fans.

Cesar Vargas, another activist who co-directs the DREAM Action Coalition, picked up where Reyes off, telling Clinton that President Barack Obama had broken his promise to Latinos by delaying planned executive action to ease deportations. "Well, I think we have to elect more Democrats," Clinton replied, in an apparent reference to the pressure some Democrats put on the White House to hold off on the order.

The answer didn't satisfy the activists. "So far, that was her first strike in dealing with immigration," Vargas told msnbc.

These kind of exchanges, recorded on video for immediate distribution and broadcast, are the signature endeavor of an increasingly confrontational immigration movement that has become adept at embarrassing Republicans — and now it's Democrats' turn.

In the past, DREAMers staged sit-ins in the offices of Democratic lawmakers and Barack Obama's re-election campaign, but the lack of a Democratic primary in 2012 meant most of their action targeted Republicans.

Most recently, and also in Iowa, a DREAMer faced off with Sen. Rand Paul, also a likely presidential candidate. When Vargas and another activist, Erika Andiola, confronted Paul and Rep. Steve King at a restaurant, Paul dropped the burger he was eating and fled the scene posthaste. He later dismissed the incident as a "Kamikaze interview."

Can Clinton or any other Democrat who runs for president expect the same treatment? "Of course," Reyes told msnbc. "That's going to be our main goal."

While immigration is unlikely to be a central issue in the Iowa Democratic Caucus in 2016, and DREAMers can't vote, their actions in the "first in the nation" state set the stage for places where Latinos make up larger portions of the population.

In Iowa, only 5.5% of the population is Hispanic, according to the latest Census figures. That's by far the largest minority group in what remains an overwhelmingly white state, says Mark Grey, a professor at the University of Northern Iowa who runs the Iowa Center for Immigrant Leadership and Integration. Still, that number is very small.

Since the recession, few recently arrived Latino immigrants have settled in Iowa. Instead, refugees and migrants from former American colonies like the Marshall Islands have made up the bulk of the flow. "The landscape is changing," Grey said. "We're kind of in this post-Latino phase."

Despite that shift, videos of DREAMers confronting politicians have a tendency to go viral, so politicians like Clinton should be prepared to handle the ambushes, says Matt Barreto, the co-founder Latino Decisions.

"I don't see anything too troubling in [Clinton's] most recent exchange with the DREAMers. She's a politician, so it should be expected that she gives political answers to things," Barreto told msnbc. "But it's a notice to politicians that they need to be ready to discuss this issue ... [DREAMers] will come after you with their cell phone videos."

And that's especially true in Iowa, where an emphasis on retail politics makes presidential candidates unusually accessible. Immigration dogged Clinton here during her 2008 presidential run, when she came out against drivers licenses for undocumented immigrants after weeks of vacillation.

At the moment, it looks like it would take a lot of unflattering videos to derail Clinton. She's extremely popular among Latinos, according to a recent Latino Decisions poll, and has bested the field of likely Republican presidential candidates by margins larger than when Obama defeated Mitt Romney in 2012.

But the biggest concern for Democrats is not losing Latinos to Republicans, but that the minorities will simply stay home on election day. Latinos tend to vote in much lower percentages than whites, and polling shows Latino enthusiasm for voting in general falling off dramatically after the White House decision to delay its executive action.

And then there's the prospect of someone like Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley entering the race. He has been afraid to challenge the White House from the left on immigration, and is appealing to many of the activists.

For Vargas, the purpose of their confrontations are simple: "We're going to make sure that Democrats don't take Latinos for granted."

**Politico: "Bill Clinton takes a shot at Netanyahu"**

By Jonathan Topaz

Former President Bill Clinton says he agrees that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is "not the guy" for a peace deal.

A C-SPAN video — first reported by Israeli newspaper Haaretz — shows the 42nd president at Sen. Tom Harkin's Iowa steak fry on Sunday speaking with an individual along a rope line.

"If we don't force him to make peace, we will not have peace," the man told Clinton in the video.

"First of all, I agree with that," Clinton responded, before discussing the Israeli-Palestinian peace efforts he brokered during his administration.

"But Netanyahu is not the guy," the unnamed person told Clinton, cutting in.

"I agree with that," Clinton responded.

He and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton headlined Harkin's 37th and final steak fry in Indianola, Iowa. At the event, Hillary Clinton — the likely frontrunner for the 2016 Democratic presidential nomination, should she choose to run — again said she was considering a bid.

The Obama administration and Netanyahu have tried to downplay reports of increased animosity between the U.S. and Israel. Reports indicated that Israel was unhappy with John Kerry, Clinton's successor as secretary of State, and his attempt to broker a peace deal with Turkey and Qatar. The White House, for its part, criticized Israel for at least one shelling of a United Nations facility in Gaza and had expressed concerns about the high level of civilian casualties in the conflict.

In a interview with The Atlantic's Jeffrey Goldberg, Hillary Clinton praised Netanyahu for his flexibility in trying to compromise on a peace deal. "I saw Netanyahu move from being against the two-state solution to announcing his support for it, to considering all kinds of Barack-like options, way far from what he is, and what he is comfortable with," she said.

The media frenzy over Hillary Clinton's trip to Iowa Sunday for a Democratic fundraiser no doubt leaves many Americans scratching their heads.

We haven't held this year's election, which voters seem decidedly unexcited about, and yet political reporters can't stop talking about the 2016 presidential race and the will-she-or-won't-she question surrounding a Clinton bid.

Let's face it: She's running. Her wink, wink, nudge, nudge references at Sen. Tom Harkin's steak fry made that pretty clear.

Otherwise, why would she go back to Iowa for the first time in six years, reliving the humiliation of not only losing the 2008 Iowa Democratic caucus to Barack Obama but also coming in third behind John Edwards who will be the answer to a political trivia question in a couple of years if he isn't already.

The media are obsessed with Hillary. Yes, like Beyoncé, Oprah and Madonna. All you need is her first name for people to know who you are talking about. She is good copy, as we used to say. Speculation on Hillary and her momentous decision no doubt attracts eyeballs which is why media organizations are probably hoping she draws this out as long as possible.

The American people, however, are not as breathlessly anticipating the answer.

Many people believe it's well past time for a woman president and Hillary Clinton may be the logical choice to break that barrier. Plenty of others think the torch should be passed to a new generation of political leaders. And those who can't stand the Clintons and would never consider voting for a Democrat undoubtedly suspect all of the fuss is just another example of liberal media bias.

What is clear is that there is a disconnect between voters' concerns about Washington's ability to get things accomplished and their desire for action by 2016 and the media's obsession with Hillary Clinton's version of Hamlet.

I also worry a little it will cause donor confusion vis a vis Priorities.

Hi Huma (and Lona):

It was wonderful to see you last week. Thanks so much again for making the time in a very, very busy week.

Attached is an invitation for Secretary Clinton to join us at an evening reception at the home of George Soros in December. We would be thrilled to have her serve as honored guest and speaker at this gathering of our top supporters honoring America Votes' work over the past 10 years and looking forward to the next decade.

Thanks so much in advance for your and the Secretary's consideration of this request. We are now holding dates at Mr. Soros' home in the middle of the month (Dec. 15-17) and hope we can find a mutually agreeable date during that window if possible or an alternative. Please let us know if we can provide any further information, address any questions, etc.

Thanks very much again and look forward to talking again soon.

Best,

I definitely don't want to overthink the past, but not answering attacks until it's too late was definitely a problem for us last time.

You may have thought of all this already, but as a response to his JJ speech, can she use her fight for health care for all?

Like say:

Decades ago, I fought for health care for all Americans - fighting the insurance companies, fighting the prescription drug companies - taking on vested interest after vested interest. I didn't succeed, but I still have the scars to show what a hard fight it was. That wasn't the easy thing to do or the most politically popular thing to do, but it was the right fight to have. And I'm glad President Obama succeeded in his fight.

So honestly, spare me the lectures on doing what's easy. I've never done that and never will.

Anyway, had this thought and wanted to send it in.

John,

Sean's not exactly thin-skinned; he's put up with a lot of attacks. But some things go beyond the pale – this one will really make you angry:

"Maloney is a disgrace in his so-called same-sex 'marriage' and lifestyle."
– Letter to the Editor, Oct. 9

It's UNBELIEVABLE that ANYONE would say that in 2014! Often, those crazy opinions come in the form of a whisper campaign that doesn't show up in print, but this is the kind of garbage LGBT candidates deal with.

Sean's one of only eight openly LGBT members of Congress, and his is a desperately needed voice for LGBT rights in Washington.

But Sean's lead has been erased and he CANNOT WIN if we fail to do our part and contribute to his campaign. With just one week until Election Day, there is no tomorrow.

Dear John,

Can't you just picture all those GOP leaders in Washington, sitting around a conference table with a map of the United States in front of them, plotting to take back the Senate?

You and I know New York is a key piece in their puzzle, and we have to push back. I don't relish being on the Republicans' target list, but in a way, it gives me even more energy and determination to prevent them from getting exactly what they want.

This is why I must raise $150,000 before the crucial end-of-quarter deadline on June 30 -- just 2 days away. I don't have the endless amounts of cash my self-funded opponents have, but I can make up for it with grassroots supporters like you.

Click here to make a donation of \$250, \$500 or more to my campaign today, so I can meet my goal of raising \$150,000 before June 30 and have the resources I need to beat my self-funded opponents.

I know we can do this -- I know we can win in November. But I need your help to do it.

Thank you,

Kirsten Gillibrand

Subject: London followup

hi John

Great to meet you in London yesterday. Just to remind, I'm the guy who raised $600K for Obama re-elect with two Wellesley mothers!

As you know, quite a few major Obama raisers and donors have been put off by the way they've been treated. The campaign did not do a good job making them feel like valued members of the team, or creating a two-way communications environment/structure. Raisers are effectively salespeople selling the candidate on the donor marketplace, so their feedback is valuable to HQ in terms of tweaking policy, messaging, tone, etc.

What I'd suggest to get them re-engaged is a positive communication (preferably in person, else by email) which conveys the subtext that the Clinton campaign will handle things differently. This might include:

- Appreciation for supporting Obama and the Party in 2012
- Desire to develop more two-way dialog and improve campaign responsiveness to what's going on at this end of the field.
- Assigning a full-time staff liaison to this community (big donors usually have ideas/advice and want to feel like they are being heard)
- Scheduling regular open Skype meetings to discuss fundraising issues (raisers can often help each other resolve issues through past experience).

If Dennis could use a national deputy with strong high end raiser/donor networks, I'd be interested. I have access to Andover, Harvard, and Stanford MBA alum networks where there's a lot of high powered women who haven't been politically engaged in the past.

I hope my suggestions are helpful and wish you all the best.

Kind Regards

Steven Bakalar

Dear Dennis,

Happy New Year!

I understand that there will be an AAPI for Hillary gathering in the Los Angeles area on January 7. I want very much to attend, but I just arrived in Japan to attend a series of meetings to assess where Japan is headed in 2016. I will also be meeting with Chinese and South Korean government officials and business leaders in Japan.

Since I won't return to the U.S. until Jan. 20, I'll miss the LA meeting. However, could you please be sure that my name appears on the list of AAPI representatives supporting Hillary? If you will be using identifying organizations, please list me as:

Glen S. Fukushima, Chairman & Co-Founder, CAPA21 (Coalition of Asian Pacific Americans for the 21st Century)

Thanks, and look forward to seeing you again soon!

Glen

Stephen Sachs (Duke) will present the final paper in the Constitutional Law Colloquium on Monday, November 30, at 3:30pm. The paper, "The Law of Interpretation," co-authored with Will Baude (Chicago), is likely to be of wide interest, it deals with the law of interpretation across doctrinal areas, including both public law and private law interpretation of legally salient texts.

I am squarely in the other camp on this one. Short shorts don't belong in school. On boys or girls. Finger tip length is still fairly short.

P.S. If it is so "hot" outside, why is she wearing what looks like a long sleeve wool sweater?

I may eat my words in a few years .. but at least at this point we have made the distinction in our house that some shorts may be worn on the soccer field, to the pool, or hanging out on the weekends, but not appropriate for school since school is our job. And ditto for Gabe, he has some tank tops that he can wear but not to school.

Hi Matt, Julie Pace from the AP here. I'm writing a profile on John Podesta as he transitions out of the White House and into a possible role on an HRC campaign, if there ends up being a campaign. I was wondering if President Clinton might want to provide a statement on John given their long working relationship.

Happy to fill you in on more details about the story. It will likely run this weekend.

Hi Jen,

Attached and below are the remarks you requested. The hard copies are on your d

Best,

Alex

Paragraph 1:

There isn't any place in our country that is more about the future than right here in this state, and in particular this part of it. I want to be the president who helps lead us into the future in a way that restores inclusive prosperity, creates ladders of opportunity for every one of our young people, doesn't shut the door in the face of those immigrants who are building better futures for themselves and their children, that come up with the innovative, creative ideas that are not going to just lead a nation but lead a world into the kind of future that we know we can help deliver.

Paragraph 2:

But then I also took advantage of all those opportunities that awaited. It's really much harder now for so many families and young people to do that. I want to change that. I want us to be able to say in all good conscience, and absolutely provable, yes, you know what, it's the best thing in the world, you were born in this country and we care about you, and we want you to go as far as your hard work and talent will take you. Not just because you're born into an upper middle class or a wealthy family, but because you're an American. That's what we want for you, and that's what we're going to do our very best to provide.

Paragraph 3:

And part of what I want to do is honoring my mother and wanting to make sure the world my granddaughter walks into is a world where more kids experience kindness and love and opportunities to make the most of their own God-given potential, because at the end of the day, that's what it should be about. That's for me what running for president and serving as president will be about if I'm so privileged to do that.

This looks good. A few changes:

- 1) I think Gittenstein has 2 t's: maybe not.
- 2) In the working group paragraph, change draft policy papers to draft strategic options papers
- 3) in EO graph, let's add that they are reviewing Bush's EO's for possible reversal (not implicit)
- 4) in post election web site graph let's add a little more like people can send in policy ideas--thought you did a good succinct job of that this am on the call.

That's it. Looks goood.

Good seeing you. Not to talk too much, but as you know, some of the best things to do are moving money around in foreign aid. The school feeding program we did (and you and the President made happen by eventually pushing the relevant agencies) fed 9 million kids a year who weren't getting fed and is still going strong thanks to legislation...there are more of those things around that really matter, and are low hanging fruit, and really help a lot of people and would get support. Anyway, wanted to plug foreign aid as a good place for some moves.

Warm Regards,
Tom

Sure--happy to meet with her. I'd still like to get the initial assessment polls moving this week since time is ticking, though. Branding probably won't start until later Jan at the earliest.
Any issues with me getting that moving?

Dear Robby

I look forward to reviewing and sharing any thoughts that may be valuable.

My one thought from the conversation I participated in with Wendy is that her strength is in branding and marketing, using the evidence base in determining how to generate the behaviors sought in the target audience. So I think she has the capacity and creativity to drive the brand development and strategy from inception to execution. I imagine she would rely on the data that is being collected through the polling and focus groups you outline but equally as important, would likely have questions she might suggest specifically be included in the process. That's why I'm not sure she is an advisor in the sense of opining on things as they occur but instead an actual partner with the team in defining and shaping what information is needed and then how to synthesize it for the purposes at hand.

This may make more sense once you meet her and have a thoughtful conversation about her strengths and talents. Then I think her active engagement can be efficient and productive for the activity you have outlined. Should we arrange a time for you to meet her or at least connect with her by telephone?

best.

Madame Secretary, Cheryl, John,

Attached is an updated summary of the research process and a budget. I want to emphasize that THIS WILL CHANGE because the team will have better ideas on methodology and the strategy will evolve as the project progresses. I would still assume our budget will be in the $2+ million range per my earlier memo, even though the attached budget is lower than $2 million (obviously, we are going to make this as cheap as we can without sacrificing thoroughness and quality).

Below is information on the participants. Attached is (1) a revised overview of the process and (2) a budget.

Please let me know if there are any objections or recommended changes, otherwise I will proceed with the plan as outlined.

Thanks!

THE TEAM:

Pollsters: Jef Pollock and John Anzalone

Media consultant: Saul Shorr (like Jef and John, I will ask that he participate in the project, with no obligation by you or him that he work for the campaign, should you decide to run. I will offer Saul $20k plus travel costs to work with us for the next three months and attend a number of the focus groups).

Advisors: I will have Wendy provide input on the instruments and methodology for the first round--then we can evaluate the degree we want to share data. I would like to talk to her before we lock this in, since I have never met her.

SELF RESEARCH

We don't have a thematically organized set of self research on the your accomplishments pre-State. I would like to give the pollsters full access to all raw materials on accomplishments pre 2009, especially the Senate. It's very important that we come out of this process understanding which accomplishments are most meaningful to voters.

POLICY

I would like to loop Dan and Jake into drafting of likely policy initiatives for testing--they have already provided me some input, but I'd like to get them on calls with the team to drill down on this in more detail, since it's so important. I know that policy is still a nascent process and will be highly iterative, but I don't think it makes sense to do the polling in isolation from the policy work itself (since the research should be supporting and informing the policy development).

Subject: Job Opening: Governor of Iowa

John,

We know the Branstad administration doesn't like to advertise state job openings to the public, allowing their managers to hire cronies, so they're pretty disappointed the public knows they have a choice for governor in 27 days.

Contribute $25, $50, or $100 today to strengthen our campaign for a fresh start.

You get to hire the next Governor of Iowa. So who do you want?

A governor who isn't interested in governing? Who has let the Department of Human Services run amok, prompting a disability rights group to alert the federal government to his refusal to follow the law?

A governor with no clear grasp of the job's scope? Branstad's actions have twice been ruled as unconstitutional overreaches of his job's authority.

Luckily there is another promising candidate for this position: Jack Hatch.

Jack's spent his time in both the private and the public sector actually helping people, whether it's providing affordable housing where others won't build or ensuring health care for the children of Iowa, Jack has proven himself.

Contribute $25, $50, or $100 to help Jack win this race and sign Terry Branstad's pink slip.

It's time we get a fresh start.

Subject: Art Lipson and Rochelle Kaplan

I spoke today to the Utah Education Association Delegate Assembly. The subject of my speech was to praise the delegates for the resounding victory they achieved in defeating the private school voucher ballot measure last November. They defeated the measure in every county in Utah.

Art Lipson and Rochelle Kaplan (DA Partners) supported our work and helped raise money for the effort. We developed a friendship during this campaign.

I met with them briefly today at their home in Salt Lake.

Art and Rochelle are deeply involved with Project New West in a major research project on the values, interests, attitudes and opinions of LDS voters, the results of which will be useful in western states beyond Utah.

Art was complimentary of the information he received at the recent Committee on the States meeting in Denver. It has motivated him to create vehicles and invest in organizational infrastructure and capacity in his home state.

We discussed the race for the Democratic presidential nomination. We concluded that there was a need to assemble individual donors who are not reluctant to contribute to organizations that are engaged in aggressively exposing McCain's public record. A meeting around the upcoming DA meeting seemed logical to Art and Rochelle. I believe that if there was a cogent pitch for issue advocacy around McCain's record that they would consider helping to fund it.

If such a meeting is being organized around the DA conference, I suggest that Art and Rochelle be invited.

I extended greetings to them from Frank Smith per his request.

That's my report.

John, Thanks again for your offer to help with a letter for the Truman project. I wanted to touch base and see if it would be possible to get your letter by tomorrow. My deadline to submit the application is next week.

I know you're busy, so thanks for anything you can do.

John - I wanted to check back in with you about the logistics of the recommendation letter. Do you think it's possible you might be able to get to this by Friday? If so, can you please send me back a .pdf signed version? I have to upload it online to my application. Thanks again! Sincerely, John

John,

I was in DC last month and met with Dennis about my desire to join the Truman National Security Project. I understand he was able to discuss this idea with you. I would be so grateful if you would consider writing me a recommendation letter.

As you may know I am currently enrolled in the Naval War College Master's Program for National Security Policy and Strategic Studies. The Truman Project would be an invaluable organization to apply my military experience and what I'm learning in the War College program.

Attached is my CV for background and a draft recommendation letter. I acknowledge that the letter is very generous, so please feel free to edit as necessary.

I know how busy you are, so I am especially grateful for your help.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
John

Perfect, especially reunion opportunity and RFH and emcee choice, but roasting should only be of Deputy Counsels.

Subject: They're going to fix your iPad!!

Great news!! Beth read the WaPo article and noted the mention of your busted iPad. She asked for the backstory and her exact words were: "omgosh, we'll pay to get it fixed." Very sweet.

I'll work with our volunteer team to get it in to the Apple store tonight and hopefully have it fixed by tomorrow.

John – You had asked for us to look at some metrics for how to evaluate a successful transition. We ended up focusing on post-Election Day activities, in particular, personnel announcements and confirmations, because it was the most quantifiable thing we could come up with. Other things (e.g., continuity of leadership, cooperation with the Hill) are far more subjective. Let us know if you'd like any follow-up on this.

THE SITUATION OF THE CHRISTIANS AND MINORITIES IN ISRAEL IS IMPROVING

Walla.co.il (online service) by Jonathan Nizar al-Huri (commentary) -- [January 3] The author is the spokesperson for the Israeli Christians Recruitment Forum

Any way you look at it, it is undeniable that Israel is the safest country for Christians and other minorities in the Middle East. When Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu says this, he is stating an established fact. The number of Christians in Israel continues to rise regularly every year, because the State of Israel is a democratic state of law that respects and enables its minority citizens freedom of worship and religious autonomy.

Beyond the freedom of religion and worship, the security, freedom and equality that the democracy in the Jewish state grants the Christians, there is also a very significant difference between Israel and the neighboring countries, in the aspect of the state's handling of terror attacks against Christians and other minorities. In Israel, the condemnation of price tag attacks and hate crimes encompasses all sides of the political spectrum; Israeli society denounces [the crimes] and the law enforcement agencies and security forces work to eradicate the phenomenon and make an attempt to find the culprits and bring them to justice. While in Israel it is a radical minority that perpetrates these criminal actions, in the Gaza Strip, the Palestinian Authority, in neighboring countries and in Syria and Iraq, this is a frequent, everyday situation.

The situation of the Christians in Iraq and Syria has deteriorated over the years due to the rise of radical Islam which imposes terror, but the situation of the Christian minority in these countries was not very good even when they were under state rule. Their security situation was better than today; these countries gave immunity to the Christians who lived in their territory in the years before the fall of their rulers, but then too the Christians were second-class citizens without full rights or real ability to advance. This can be seen with great regret when one examines the situation of the Copts in Egypt, where they have been restricted and persecuted for years. Their churches are destroyed in terror attacks and fires, their women are raped, murders are carried out [against them] and their prayers are conducted in tents. No promising future for Christians in Egypt is on the horizon. The situation of the Christians in the State of Lebanon is even worse. In the early 1970s the Christians were the majority in Lebanon, constituting about 80% of the Lebanese population. Until today the Christians continue to emigrate from Lebanon due to its terrible situation, the insecurity and the inequality, and it can be said that this population has reached a low point of about 20% of the general population.

And how can we ignore the situation of the Christians in the Gaza Strip and the Palestinian Authority? Under the Hamas regime in Gaza, Christians celebrate [their holidays] secretly. Hamas has banned them from celebrating the New Year, claiming that this undermines the values of Islam. This goes along with the blowing up of shops and school throughout the Gaza Strip, the murder of the priest Rami Ayyad in 2007 and the testimony of Archbishop Alexios, who said that jihadists use churches and Christian holy places as a base for the terror attacks they stage.

In the Palestinian Authority one can see festive images, but these are deceptive. The situation under the surface is the worst since 1995, the year in which Israel handed over control of Bethlehem to the Palestinian Authority. The Christian population in one of the cities most important to Christianity, the birthplace of Jesus, is on a constant downward trend, with less than 20% of the general population (according to PA statistics). Just a few days ago, after the Christmas eve mass, the Latin Patriarch, Fouad Twal, was attacked in Bethlehem by a group of 16 radical Muslims. A few months ago a monastery was torched in Bethlehem, and earlier in 2015 a takeover was staged of lands belonging to the Mar Saba monastery in Beit Sahour, and seven radical Muslims barricaded themselves inside the monastery.

Prime Minister Netanyahu can justifiably take pride in the fact that the situation of the Christians and minorities in Israel is only improving over the years. Just last week, NIS 15 billion were approved for investment in minorities in Israel. The situation is very good in Israel, but like everywhere, here too there are problems and they need to be rectified. But this has to be done in partnership, with integration and not isolation, as constructive and not destructive criticism.

We must not cynically use the situation of the Christians in Israel to unfairly besmirch Israel. On one hand, people hide the truth, and on the other hand, they distort reality for their political needs.

Subject: Veterans and Social Security

About | Our Candidates

Dear John,

Recently, there has been a move afoot from far-right Republicans to cut Social Security way back, or even privatize the system, and put everyone at the whim of the stock market. What we weren't sure of, until today, is how these proposals would affect veterans.

But today, a coalition of veterans organizations, including VoteVets.org, and Social Security groups released a major new report on Social Security and veterans. The report showed that veterans and their families depend on Social Security not just for retirement, but also for disability benefits and death benefits. These findings show that any cutbacks to Social Security will severely impact veterans and their families in need. We need to get the word out about how much veterans and their families depend on Social Security.

CLICK HERE TO EMAIL YOUR FRIENDS ABOUT SOCIAL SECURITY AND VETERANS

The findings really put things in perspective. Just a few of the points from the report:

- Social Security currently pays benefits to over 9 million veterans—about 4 in 10 veterans.
- Over one-third of America's 54 million Social Security beneficiaries are either veterans or family members living with them, such as their spouses.
- Of the 13 to 14 million veterans—or 6 in 10—who are not Social Security beneficiaries, the vast majority will become beneficiaries in the future.
- The vast majority of the Active Duty community's 1.4 million members, 700,000 spouses and 1.2 million children, and the Total Selected Reserve community's 1.1 million members, 400,000 spouses and 650,000 children, are eligible for Social Security's disability and life insurance benefits if a service member becomes severely disabled or dies.
- Indeed, approximately 771,000 veterans receive Social Security disabled worker benefits, averaging $1,100-$1,200 per month.
- Social Security's young survivors' benefits are particularly important to the 4 in 10 active duty members who are married with children and the 1 in 20 who are single parents.
- As of January 16, 2011, the number of American servicemen and women killed on active duty in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan was 5,860, leaving behind an estimated more than 4,000 children.

What is abundantly clear is that veterans and their families depend on Social Security more than maybe anyone else. When we talk about cutting benefits, we're talking about punishing veterans and their families who rely on Social Security's benefits, particularly disabled veterans and families of the fallen. There's no doubt that we as a nation need to ensure that Social Security is viable for the long-term, but the way to do it is not to cut the system back to bare bones

But, these facts don't matter unless people know about it. So CLICK HERE to spread the word. Thanks for your support.

Sincerely,
Ashwin Madia

Subject: Petition: Anti-gay discrimination

Hi Friend,

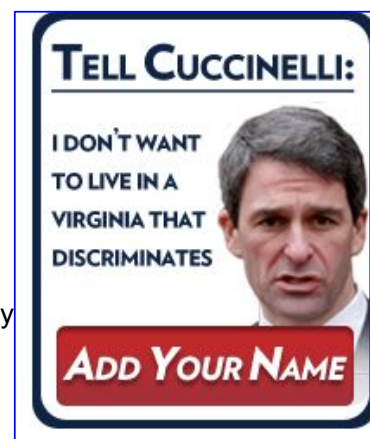

Turns out Ken Cuccinelli's extreme agenda isn't just offensive — it's terrible for business.

In 2010, he directed Virginia's public colleges to strip gay students and faculty members of policies protecting them from discrimination.

His order jeopardized the Commonwealth's efforts to lure Northrop Grumman, a huge employer that is proud of its inclusive employee policies, to relocate to Virginia — according to the New York Times.

With hundreds of jobs for Virginians on the line, Cuccinelli put his anti-gay ideology first.

Tell Ken Cuccinelli you don't want to live in a Virginia that discriminates — it's wrong, it's backwards, it's bad for business.

With the sequester and federal spending cuts hitting Virginia's economy hard, job creation needs to be our next governor's first, second, and third priorities.

And while Ken Cuccinelli keeps trying to convince voters he'll leave his extreme ideology at the door and focus on the economy, they're just not buying it.

They shouldn't. Over and over again, Ken Cuccinelli has resisted anti-discrimination policies. He's repeatedly tried to infringe on women's access to health care. He's politicized academic research. And he's done that all while grandstanding about ideological purity.

We can't afford to elect a governor who has shown that he puts his extreme agenda first — especially when hundreds of Virginia jobs are on the line.

Add your name to our petition to tell Ken Cuccinelli it is unacceptable that he puts his radical agenda first — and the well-being of Virginians second:

Jen has asked if you would be available to go on Andrea Mitchell--tomorrow at 12:00 PM. You would do the hit between your meetings with Addisu Demissie and Bobby Stein. Addisu can move your meeting up from 11:00 to 10:30 AM to give you a full 2 hours between the two meetings.

The show would provide a car to drive you roundtrip from Perkins Coie to Andrea's studio (4001 Nebraska Ave NW).

Here's the tick-tock of what those movements would look like:

They have to believe it came from us. Reads too perfectly for HRC. If we intended to do it it probably wouldn't read so perfectly.

Just talked w Mindy. Good convo. She said she's been getting really good feedback about Dan's outreach--she said she knows we are talking to the people they suggested and they really like Dan. So good work, Schwerin!

We should think about going back to them when we've isolated one or two ideas and getting more input on those (without showing our cards, obviously)...will probably be in our interest for them to have a sense of where we're headed before HRC delivers to the public.

Also, she flagged that they're going to push back hard against POTUS on trade. She understood that HRC was already on the record as his SOS so we don't have a ton of room to maneuver.

2 churches and a coffee shop this morning. I was (and still am) feeling blessed and caffeinated this Sunday afternoon.

Churches were Greater Imani Church and Mississippi Boulevard Christian Church. Imani had about 2000 congregants there, 800 or so at Mississippi Blvd.

She gave a similar speech at each, sort of an abbreviated new stump, did togetherness, mothers of the movement, health care, love and kindness. First one was probably a little better organized, but crowd at each was fired up. Lots of applause and lots of individual cheers.

Left there and flew to Nashville, where we joined Tony Goldwyn and the Mayor Megan Barry for a coffee stop at Fido, near Vanderbilt. The place was packed, she ordered some coffee and took lots of photos, spoke to the owner and his son for awhile. On small thing to note: on the way in Tony asked her what she thought of Trump's David Duke comments this morning. She replied that it was "pathetic" under her breath, which has made a little news (in a good way).

The rally at Meharry Medical college was high-energy. Tony Goldwyn did LONG but solid intro. HRC visited an overflow room with about 400. 800 in the main room. She told the story again about the young, affluent white guy that emailed her after her Harlem speech and said he'd been arrested but through connections his parents made the charges go away. All people must be equal under the law.

Long ropeline and out.

On the plane headed to Arkansas (!!)

Good trip to Georgia.

City hall was packed, with several hundred more in overflow than in the event itself. HRC spoke at both, with Mayor Reed getting everyone fired up. Speech was shorter but pretty standard stump otherwise.

We left and went to the Statehouse which was electric. Who knew there were that many Democrats in Georgia. She addressed the Democratic Caucus and did a short version of her stump that was pretty crisp. She used a line about spending 10 months crafting policies, and while the press may have thought that was boring, she's very proud of it. People loved it. There were no press in the room.

We took many a selfie while wading through throngs of people, with more pouring over the balconies, and headed to Octane coffee shop for an OTR. Usher was going to join us but got stuck in traffic...

Dan Merica asked her if she was jealous that she didn't get Christie's endorsement, to which she responded with a prolonged smile (you could see the gears turning), and then said "Dan, I really like you. I really really like you." They are basically courting each other at this point.

She got one question from local CBS, general about why she's in Georgia. She gave a stock answer about being a good partner if she's lucky enough to win.

In the air headed to Orangeburg now.

Chuck Todd/MTP Daily

1) Nomination

Not someone who gets ahead of myself.

Got to keep proving it over and over again.

2) Clyburn says you've been more conversational.

- So proud
- Fair observation
- We laid out a lot of policy in the beginning
- I wanted people to know my plans, etc
- Now we have some opportunities to talk about values at stake, breaking down barriers.
- Sense of convergence
- We've laid out the work we want to do.
- Now we can build on that about how we unite the country and have conversations about the future again.

3) Ohio/Bernie NAFTA hit

- Americans are asking who can stop other countries from hurting their workers and do a Manufacturing Renaissance...rest of answer we provided- got in both Ex-Im investments in Ohio and name checked the tire factory that benefitted from the New Markets Tax credit in Sumter.

4) Protestor last night

- Poor choice of words
- Wouldnt' use them today's
- Life's work
- Lifting up children and young people
- Never got the chance they deserved
- School to prison pipeline
- Going to keep being a champion
- Break down the barriers, economic and racism

5) Trump/Supporters are former Trump supporters.

- Too soon to make judgements about this.
- NV Caucuses stat on turnout

6) People say their second choice is Bernie, seems to be an appetite for radical change.

- People are disappointed and feel like they've been let down.

Here at the church in Florence right now and people are FIRED UP. She's using "imagine" to frame the whole speech. Working well.

Started the day with an interview with Joe Madison, she called him on our way to SC Strong in North Charleston.

Opened with a PBS story on the wealth gap growing. She talked about her plans and inequality in general. Follow up was about Obama's hesitancy to have targeted efforts, instead focusing on the all boats rise with the tide notion, so she skipped the Obama piece and talked about Clyburn's 10-20-30 , her own plans.

Then he played Gwen Carr's comments last night, quoted some of her lines including the one about HRC seeking them out, and compared it to Kennedy going to see MLK when he was arrested in Alabama. HRC gave a strong answer about being humbled, being a mother and a grandmother.

Gitmo Q at the end, answer tracked with her statement yesterday.

SC Strong went well. She did some very brief opening remarks, had a couple of the round table participants share their stories, and then we shuffled the press out.

Dropped by the Longshoremen's, she thanked everyone and asked for their vote. Great reception, they were very grateful that she came to the hall.

On the way to the airport we called Rhonda Rawlings for her show.

Rhonda started with minimum wage. HRC stuck to her standard lines, mentioned equal pay, got a follow up on why $12 and defended it well.

College affordability. She said she think debt free public education is achievable. Covered student debt as well.

Breaking Down Barriers forum with the mothers in Greenville...talked about how amazing it was, then asked about policing. HRC talked about their ability to turn grief into action.

Ended with Obama's legacy.

Alpha Kappa Alpha event went well. She did some of her remarks, some ad libbing. She reprised her town hall Q from last night where she was asked about trust and forgiveness, repeated what she said about the importance of forgiveness and cited Mandela as our greatest example. Worked a rope line at the end for a fair amount of time.

Did two local affiliates before headed off to Sumter. CBS and NBC locals. Talked about the state of the race, why she's in SC, Gitmo, and a quick Q about emails and Benghazi in CBS. NBC asked her about SC, Trust, Trump, Bernie supporters and how to bring them around if she wins, and one interesting question about her unique ability to energize rooms with minorities in them.

We're in Sumter now at Moore College. She's been talking for 45 minutes. Covered it all! Possible impending Q&A...

Mothers of the Movement Event

Here's a summary, but for those of you that didn't watch...it was quite something.

She opened by acknowledging Herb Buhl, who she worked with when she was down here working for CDF in the 1960s. Told a funny story about not knowing how to drive a stick shift and him lending her a manual car.

She briefly told the stories of the mothers and the children they lost.

Guns are the leading cause of death among black men, more than the other leading 9 causes of death combined. There was an audible sigh in the audience.

Talked about Gabby Giffords, and the 9 year old girl shot along with the others that day.

No fly list.

Politics are hard, I know that. But sometimes the hard things are sometimes the things that are most important to do. President Obama wants to make guns a voting issue and I agree completely.

Please welcome these remarkable people who are taking this journey on behalf of all of us.

HRC turned it over to the guests.

Sabrina Fulton: "She walked in as a Presidential candidate, walked out as a compassionate mother."

No one took notes for her, she took notes for herself.

Maria Hamilton, mother of Dontre Hamilton, told her story.

Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis.- told her story. I have watched her bring people and countries back into the fold back into the fray, and she has done a good thing.

Gwen Carr- Talked about all the outreach, how HRC came to them. Wondering what the catch was. "There was no catch, she was just genuinely concerned." I endorse her, because she endorsed us first.

Geneva Reed-Veal, Sandra Bland's mom. Did a wonderful rant on the media and how tired she was of them. Go out and vote. We have 9 months to put her in, she's the new baby."There are no secret emails."

Mark Kelly: X percent of children that die from gun violence in the developing world die in the US.

Gabby- Here to talk about Hillary Clinton, who is tough, she is courageous, she will fight to make our families safer. In the WH she will stand up to the gun lobby. Thanks why I'm voting for Hillary. Speaking is difficult for me but come January I want to say these two words...Madame President.

Standing ovation from the room, someone stood up and yelled "Madame President!" Everyone went nuts.

HRC said thanks to everyone, talked about their courage. I hope this is a movement that lasts, and ended to work a rope line.

***At the very end, she briefly spoke to Alex Wagner on the rope line who was there with The Circus. I'm not sure it checked the box for us, but they talked briefly about how amazing the mothers were, what a moving event it was***

- She reiterated her commitment to fight for CIR with a pathway to citizenship; protect and implement DACA and DAPA; and explore other ways to protect undocumented people via executive action ("create new categories").
- She stated support for UFW's legislative proposal to expand overtime pay for farm workers in CA, so overtime is av. after 40 hours/week or 8 hours/day.
- She was asked to help in the dispute between the UFW and CA-based Gerawan Farming. She said she's do everything possible. After the meeting, she had a private conversation with Arturo and expressed caution b/c of campaign.
- She was asked about healthcare for the undocumented community. Stated her support for all undocumented people to be able to buy in the exchange, but acknowledged that most people don't have the resources to afford it. She also said she would work to make the exchanges available to all, including subsidies, but immediately linked it to CIR. Also wants to work with states like CA and the UFW to explore other ways to provide HC
- Re Central American kids, she said government funded legal counsel for UCs and working with El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to take down drug cartels and build the region.
- She was asked if she would appoint Obama to the SCOTUS. She said he would be a very good candidate, but she wouldn't have that power...and he probably wants a normal life. It was a fun exchange bet. her and the farm workers.

Two SC radio interviews today:

1) We did a repeat with Cynthia Hardy that ended up being a very brief conversation HRC joined in progress about health disparities in communities of color.

2) She did a slightly tougher but ultimately very strong interview with Judi Gatson of 103.1 KISS FM. She asked HRC about her recent comments on not being in this for herself, and said that some doubt that. The answer was very strong, and invoked a little reflection on sexism. She asked about youth, but the framing was interesting, which was that BdB and Eric Garner's mom endorse, but children of BdB and Eric Garner's sister do not. The other question most of note was Judi observing that she hears people in the community say that HRC embraces Obama only to pander to the AfAm population. Interesting that that broke through, (Stephanie if you talked to her I'd be curious to hear more about how often she's hearing that), HRC's answer was good, she said that Senator Sanders claiming that was offensive, that she nominated him at the convention, campaigned for him, worked for him for 4 years, and that it "affects" her "personally" to hear Sanders and his supporters say that stuff.

Finance event in Atherton was largely uneventful. She did take questions. She dinged Uber when talking about the Kalamazoo shooter, which thrilled many in the audience here in Silicon Valley, I'm sure. No encryption questions.

One more finance event and then we're off to LA to spend the night.

We visited the home of Vicki Early, a retired California utility company employee who moved to Nevada to buy her first home, and installed solar panels on the roof, which she could afford with the Public Utility Commission offsets on her fixed income until they got rolled back. She and her boyfriend Tyrone showed HRC the panels in the back yard and told her story. HRC had the press come in closer to listen and then dos brief remarks of her own on the importance of this issue for people like Vicki. Pretty great stuff.

Next we went to Youthbuild, an organization with a Nevada chapter that builds houses for Habitat for Humanity. We walked through a big warehouse where HRC individually met about 15 workers. She was intrigued by how most of them found the place, which was through Craigslist, and probed them on what they were learning and what they wanted to do next. Most wanted to continue in the building trades. She spoke briefly, and invited the Youthbuild and Habitat folks to speak as well.

We've also squeezed in two SC radio interviews. Both went well, talked about the Clyburn's endorsement, support for President Obama, her plans on college affordability.

Headed to the town hall with high school students now.

Women and Families Roundtable:

Very engaging discussion, topics ranged from early childhood education to food deserts to Flint. HRC brought up Flint proactively, and a woman stood up and said that she had family there, appreciated HRC saying that, her work there, and that her assessment was exactly right. Audience was diverse across the board, lots of millennials and lots of young people who work for various NGOs and advocacy groups with a lot of very good questions and passionate comments. At the end HRC commented on her life's work, figuring out how to make difference in people's lives as opposed to promising them the moon, and making sure lives are better when you're done than when you started. Wasn't too hot but poignant and noticeable following 45 minutes of discussing the importance of reading to your children every day.

We're now going to divert course and make a pit stop at a woman's house who has been affected by the Nevada Public Utility Commissions retroactive rate changes on people selling solar back to the grid. Pool is with us.

Woke up in Milwaukee this morning and did a fundraiser at Harbor House. Very pretty setting just outside of downtown on a partially frozen bright blue Lake Michigan. She gave a pretty standard stump, no Qs, and we headed out.

South Carolina was quite something. Good crowd of about 450/500 at Denmark-Olar Elementary School (home of the Vikings). HRC stuck largely to her remarks and outlined her $125 billion plan to improve underserved communities, and took questions on just about everything: social security, health care multiple times, body cameras, Flint, homeless vets, Trump, student loans, who she's pick for VP, and a little girl who gave her a drawing that said on it: "I'm not bossy I have leadership skills." It was a very engaged, high-energy affair.

Following the town hall and a long ropeline, we did 2 TV stand ups and a print interview. Discussion in both revolved around race relations, the state of the race, and education, which HRC discussed at length in a dilapidated older locker room with paint people off the walls in the background.

Our print interviewer, Princess Williams, was really impressive. She won an award last year for best student journalist in a college under 5000 students from the South Carolina Press Association. She was nervous but did a great job, asked HRC about education, what we can't do beyond government programs to help level the playing field, attracting young voters, and what life is like off the campaign trail.

We're in the air now headed back north to St. Paul for the Humphrey-Mondale Dinner.

Two more things to add:

We did a radio interview with Greg and the morning buzz. Like the first local NH hit this morning, it was all about NH and allowed her to talk about how grateful she is to the people here.

Also just did a 10 minute satellite hit with Al Sharpton. They talked about heading to Nevada and her strategy there, he asked her how she would distinguish he civil rights record, then Flint, millennial women, voting rights, and a question about Cruz's comments on Flint and Katrina both being cities with crisis and two very liberal mayors. She didn't engage most of the answer and at the end said "that's not the world I live in, and not the world I'd govern as President."

Strong interview in substance and tone.

Then off to Dover. Another great showing by the organizing team, as well as by Carly Fiorina's husband, who greeted the Secretary enthusiastically. You'd never know his wife calls for HRC's imprisonment on a daily basis.

Just got back to Manchester.

We just went to the Ward 10 polling location at Parker Varney School in Manchester.

HRC arrived to volunteers chanting "I believe that she will win!" and worked the crowd. She shook about 75 hands and took lots of photos, and then did an impromptu stand up with the morning show anchors. They asked her about how she's feeling and expectations, she just talked about how excited she was to be out talking to people and her love for New Hampshire.

We took a few more photos and talked to WMUR for a few minutes, which will air at noon.

Now we're in Nashua now headed to another location and on the phone live with Mike Pomp of WTSN radio. Good conversation, she's talking about her experiences up here, basically a perfect Election Day drive time interview.

More to come.

HRC and WJC stopped by Chez Vachon for breakfast. Nice greasy spoon with a French Canadian twist. HRC and WJC worked the tables, ran into some longtime supporters, took a lot of selfies. President Clinton was excited to see his photo still on the wall from when he visited last.

Dan O'Neil, former Dodd and O'Malley supporter but '92 Clinton supporter joined them for omelettes. Following breakfast, some more selfie-taking ensued as did a conversation with a couple of vets. Restaurant felt overwhelmingly supportive.

We went back to the hotel and taped 6 TV interviews with local and Boston affiliates. Lots about the state of the race here and the weather. Most asked about Warren which she handled well, a couple of transcripts questions and a good exchange with FOX on sexism in politics.

From there we went to Manchester Community College. Crowd of about 1100, she did a few things differently, including calling Bernie out for accepting DSCC money that came in part from Wall Street.

We taped Rachel Maddow after the event. It opened with the staffing question and then covered the waterfront...Flint, trust, attacks, transcripts. We let it go so Rachel would spend more time on the positive which she did.

After Maddow we went to the Velcro factory. She went table to table in their cafeteria which looked like a Johnny Rockets, shaking hands, sometimes sitting down for brief conversations. Press pool got some good stuff.

We're now back at the Radisson waiting to depart for WMUR where we'll do a quick live hit on WMUR, she'll simply make a one minute pitch to voters direct to camera.

The crowd was extraordinarily supportive. Her remarks were brief (12/15) but strong, with powerful response.

Afterwards she took photos, she did a very quick local standup in the sanctuary (all about Flint), met with a group of local pastors and went into the stakeholders/electeds meeting with the mayor.

On the way to the airport we called the editor of the National Newspaper Association, quick 5 minute interview on the importance of Flint and their being many other Flints. Transcript to follow.

Descending back into NH now, going to do an OTR at the Puritan Backroom (!!).

Maggie called me this morning and we chatted for about 45 minutes re how they want to be helpful to Sec Clinton. Forgive me for sending this to all, but I don't know exactly where to send this.

A few takeaways:

1. They would like to discuss list swap or list donation of their several hundred thousand names to Sec Clinton's campaign and would like me to be the interlocutor for that. I will take your guidance on how best to accomplish. I should note that Sen Udall already gave his names to Sen Bennet, so if you have access to Michael's list, the Udall list may be unnecessary.
2. They also happy to have Sen Udall engage publicly/email/direct mail to raise money etc for Sec Clinton if desired.
3. They, together and separately, would like to offer their campaign advice for Colorado. I think it worth a call from one of you to them.
4. They, together and separately, would like to be engaged in policy conversations with appropriate Clinton campaign team esp around energy and climate issues.

Please advise re next steps.

Subject: Re: DRAFT: Women's Leadership Forum remarks

Two things:

(1) Apparently, DOL did release interesting pay disparity numbers today. See this WSJ piece. I think it would be good to add a line that says, "Yesterday, the US Department of Labor released new data showing that our economy is getting stronger, but that increases in pay for men and women are not growing at the same rate. Men who work full-time saw their pay increase at more than double the rate of women. With more than 2/3rds of our families relying on the income of women to keep their families afloat, this unequal pay growth hurts women, our families and our economy. Equal pay must be a priority if we are going to have a strong economy and strong families."

(2) For the Paul Ryan paragraph, instead of "flexibility," I'd focus that he was asking for a fair and predictable schedule - something that our low-wage workers are desperate to get. So change to:
Paid family leave; schedules that are fair and predictable; higher wages so you don't have to work two jobs to make ends meet, so you can be home at night with your kids – these aren't just challenges for women, they're challenges for America.

While Pat Toomey is "allied with the Wall Streeters"
Toomey "represents the most extreme views"

Subject: 2015 Healthcare Compliance Student Scholarship: Applications due Feb 6

Attachments: 2015 HCCP Scholarship Poster FINAL.pdf

Dear Health Law Colleagues,

First, a quick note of congratulations to our 2014 Healthcare Compliance Certification Program Student Scholarship recipients, who represented their schools admirably:

Srishti Miglani – Saint Louis University School of Law

Yesenia Perez – DePaul University College of Law

Also, please note that the application deadline for the 2015 HEALTHCARE COMPLIANCE CERTIFICATION PROGRAM STUDENT SCHOLARSHIP for JD students is Friday, February 6, 2015. You and/or your law school should have received a poster last fall detailing the eligibility requirements. I have attached a copy of the scholarship rules to this email, and encourage you to circulate it to your most promising health law students.

2015 scholarship applications may be submitted via email to HealthLaw@shu.edu , and you can also contact me at 973-642-8190 with any questions.

Up to two scholarships (each a $2,400 value) will be awarded in 2015 for the Healthcare Compliance Certification Program in Newark, New Jersey, and up to one scholarship ($2,500 value) will be awarded in 2015 for the Life Sciences Compliance Program in California. Scholarship recipients must be able to attend the U.S. Healthcare Compliance Program taking place June 8-11, 2015, at Seton Hall Law School, or the Life Sciences Compliance Program in February/March 2016, as awarded. Please note that travel, transportation, and hotel costs are not included. Please also note that for the Life Sciences Compliance Program award, preference will be given to nominees currently attending law school in the Western United States.

Current JD students who do not receive the scholarship may opt to take the course for two credits (subject to individual school approval).

Dear Strive and Rumi, following-up on our discussions about progressive African elected officials and the needs/opportunities to cultivate an off-the-record network for them with progressive electeds from the US, Europe, Latin America, Asia, etc., I spoke with Matt Browne who runs a network of progressive electeds in Europe/US, and we agreed it might make sense for us all to discuss the idea further. With that in mind, and copying John Podesta, should we try to convene a conference call later this week or next week, to discuss the possibilities and determine if it makes sense to operationalize this idea? It would be useful to get folks' thoughts on how many / who from Africa would be included, where/when an initial networking meeting like this would be most appropriate/beneficial, how it could be framed for Europeans/Americans/Latin Americans, etc. Hope everyone's well rested. Sincerely, Ami

Let's talk over the weekend.

I wanted to weigh in on a policy issue that I have heard (from the women's health advocates) that the WH is considering. I have also heard that after listening to the strong concerns of the advocates, this may not be going forward, but because I am getting all my information third hand (through Planned Parenthood's reports on their conversations with Tina Tchen), I thought worth sending you a quick email.

The groups have been advocating for changing the Helms Amendment to add exceptions for life of the mother, rape or incest (in other words, to clarify that despite the longstanding interpretation of Helms, while US dollars can't be spent for abortion "as a method of family planning" — these cases are not family planning.) The groups heard recently that the WH was prepared to go forward, but with two notable limitations. First, that any organization with a religious or moral objection would not be required to provide, pay for or refer for abortion. Second, that an organization that does not provide abortion services could not be discriminated against in the solicitation, application or granting of foreign assistance funds.

Both of these pose problems, and in my view, leaving Helms intact is a better alternative at the moment. The conscience clause is at best odd and at worst harmful. Changing Helms would not require grantees to provide abortions at all — it would simply say that US funds can legally be spent in certain limited circumstances (life, rape, incest) and only in countries where abortion is legal. Since there is no affirmative requirement, why introduce the notion of a conscience exception? (One fact I don't have, and can't from outside the government figure out, is what if any conscience exceptions currently exist in US foreign assistance internal policy). In addition, the non-discrimination clause could be problematic. Again, there is no affirmative requirement that these services be offered so organizations that don't provide them don't need a leg up in the application process. (I'd even go one step further to argue that if Helms were amended so that abortions could be paid for in cases of rape, that factor should be considered in the application — given the reality that in many parts of the world, the USAID grantee is going to be the only health care available, and in some of those places (e.g., DRC) the availability of abortion in the case of a rape might be important.)

These changes are a problem — as a matter of substance and also as a matter of politics (including for H). As I said, my intelligence suggests that the groups have effectively stopped this from going forward, but I wanted to be sure you are aware. Happy to talk to anyone further about this if it is helpful.

Thanks as always,
Jen

P.S. Would still love your eyes on the No Ceilings policy agenda. If you are willing, perhaps I should send you the most recent version after Friday?

Subject: Where we stand

John --

Early this morning, the Senate made history and health reform cleared its most important hurdle yet -- garnering the 60 votes needed to move toward a final vote in that chamber later this week.

This marks the first time in our nation's history that comprehensive health reform has come to this point. And it appears that the American people will soon realize the genuine reform that offers security to those who have health insurance and affordable options to those who do not.

I'm grateful to Senator Harry Reid and every senator who's been working around the clock to make this happen. And I'm grateful to you, and every member of the Organizing for America community, for all the work you have done to make this progress possible.

After a nearly century-long struggle, we are now on the cusp of making health insurance reform a reality in the United States of America.

As with any legislation, compromise is part of the process. But I'm pleased that recently added provisions have made this landmark bill even stronger. Between the time when the bill passes and the time when the insurance exchanges get up and running, insurance companies that try to jack up their rates do so at their own peril. Those who hike their prices may be barred from selling plans on the exchanges.

And while insurance companies will be prevented from denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing conditions once the exchanges are open, in the meantime there will be a high-risk pool where people with pre-existing conditions can purchase affordable coverage.

A recent amendment has made these protections even stronger. Insurance companies will now be prohibited from denying coverage to children immediately after this bill passes. There's also explicit language in this bill that will protect a patient's choice of doctor. And small businesses will get additional assistance as well.

These protections are in addition to the ones we've been talking about for some time. No longer will insurance companies be able to drop your coverage if you become sick and no longer will you have to pay unlimited amounts out of your own pocket for treatments that you need.

Under this bill families will save on their premiums; businesses that would see their costs rise if we don't act will save money now and in the future. This bill will strengthen Medicare and extend the life of the program. Because it's paid for and gets rid of waste and inefficiency in our health care system, this will be the largest deficit reduction plan in over a decade.

Finally, this reform will extend coverage to more than 30 million Americans who don't have it.

These are not small changes. These are big changes. They're fundamental reforms. They will save money. They will save lives.

And your passion, your work, your organizing helped make all of this possible. Now it's time to finish the job.

Thank you,

President Barack Obama

Today, the United State Supreme Court announced that next term it will hear the case of Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association, which calls into question the right of public sector to collect a "fair share" fee when it bargains for non-union members. These fees ensure that our public sector unions can continue their fight for fair wages and benefits that teachers, nurses, child care workers, EMTs, and so many others deserve who serve our children and our communities day in and day out. These workers deserve to be part of the strong middle class in America and their unions help to make it so. I will be watching this case closely and will be standing firmly united behind our unions in their fight for their right to bargain collectively for the higher wages that reflect the value of their work.

We support crafting a statement. Key is to stay at high level reaffirming her support for protecting workers' right to organize and perhaps stating hope Court will do the same (think she expressed hope SCOTUS would rule in favor of marriage equality while the case was still pending). But we don't want it to look like she's getting ahead of them (e.g., predicting a bad outcome) since they've just taken the case and we don't know the result.

PUBLIC SERVICE WORKERS ON SUPREME COURT GRANT OF CERT IN *FRIEDRICHS V. CTA

Lawsuit Seeks to Curtail Freedom of Firefighters, Teachers, Nurses, First-Responders to Stick Together and Advocate for Better Public Services, Better Communities

Jeopardizes American Promise that Hard Work Leads Families to a Decent Life

WASHINGTON—NEA President Lily Eskelsen García, AFT President Randi Weingarten, CTA President Eric C. Heins, AFSCME President Lee Saunders, and SEIU President Mary Kay Henry issued the following joint statement today in response to U.S. Supreme Court granting cert to Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association:

“We are disappointed that at a time when big corporations and the wealthy few are rewriting the rules in their favor, knocking American families and our entire economy off-balance, the Supreme Court has chosen to take a case that threatens the fundamental promise of America—that if you work hard and play by the rules you should be able to provide for your family and live a decent life.

“The Supreme Court is revisiting decisions that have made it possible for people to stick together for a voice at work and in their communities—decisions that have stood for more than 35 years—and that have allowed people to work together for better public services and vibrant communities.

“When people come together in a union, they can help make sure that our communities have jobs that support our families. It means teachers can stand up for their students. First responders can push for critical equipment to protect us. And social workers can advocate effectively for children’s safety.

“America can’t build a strong future if people can’t come together to improve their work and their families’ futures. Moms and dads across the country have been standing up in the thousands to call for higher wages and unions. We hope the Supreme Court heeds their voices.”

And public servants are speaking out, too, about how Friedrichs v. CTA would undermine their ability to provide vital services the public depends on. In their own words:

“As a school campus monitor, my job is to be on the front lines to make sure our students are safe. Both parents and students count on me—it’s a responsibility that I take very seriously. It’s important for me to have the right to voice concerns over anything that might impede the safety of my students, and jeopardizing my ability to speak up for them is a risk for everyone.”

—Carol Peek, a school campus security guard from Ventura, Calif.

“I love my students, and I want them to have everything they need to get a high-quality public education. When educators come together, we can speak with the district about class size, about adequate staffing, about the need for counselors, nurses, media specialists and librarians in schools. And we can advocate for better practices that serve our kids. With that collective voice, we can have conversations with the district that we probably wouldn’t be able to have otherwise—and do it while engaging our communities, our parents and our students.”

—Kimberly Colbert, a classroom teacher from St. Paul, Minn.

“As a mental health worker, my colleagues and I see clients who are getting younger and more physical. Every day we do our best work to serve them and keep them safe, but the risk of injury and attack is a sad, scary reality of the job. But if my coworkers and I come together and have a collective voice on the job, we can advocate for better patient care, better training and equipment, and safe staffing levels. This is about all of us. We all deserve safety and dignity on the job, because we work incredibly hard every day and it’s certainly not glamorous.”

—Kelly Druskis-Abreu, a mental health worker from Worcester, Mass.

“Our number one job is to protect at-risk children. Working together, front-line social workers and investigators have raised standards and improved policies that keep kids safe from abuse and neglect. I can’t understand why the Supreme Court would consider a case that could make it harder for us to advocate for the children and families we serve—this work is just too important.”

—Ethel Everett, a child protection worker from Springfield, Mass.

Subject: A historic moment

John --

Although it's Christmas Eve, I wanted to share some exciting news: The Senate just passed a historic health reform bill.

In all the back and forth, it's easy to lose sight of what this incredible breakthrough really means. But consider this: This Christmas, there are millions of Americans without health insurance who risk losing everything if they get sick.

There are mothers and fathers who wonder how they'll provide for their children because an illness has wiped out their savings. There are small business owners who worry that they'll have to lay off a long-time employee because the cost of insurance is rapidly rising.

If we finish the job, all this can change. We will have beaten back the special interests who have for so long perpetuated the status quo. We will have enacted the most important piece of social policy since the Social Security Act in the 1930s, and the most important health reform since Medicare in the 1960s.

In Decembers to come, millions more will have access to affordable coverage. Parents will have the security and stability of knowing their insurance can't be revoked at a moment's notice. And the skyrocketing costs plaguing our small businesses will be brought under control.

When you make calls, write letters, organize, this is the change you're making -- a better life for your family and for men and women in every state.

There is still more to do before I can sign reform into law -- a last round of negotiations and final votes in the Senate and the House -- and I'm counting on your help every step of the way. But for now, I hope that as you celebrate this holiday season, you remember that the work you are doing is making our union more perfect, one step at a time. For that, I am grateful to you.

Merry Christmas and happy holidays,

President Barack Obama

P.S. -- Organizing for America supporters are signing a note of appreciation to all the senators who have worked so hard to make this possible. I hope you'll join them:

Dear Representative:

On behalf of the 3.2 million members of the National Education Association (NEA), we urge you to VOTE NO on H. Con. Res 34 – the FY12 Budget Resolution – scheduled for floor consideration this week. By choosing Wall Street over Main Street, this budget will result in more joblessness for the middle class and more tax breaks for the wealthiest in our country. In fact, according to the Economic Policy Institute, the proposed budget would result in roughly 900,000 jobs lost in 2012 and roughly 1.3 million jobs lost in 2013 -- in an economy already 11 million jobs short of reaching pre-recession unemployment rates. The middle class continues to struggle to find work, pay more for health care, and worry about their children's education and future. Seniors continue to worry about their retirement security. Yet, this budget proposal provides rhetoric rather than solutions.

Attached for your information are several charts comparing the cost of tax cuts for the wealthiest ($1 trillion over ten years) with that of providing Title I ($476 billion to fully fund Part A), special education ($306 billion to meet the federal governments promised level), and Pell Grants ($544 million to increase the maximum award by $400 a year) to those in need.

The proposed budget leaves struggling middle class families to fend for themselves. We urge you to:

Oppose this budget proposal

Support the Democratic alternative budget.

Votes associated with this issue may be included in NEA's Legislative Report Card for the 112th Congress.

Educators understand that Congress must work to ensure America's long-term economic prosperity. And, we recognize that we must address the nation's serious fiscal challenges. However, we do not believe that cutting education funding and slashing programs that serve children, the elderly, and working families is the answer. The sad truth is that this budget proposal is not for the children, the working families, or the seniors. It is for the wealthy. It is a reflection of dangerous choices that threaten our future by devastating whole segments of the population while catering to those least in need of attention and support.

The gap in income growth between the richest and the poorest American families is staggering. According to the Economic Policy Institute, between 1979 and 2005, households at the bottom fifth of the income scale have seen an average, inflation-adjusted income growth of just $200. Importantly, that does not represent an average annual increase in income of $200, but rather, an increase of $200 over the entire 26-year period. By contrast, a small number of households at the top 0.1% of the income scale saw average income growth of almost $6 million over that same period. This budget proposal will only exacerbate this unacceptable imbalance.

It is unconscionable to expect children, the elderly, the poor, and the disabled to bear the brunt of the pain while sparing the wealthy corporations and greedy CEOs. The single largest contributing factor to the deficit is the tax cuts enacted under the last administration and renewed in 2010. It cost our nation $700 billion to extend the tax cuts for single filers earning over $200,000 a year and joint filers earning over $250,000. CBO numbers show that by the end of this decade well over half of the deficit will have resulted from these tax cuts, and this share will continue to grow after that.

The increasing erosion of the corporate tax base has brought us to the point today where, measured by either corporate taxes as a percentage of GDP or corporate taxes as a percentage of overall tax revenues, the US ranks substantially below other OECD nations. As many as two out of three US corporations paid zero in federal income taxes over much of the previous decade, according to the GAO. The share of federal revenues coming from corporate taxes has shrunk by two-thirds in the last fifty years. This is seriously undermining our ability to make the necessary investments in education that are sorely needed in order to return our nation to prosperity. We should be looking for ways to increase revenue responsibly and to close tax loopholes that do nothing to strengthen our economy.

For example:

We could raise an estimated $200 billion in annual additional revenues by ending or reducing the practice of "deferral" that allows corporations to set up mailboxes overseas and to shelter profits.

We could increase revenue by ending the "carried-interest loophole" that allows hedge fund managers to be taxed at the 15 percent capital gains rate rather than their marginal income tax rate.

Investing in education should be a top priority for the budget resolution. Yet, the proposed budget all but ignores proven education programs, and focuses instead on slashing critical student financial aid and funneling taxpayer dollars to private schools. This is shortsighted policy that will jeopardize our students' future and the future strength of our nation. Investing in education makes both good fiscal sense and good public policy. In addition to widespread productivity increases, the higher earnings of educated workers generate higher tax payments at the local, state, and federal levels. Consistent productive employment reduces dependence on public income-transfer programs and all workers, regardless of education level, earn more when there are more college graduates in the labor force. (Education Pays, The College Board, 2007).

We strongly oppose provisions in the budget proposal that would undermine efforts to improve education, as well as those that would harm those who can least afford cuts to the programs on which they rely. Specifically, we oppose:

Cutting non-security discretionary spending below 08 levels and freezing it at that level for five years. The bulk of the 10-year deficit reduction comes from cutting non-security discretionary spending – a devastating blow to children, working families, and our most vulnerable populations. In fact, function 500 (Education and Training) is cut by $17.7 billion or more than 18 percent in FY12 and by $250 billion over 10 years. Our nation's economic strength and future success depend on our ability to innovate, educate, and compete in the global marketplace. Failing to invest when investment is called for is a plan for permanent austerity, not long-term success.

Dismantling health care for children, the poor, disabled, and elderly by turning Medicaid into a block grant program. The block grant proposal would cost states and the federal government more money due to cut backs and limits on health care services for Medicaid beneficiaries. It is clear that the proposed changes to Medicaid would put additional pressures on stretched state budgets and would, therefore, have a direct, negative impact on the resources available for students and schools. Heritage Foundation analysis forecasts reductions in federal Medicaid grants to state and local governments of $966 trillion over ten years, and additional cuts in aid to state and local governments of twice that amount – another $1.85 trillion over ten years. This combined revenue loss of $2.8 trillion will put in extreme jeopardy state and local governments' ability to provide education, health and all services their citizens demand and depend.

We are also deeply concerned about the impact of this proposal on the students in our schools. Of the 68 million people covered by Medicaid in 2010, half are children under the age of 19, whose families depend on Medicaid for health care coverage. One-third of all children in this country are served by Medicaid. Children who lack access to health care services are less likely to come to school healthy and ready to learn and to succeed academically.

Cutting Pell Grants. Maintaining and increasing Pell Grant awards is critical to ensuring access to higher education. Cutting Pell Grants is not the answer to balancing the budget. It simply restricts access to the higher education so essential for success in today’s economy. Without the federal commitment to student financial aid, there will not be enough educated, skilled Americans to sustain economic recovery or secure our nation's future for the next generation.

Extending the District of Columbia Voucher Program. It is wrong to funnel millions of taxpayer dollars to private schools while cutting programs that help millions of students in public schools. The DC program has yielded no evidence of positive academic impact on the students the program was designed to assist – those attending schools been designated as needing improvement. The program also has been proven to have no impact on achievement in mathematics, no impact on male students, no impact on students entering the program in the second year of its existence, and no impact on those students who scored in the lower third of baseline reading tests; i.e., those most in need of assistance. (The Evaluation of the DC Opportunity Scholarship Program: Impacts After Three Years, <http://ies.ed.gov/ncee/pubs/20094050>).

Vouchers are not real education reform. Pulling 1,200 children out of a system that serves 65,000 doesn’t solve problems – it ignores them. Our focus should be on strategies proven to increase student achievement, such as increasing parental involvement, strengthening teacher training, and reducing class size. And, our goal should be to prepare all students for the jobs of the future, not to allow a few students and parents to choose a private school at taxpayer expense.

Converting Medicare into a voucher system. Contrary to the rhetoric surrounding this proposal, beneficiaries would likely find that their voucher would not allow them to purchase a package of benefits comparable to that which Medicare now provides, since traditional Medicare generally pays less to providers and incurs lower administrative expenses than private insurance. In addition, insurers would be allowed to charge older and sicker Medicare beneficiaries higher premiums and would surely attempt to reject enrollees in poor health (who cost much more), as private plans do today in the Medicare Advantage program.

The Democratic alternative offers a different vision for our nation. While freezing non-defense discretionary spending for five years, it will allow for growth in funding for education, research, and innovation, reflecting their importance in promoting job growth. The Democratic alternative will also sustain the maximum Pell grant award at $5,550. And, it will protect Medicaid and Medicare.

Chairman Ryan’s budget places the burden for addressing the nation’s financial crisis squarely on the shoulders of the middle class and the poor. It runs completely counter to our values as a nation, by failing to take care of those most in need while sparing those at higher income levels. It asks children, working families, elderly, and disabled populations to make greater sacrifices than others. It is time for Congress to stand up and decide what sort of nation we want to be. Are we a nation that sacrifices our children to pay for the excesses of Wall Street? Or, are we a nation that recognizes that investments in the middle class and those who are vulnerable lift us all up and strengthen us as a country?

We urge you to stand up for those whose voices are too often ignored by VOTING NO on this ill-conceived proposal.

Sincerely,

Kim Anderson

Surrogate Talking Points for Vanity Fair

Toplines

- Vanity Fair is no stranger to provocative, hyperbolic stories, and this is no exception.
- Among the many claims peddled in this story, the recycled claims about someone's faith are outrageous, claims that everyone from John McCain to Marco Rubio have denounced as nonsense.
- It would seem that Vanity Fair has joined the ranks of Donald Trump and Michelle Bachman to slander not a candidate or public official, but a longtime staffer known for her hard work and government service, to sell magazines.
- Huma Abedin, to everyone that knows her, couldn't be more different from the picture painted by those who attack her for partisan gain. She is smart, she's humble, she's graceful, and she works as hard as anyone in politics or government service, where she's spent her entire career. She's exactly the kind of person you want working in government. Which is what makes going after her for things like her maternity leave and her faith all the more reprehensible.

Follow Ups

Grassley Investigations

- Senator Grassley and his staff have made it pretty clear what they are up to. For months they have been making unfounded, irresponsible assertions about Huma's government service while at the Department of State. Their interest only grows the deeper we find ourselves into election season. Not a coincidence, and disappointing that Vanity Fair seems to have bought into it hook, line, and sinker.
- This is someone who has spent nearly two decades in public service, and is widely known for her integrity and tireless work ethic. After the birth of her son, she took maternity leave. The IGs questions about the details of her leave were thoroughly answered. Anything beyond that is the product of partisan leaks with a clear agenda.
- So while this isn't surprising, it is disappointing.

Muslim Brotherhood Accusations

- To perpetuate baseless accusations about someone's faith to sell magazines is reprehensible, and frankly surprising coming from Vanity Fair. For fringe partisans to make these claims is bad enough. But years later, after being denounced by everyone from John McCain to Marco Rubio, for a magazine to pick up and give column inches to this nonsense is as irresponsible as it is baseless.

Personal Life

- Huma's personal life is just that, her personal life. She is a wonderful mother which she balances with a very impressive career. I don't know how she does it all, but she does, with grace and humility.

Role in Hillaryland

- Huma has worked for Hillary Clinton for a long time, and there are a few good reasons for that. She smart, she's humble, and she's multi-faceted. She balances an enormous amount and makes it look easy, which is how she's gone from an assistant to being a part of the senior command of a presidential campaign. She's a valued member of the team, which is why it's all the more upsetting to see people try and get to Hillary by going after her with their partisan agendas.

Subject: Proposed Agenda for Tomorrow's Debate Prep

Karen and I talked, and here is what we would like to propose for tomorrow's session:

AGENDA

Debate Prep – Wednesday January 13

1:00 – 1:30 Discussion of new memo with top contrast points – focusing on key positive and contrast messages for the debate

1:30 – 2:30 "Political" Q & A (Polls, state of the race, emails, trust, etc.)

2:30 – 3:00 Race-related Q & A (Criminal justice, state of black America, poverty, etc.)

3:00 – 4:00 Domestic Q & A (Taxes, plan, health care, social security, economy, etc.)

We would propose to end at 4pm, and then have a small group (the folks on this email, plus Mandy, but probably no one else) go back over with her to her house (for 4-5pm) to:

1. Review the sensitive WJC related questions
2. Wrap up where we stand and how she feels about the political questions and any strategic issues.

The goal would to be in a place where we can mock on Thursday in NYC.

Let us know what you think.

Ron and Karen

Should you have any questions or concerns please let me know.

Best,

The base has a perimeter trail run that comes right around 5k. I went out today at 430 pm when the temperature was reported at 109. Surprisingly, the heat wasn't too bad--the gale-force winds are what make it so hard. I think I may stick to the evenings when the temperature drops to the 90s and the wind dies down.

Team HRC

Attached you will find a new draft of the policy poll. I appreciate the feedback on the call. Since that call Joel, Robby and I (and our teams) have worked hard to restructure the Policy Poll. You will see a different feel, flow and structure to it. We are really concentrating on core family/small business economic issues and the interplay between the framing and policy needs. We have also stripped some specific policy series on education and taxes that we will get to in future policy polls. Don't worry, we still have those issues in the poll but we just don't drill down as much.

So kick the tires on this draft and please email me, jeff and matt your comments and suggestions. We are sending a Word doc if you would like to use track changes or if not just send an email with your comments. We are reviewing the poll draft with HRC on Thursday so please get us comments by tomorrow at noon. Give it a couple of good reads.

Thanks for all your help.

John --

I want to thank you for all you're doing for this campaign.

If we get to continue this work, it's going to be because of you.

Next week I'm meeting up with President Clinton on the campaign trail, and we both want to thank you in person.

Donate \$5 or whatever you can today to be automatically entered to fly out to join us.

This Sunday is the biggest fundraising deadline of this campaign so far.

There's no billionaire donor or lobbyist waiting around to write a $10 million check.

How you respond right now determines if we move into the final stretch of this election with the resources we need, ready to close this out, or if we're struggling to keep up with the other side.

And that's the way it's been from the beginning.

If we had listened to the pundits and the critics and the powers that be inside Washington whenever they tried to stand in our way, we would have given up a long time ago.

You've played a valuable role in moving this campaign forward -- now, I hope you'll help make sure we finish September stronger than we've ever been. Donate $5 or whatever you can today:

<https://donate.barackobama.com/Meet-Us-on-the-Trail>

Thanks,

Barack

P.S. -- If there's one person who knows how hard we need to fight in these final weeks, it's President Clinton. I'm grateful he'll be joining me on the trail. You should be there, too.

Subject: Getting results

Dear John,

For more than three decades, POGO has played a vital role in achieving a more effective, accountable, open, and ethical federal government. This year was no exception. As 2015 draws to a close, I want to share with you a few of our successful investigations this year:

- Revealing mass misconduct by federal prosecutors: We discovered that hundreds of federal prosecutors and other Department of Justice employees violated rules, laws, and ethical standards from 2002-13.
- Playing a major role in the introduction of the VA Patient Protection Act of 2015: Based on our testimony, Senators Mark Kirk (R-IL) and Richard Blumenthal (D-CT) introduced a bipartisan bill that would improve how whistleblower complaints at the VA are addressed, and perhaps more importantly, how those who retaliate against VA whistleblowers are punished.
- Removing people who abused power and thwarting a flawed nominee: As a result of POGO investigations, there were consequences for people who failed to effectively serve taxpayers:
  - Air Force General James Post was removed from command for accusing A-10 whistleblowers of committing "treason";
  - Ineffective Inspectors General at Commerce, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Veterans Affairs resigned; and
  - The White House withdrew the nomination of Wall Street banker Antonio Weiss for the third most powerful position at the Treasury Department after POGO discovered a $21 million payout.
- Holding the Air Force's feet to the fire on its skewed weapons systems priorities: We continued to expose significant deficiencies in the $1.4 trillion F-35 program—the most expensive acquisition program in the Pentagon's history and one of the most egregious cases of government waste—and worked with Congress to defeat the Air Force's attempt to retire the A-10.
- Raising questions about the quality of FDA oversight: One day after POGO reported on problems with the FDA's handling of the blood thinner Pradaxa, including approving the drug in the absence of an antidote that could stop patients from bleeding uncontrollably, the FDA approved an antidote and declared it "medically necessary"; later, the FDA said it was reviewing the matter, and the FDA's European counterpart said it was investigating whether the trial was compromised; and because of POGO's work on a similar blood thinner, Xarelto, The New York Times cited POGO in an editorial questioning President Obama's nominee to lead the FDA because of his role in helping oversee that trial.

Your support gives us the ability to take on investigations like these to expose government corruption and waste. We look forward to continuing the work in 2016 and beyond.

Support POGO

Will you join us in building a better government?

10/18/2016

Warmly,

Danielle Brian

Subject: Re: VA Q&A

In addition to the Q&A Laura sent, here's what she said in her topper at the Nevada vets event in late June:

Later as a Senator on the Armed Services Committee, I worked very hard to help our vets and our military families in the era of Iraq and Afghanistan, working especially on traumatic brain injury, predatory lending, expanding healthcare to National Guard and reserves, and much else.

So I'm looking to see where we are today in our minds, what you see happening. So I want to ask you, and when sit down, what will it take to transform the VA to make it work for our veterans today and in the future? What happened in Phoenix and elsewhere is absolutely unacceptable, period. And we need to know from the vets what will fix the problems that we have on -- (cheers/applause).

And I don't care where you live, no vet should have to wait in line for weeks or months to get the care you earned with your service. (Cheers/applause.) Not in cities like Reno, or Las Vegas, not in small towns, not in Indian country, our priority should be transforming the VA so that it serves all our veterans and gives them access to state of the art care, whether it's for cancer or prosthetics or mental health.

We have learned that privatization and outsourcing is not a magic solution for anything, let alone when it comes to the unique obligations we have to our vets. So I do oppose blanket privatization proposals because sometimes it seems as though the people pushing them don't understand the needs of vets. But I do believe choice should be part of the solution. And if we let the VA work more with communities while preserving what it does best, serving veterans and their unique needs, perhaps we can get better care faster to more vets.

We also have to make sure that the VA is equipped to serve the needs of an increasing diverse community, including women like you. (Cheers/applause.) And it wasn't a problem when my father was in the Navy and now we need to deal with our vets who they are, every person who is willing to sign up to serve America. And because it's so important to this generation of veterans we have to expand and strengthen access to the VA's world class expertise on PTSD and traumatic brain injury, and prosthetics.

Most of private medicine does not have the expertise in those three areas. I'm very proud of the pioneering work that our military and VA medical experts have done, but it's not reaching enough people and it's not as available as it should be for everyone who needs it. And let's make sure that veterans, especially our younger veterans, have access to mental health services. The number of veterans of all ages who commit suicide every year is heartbreaking.

Now I am really encouraged that this was the focus of one of the few real bipartisan pieces of legislation passed by Congress. But, that's just the start of what has to be a major ongoing effort that involves not just the VA but entire communities. I have to tell you that part of what I've learned in my campaign so far is how important two issues are and it's not just about vets, it's about everybody, but today I'm focused on vets, substance abuse and untreated mental health problems. (Applause.)

I believe it is way past time that we understand mental health issues are medical issues. (Cheers/applause.) And we have to start treating that as we treat bodily problems, because after all that is what we are learning from genetics and research they are. When something happens to you in a traumatic situation that manifests itself in the way your body works and responds and the way you emotionally and psychologically respond. There should be no stigma to getting help. (Applause.) And I think the more we can say that to everyone the faster we will get more help to everyone.

Is this along the lines of what you're looking for? Can search for more if need be

What would you do as President to fix the VA?

- We have an obligation to support our veterans when they come home, especially those who need health care for physical or mental health conditions that relate to their service.
- The VA provides great care to veterans – and it has unique, world-class expertise in crucial areas like PTSD and TBI – but only once you get through the door. We need to do a much better job of making sure every veteran has access to timely, quality care. And we need accountability when we fail to deliver that.
- The GOP candidates have talked a lot about how they would privatize the VA. Privatization is not the answer. Quality care for our veterans is the answer.

As part of that effort, should we give our veterans more choice – through an expanded voucher program or otherwise – about where they get treatment?

- Choice should be part of the solution, if it helps the VA work more with communities while preserving what it does best, continuing to develop unique expertise in areas like veterans' mental health, and getting better care faster to more vets.
- But choice does not mean privatization or outsourcing, which are not a magic solution for anything, let alone when it comes to the unique obligation we have to our veterans. Privatization proposals that would chop up the VA, like the ones we're hearing from Republican candidates, would not be good for our veterans or their families.

Can the VA – or any federal agency – run a health care system? Wouldn't this be better left to the private sector to do? Why can't the VA just buy veterans a health insurance card and let them go see their doctor?

- Government has an important role to play in health care for veterans.
- The VA serves many of these roles as health care provider, innovator on things like the electronic health record, training grounds for the nation's doctors and nurses, and sponsor of research on diseases such as PTSD and prosthetics care.
- Outsourcing veterans care to the private sector will not solve the problems of access or quality; the private sector struggles with those issues too. We must instead build a better system of care for veterans that integrates community resources, VA resources, and private sector resources, to provide timely care to veterans where they live, and gives them the best outcomes possible.

Thanks Chelsea. We are just in Beijing. Mattie and I became friends when she was at Georgetown and then she worked at CAP. I thought I saw her at your Grandmother's service, but didn't get to say hi. I'll ck to see if she might just happen to be in Beijing next week.

alternatively

Saturday - skip the Vegas Labor /canvass launch, take earlier flight to Reno, Bobzien is available from 12pm - we move up the clean energy event ?

We have just confirmed that we're asking WJC to be in NV on Sunday.

On Wed, Feb 10, 2016 at 9:00 PM, Milia Fisher <mfisher@hillaryclinton.com> wrote:

John- The NV team is 99% positive that they would like YOU to do the two labor kickoff events Saturday morning in Vegas in place of HRC (they're still figuring out what exactly HRC is going to do instead).

On Saturday afternoon they have a request in for YOU to do a clean energy event in Reno with Reno City Councilman David Bobzien, one of the leading conservationists/energy advocates in the state. Full details on that event below from Michelle White.

I did not want to confirm the Bobzien clean energy event without your approval because I know you are trying to get to Truckee at a reasonable hour.

Schedule outline below. Let me know your thoughts.

Briefings-- They are not yet finished but Michelle is going to power through them tonight. Since you don't have to leave until later tomorrow morning (flight departing HPN at 12:00 pm) do you think that I could bring you the binder in the early AM? I'm worried that it won't be finished until after you're asleep tonight.

Speaking-- We will have to work on remarks for these events as well. Once I have the full details on format, audience, etc. I will work on those with Nikki, Michelle, and KLC/the climate team tomorrow.

BACKGROUND ON BOBZIEN EVENT:

Reno City Councilman David Bobzien is available to do an event with JP after 12p on Saturday. He is a HUGEEEE JP fan and one of the leading conservationists/energy advocates in the state.

We got word that Bernie will be in Reno on Saturday as well and he plans on sitting down with solar workers who lost their jobs due to the net-metering decision in NV (it's really, really wonky). Bernie's event is not yet public, and I think we have a chance to get ahead of him on this, without diving too deep into a very wonky, complicated state issue.

Bobzien suggested that since our campaign probably doesn't want to get too in the weeds of this very specific state issue anyways, we could make it a meeting about energy and conservation in general, and focus on things like the recent SCOTUS decision to temporarily block Obama's effort to combat climate change by regulating emissions from coal-fired power plants. Other topics will include how to create a grid for the 21st century. He is also willing to discuss public land conservation if we want to.

He said even if we make it a more of a general meeting about energy, we all know that the net-metering issue will come up and can all be prepared and probably still get some attention for it.

I think this is a great opportunity to sway some people in the north to Hillary, get some positive coverage, and get ahead of the solar/clean energy issue before Bernie.

For background: Bobzien has not been too out front on the net-metering issue in NV. He thinks what NV Energy and the PUC is doing is wrong, but needs to be cautious in how he approaches it. He said he is very capable of navigating the issue if it comes up and typically sticks to the talking points that we need to do what we can as a state to move towards a clean energy 21st century. He is incredible on these issues and we don't feel any hesitation.

Draft Medium Post on Iowa

There's been even more bluster than usual from the Sanders campaign, this time in an effort to disqualify Hillary Clinton's historic victory in Monday night's Iowa caucus.

Disparaging good news for Hillary Clinton has become a pattern for the Sanders camp. If you support someone else? You're dismissed as part of the "establishment," unless of course they want to claim your support in ads anyways. If a process doesn't go their way? It's invalid or flawed or they blame the Iowans who ran it.

In Iowa, the Sanders camp started floating conspiracy theories leading up to the caucus. First, it was two weeks ago when they posited that Microsoft might steal the caucus from them. Now that the caucus is over, they are calling into question the results that were reported by everyday Iowans.

Hillary Clinton won the Iowa caucus with incredibly high turnout - a level of turnout the Sanders camp claimed would earn them a win. It was a close contest and a hard fought campaign. But Hillary won. And once it became apparent that they had lost, the Bernie Sanders campaign began to peddle frivolous claims that have been disproven in an effort to poison an otherwise historic night for Hillary Clinton, our supporters, and volunteers.

Remember coin flip-gate where people claimed Hillary won all the coin tosses? Turns out that wasn't true. In fact, according to the official count, Sen. Sanders won more coin tosses than Hillary Clinton.

Or how about the "90 precincts" with no chairs? Also untrue. Certainly there were precincts that took a while to report but once they all did, it was clear Hillary had won.

Now the Sanders campaign is disputing the reported results that were sent in by everyday Iowans - volunteers, no less! - to the Democratic Party. All three campaigns have checked the results of certain precincts against their own data reported to them from volunteers. That's normal. For the Sanders campaign's challenges, there are 7 total precincts they are questioning (out of a whopping total 1,681 precincts!) and the Iowa Democratic Party is checking the results on a few more. And they will follow the same standard procedure for these questions as they did for precincts we asked them to look at - they'll look at the numbers reported that night, check the math and figure out if there are any discrepancies or misallocation of delegates.

Here's the kicker. Even if the Sanders campaign were to win all of their challenges - the marginal bump they receive in support would not be enough to overcome Hillary Clinton's win margin. Those are just the facts.

Here's the math.

Total Precincts in Contest: 11 (7 from Sanders and 4 from the Iowa Democratic Party)

Total State Delegates being Contested: 1.7947 (not enough to change outcome)

If every contest were to go in the favor of Sanders:

HRC = -.775

Sanders = +.758
MOM = +.0166

It may be inconvenient for the Sanders campaign that Hillary Clinton won the Iowa caucus, but it's the truth. Eight years ago Hillary came in third here in Iowa and when she did, she congratulated the winner. We suggest Senator Sanders do the same.

Subject: response to deparle

John—We've been working to figure out how best to respond to the DeParle article. Hoping Galston will do something in TNR, and Kamarck will do a LTE. Planning an event on poverty, and maybe one on domestic policy. But I whipped up the oped below as something someone could use as a starting point if they wanted to refute. Would be great to get your thoughts, suggestions on whether the below is helpful, and advice on how to approach.

Best,
Marc

Two stories emerged from the world of social policy last week—one big, and the other seemingly small. The big story was a new look at the welfare reform bill of 1996, and a broad suggestion that the changes made 16 years ago have not served the nation's poor since the Great Recession began. Second, to relatively less fanfare, the Centers for Disease Control announced that the American teen birthrate has fallen to an historic low—dropping from a recent peak in the early 1990s.

The two stories may appear unrelated—but they're not. And maybe more important, together they offer an interesting lesson on how policy is reinterpreted through the prism of ideology in Washington today.

First, we need to recall the oft-forgotten paradigm shift that marked the 1990s. When Governor Bill Clinton pledged to “end welfare as we know it” during the 1992 campaign, he was at the vanguard of a movement to adapt a series of creaky New Deal-era programs to the challenges of the information-age economy. At its creation in 1935, the nation's primary cash assistance program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), had hoped to keep single mothers from joining the workforce, engineering a way to keep them home with their kids. By the 1990s, however, conventional wisdom was that the program had created a series of perverse incentives, and that a cycle of dependency was preventing young adults from reaching their potential. Rather than breaking the cycle of poverty, welfare seemed to be perpetuating it—and the new challenge was to help every able-bodied American find an opportunity to earn a living.

With that as its challenges, the Clinton administration began a long-term effort to strengthen the nation's social safety net—not simply by reforming AFDC, but by expanding opportunity for those in need up a hand up. It began in 1993 with a dramatic expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit—a program that rewards individuals who join the workforce with additional income. It continued with the welfare bill, which aimed to end the cycle of dependency, expand vastly support for child care, and give states much more flexibility in providing support. It continued through the unprecedented expansion of health insurance for children (the S-CHIP program), marking the single largest investment in children's health care since 1965. And the same paradigm drove dozens of other efforts, from the expansion of the Hope Scholarship, to the Vice President's efforts to expand access to the Internet, from the Welfare-to-Work Tax Credit and Welfare-to-Work Partnership to the broader economic strategy which created nearly 23 million new jobs.

What cannot be disputed, of course, are the broad effects of the Clinton's administration's effort to lift Americans out of poverty. Over the course of his tenure, the poverty rate in the United States dropped 25 percent. African-Americans, for one, saw poverty drop to a record low. A Congressional Budget Office report recently detailed how economic growth and the expansion of the EITC vastly overwhelmed the fiscal impact of reforming AFDC.

Which brings us back to the recent news about teen pregnancy. Few circumstances prolong the cycle of poverty than the birth of a baby born to a teenager. But the National Campaign to Prevent Teen and Unplanned Pregnancy, a public-private partnership President Clinton helped to found, has been successful in large part because its efforts have been integrated into a comprehensive strategy to integrate low income communities with the economic opportunities of the 21st century.

A host of other policy decisions need to be considered in any analysis of the welfare bill: the fact that many who would have been eligible for AFDC during the Great Recession were instead eligible for unemployment; that others were eligible for disability benefits; that the food stamp program has continued to grow; or that, had Al Gore succeeded President Clinton, the nation's social safety net would have continued to evolve in ways likely more beneficial to the poor than they did under George W. Bush.

But what is most clear today is that the welfare reform bill of 1996 cannot be judged in a vacuum. It needs to be understood as part of a much broader—and very successful—strategy to combat poverty throughout the United States. That the Clinton administration managed to end welfare as we knew it marks one of the great successes of the progressive movement. And as policymakers craft efforts, once again, to reform the nation's social safety net at a time of growing inequality, we ought to keep the proper lessons from that historic success in mind.

Subject: The attacks on women's health are just beginning...

John,

Cecile Richards, the courageous leader of Planned Parenthood, testified before Congress today. Ms. Richards took the stand to defend the rights of all women in this country to make their own healthcare decisions and have access to essential health services. At this moment, it is important for us to remember just how depraved and out of touch the extreme right wing agenda fueling this attack on Planned Parenthood is.

House and Senate Republicans are all too eager to endlessly wage their war on women's rights while hiding behind their warped pseudo-morality. As they bemoan the loss of life due to abortions out of one side of their mouths, they scream for the slashing of crucial social programs that provide security and opportunity for our children out of the other. These hypocrites think that a politician knows what is better for a woman's health than her and her own doctor and they will stop at nothing until these crucial services are shutdown entirely — a feat they've essentially already accomplished in a number of states.

They claim to love and support women, but are also the party whose members actually say and believe there is a such thing as "legitimate rape" and that "some girls rape easy." Republicans speak endlessly of "family values" — yet strip funding to assistance programs and refuse to support paid medical and family leave. We're sorry, but forcing a teenage incest victim to bear her father's child or requiring them to drive hundreds of miles to another state to visit a reproductive health clinic are NOT "family values" in our view.

This recent assault is just the tip of the iceberg and we are certain the vitriol from our opponents on the right will not only continue, but increase. It is time to stand up, fight back, and retake control of this important discussion. That's why we launched our newest online ad, "The Chosen," aimed at highlighting the important concept of a woman's choice in this debate. We hope to start a conversation about the importance of defending this right for all women in this country.

Hispanic Media Clips

Monday, November 26, 2007

Electability - Hillary Rodham Clinton says she's the best candidate to win the presidency against Republicans. Speaking in Iowa yesterday, she argued she has more experience battling the GOP than any other candidate in the Democratic field, reports Terra.com and Hispanidad in the Spanish language version of an AP article.

Iraq - Due to the fact that violence has decreased in Baghdad, the leading Democratic presidential candidates are adopting a new attitude towards Iraq: recognize that there has been some success in that regard, reports El Nuevo Herald in the Spanish language version of an AFP article. It mentions that the advisors of both Senator Clinton and Obama have agreed that security conditions have improved since more troops were shipped to Iraq. Yet, the article adds that, advances made in Iraq have not shifted the candidates' position - they are still committed to bringing the troops back home.

Immigration - Maribel Hastings writes a story on immigration published by both El Diario La Prensa (NY) and La Opinion (both outlets part of the Impremedia group), on how even though it's not a "priority issue" for voters, the issue has become one of the most dangerous political subjects for the presidential candidates. She mentions how some Republicans like Rudy Giuliani have changed their position, while others are just flat out anti-immigrant like Tom Tancredo, and how Democrats like Senator Clinton have been accused of shifting their positions.

Healthcare - Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger said that in order for universal healthcare to work people are going to have to start approaching it in the same way they do with car insurance, reports La Opinion. It mentions that the idea of universal healthcare does well in the polls, and that Democratic candidates Hillary Clinton and John Edwards are both driving as one of the central issues for their campaigns. The story mentions that Governor Schwarzenegger's plan is the most ambitious healthcare plan since HRC's in the 1990's.

Obama - El Diario La Prensa (NY) picks up a short note on Senator Obama's visit to New York this Thursday, for a fundraising event in the Apollo theatre in Harlem - "only block away from WJC's office", adds the story.

McCain would tackle big budget problems: aide

Fri Mar 7, 2008 3:28pm EST

By Caren Bohan

CHICAGO (Reuters) - Republican presidential candidate John McCain is committed to tackling the problem of mandatory social spending for the nation's elderly and poor and is well aware that just paring wasteful items from the U.S. budget will not solve fiscal ills, a top aide told Reuters.

The Arizona senator has long railed against special-project spending known as "earmarks" and has made his vow to eliminate them a top economic theme.

Critics say cutting such spending would not even come close to solving budget deficits that private economists worry will balloon as the huge baby boom generation retires.

Douglas Holtz-Eakin, McCain's top economic adviser, said in an interview billions could be saved by cutting budgetary fat but that was not a cure-all. Even with a leaner discretionary budget, he said, "there would still be pressure on spending" because of the future costs of the Social Security retirement plan and Medicare and Medicaid health programs.

U.S. politicians widely agree the looming entitlement crunch must be addressed but proposed remedies often become lightning rods for controversy, as President George W. Bush found out when his failed plan to overhaul Social Security became ammunition for Democrats in congressional elections.

Holtz-Eakin said if McCain fulfilled a pledge to bring more discipline to other areas of the budget, he would acquire the clout needed to address entitlement spending.

"Unless you clean up the culture and make it clear to the American people that you are doing things in the national interest, you're are not going to have the moral authority to take on the more challenging issues," Holtz-Eakin told Reuters.

"We're going to get a thorough scrub of the budget," Holtz-Eakin said, adding that McCain would then turn his attention to reining in Social Security's future growth and overhauling Pentagon contracting practices that lead to overspending.

TANKER FIGHT

McCain's efforts to revamp Pentagon procurement practices by torpedoing the recent Boeing deal has caused a political firestorm. One week ago the Air Force awarded a $35 billion program to build mid-air refueling tankers to Boeing's arch-rival, Airbus, and its partner, Northrop-Grumman.

McCain led an investigation that killed an earlier Air Force proposal to lease 100 Boeing 767 refueling tankers.

On Social Security, McCain has steered clear of outlining a lot of specifics because he says changes should be worked out through bipartisan negotiations with the U.S. Congress. He has expressed openness to measures like slowing the growth of future benefits by changing the way they are indexed for inflation. In an interview with The Wall Street Journal earlier this week he said he supported Bush's plan for private retirement accounts.

McCain will vie for the White House in November against either Illinois Sen. Barack Obama or New York Sen. Hillary Clinton, who are still locked in a battle for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The presidential race takes place against a backdrop of growing worries about the economy with many private economists fearing the United States may already be in a recession.

Polls show U.S. voters put the economy at the top of their list of concerns -- even ranking it higher than the unpopular Iraq war.

While McCain, a Vietnam War hero, touts his grasp of foreign affairs, Democrats say he is vulnerable on the economy because of a remark he made in December that was seen by analysts a faux pas that will haunt him in a general election.

"The issue of economics is not something I've understood as well as I should," McCain told the Boston Globe while campaigning in New Hampshire. He said he would consult former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's book.

Holtz-Eakin attributed the comment to the senator's "self-deprecating" style and said McCain was, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, which handles economic and regulatory matters.

The McCain adviser, who has taught economics at Columbia and Princeton universities and is a former head of the Congressional Budget Office, insisted the Republican senator was in fact "a very astute practitioner of economics."

BREAKING NEWS -- Vice President Cheney heads to the Middle East on Sunday, including a West Bank stop. Good Monday morning. The cover of The New Yorker has Senator Clinton and Senator Obama in bed together, both lunging for a ringing red phone. The title: "I'll Get It."

She's closer. He's trying to reach over her.

Kevin Madden and James Carville are scheduled to sit down with guest host John King tonight on CNN's "Larry King Live."

TOP STORY: The Wall Street Journal says the National Security Agency "now monitors huge volumes of records of domestic emails and Internet searches as well as bank transfers, credit-card transactions, travel and telephone records. The NSA receives this so-called 'transactional' data from other agencies or private companies, and its sophisticated software programs analyze the various transactions for suspicious patterns. Then they spit out leads to be explored by counterterrorism programs across the U.S. government, such as the NSA's own Terrorist Surveillance Program, formed to intercept phone calls and emails between the U.S. and overseas without a judge's approval when a link to al Qaeda is suspected."

TOPS IN POLITICS -- "House GOP funk worsens," by Politico's John Bresnahan and Josh Kraushaar: "For National Republican Congressional Committee Chairman Tom Cole (Okla.), every week seems to bring a new set of problems. On Saturday night, things got even worse. With Democrat Bill Foster's victory in the Illinois 14th District special election, Democrats now hold the seats occupied only 21 months ago by former Speaker Dennis Hastert (Ill.) and former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay (Texas) — the two GOP lawmakers who ran the House from 1998 to 2006."

BRIEFING: The New Yorker seriously pushes Secretary Rice for veep, and thinks it's a charade to say Senator Clinton is really even with Senator Obama. Southern Baptists, the nation's largest Protestant denomination, get serious about global warming. And the N.Y. Times says the feuding by Clinton aides reflects poorly on their boss. The deets:

OBAMA TODAY: The senator is in Mississippi, which has its primary tomorrow. At a union building in Washington, Obama military advisers ("former service secretaries for each of the Armed Forces – Clifford Alexander, Jr. (US Army), Richard Danzig (US Navy), and F. Whitten Peters (US Air Force)," per the release)" hold a presser "to discuss why Obama has demonstrated the judgment and has the experience to be Commander In Chief." The Rezko trial resumes this a.m.

CLINTON TODAY: The senator becomes the first of the two Ds to kick off the Pennsylvania campaign with a stop in Scranton, where her father, Hugh Rodham, was born and buried. The WashTimes fronts, "Family ties offer boost to Clinton in Pennsylvania." She's there again tomorrow. President Clinton is there Tuesday and Wednesday.

The N.Y. fronts, "Sniping by Her Aides Hurt Clinton's Image as Manager," by Nagourney, Healy & Zernike: "[I]nterviews with campaign aides, associates and friends suggest that Mrs. Clinton, at least until February, was a detached manager. ... [S]he paid little attention to detail, delegated decisions large and small and deferred to advisers on critical questions. Mrs. Clinton accepted or seemed unaware of the intense factionalism and feuding that often paralyzed her campaign and that prevented her aides from reaching consensus on basic questions like what states to fight in and how to go after Mr. Obama ... Mrs. Clinton showed a tendency toward an insular management style, relying on a coterie of aides who have worked for her for years."

McCain TODAY: Presser in Phoenix. Funder in St. Louis. Douglas Holtz-Eakin, the senator's top economic adviser, told Caren Bohan of Reuters that McCain is committed to tackling the problem of mandatory spending on Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid and is well aware that just paring wasteful items from the U.S. budget will not solve fiscal ills.

THE PRESIDENT TODAY: Makes East Room remarks in honor of Women's History Month and International Women's Day. Per AP: "Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk is hoping talks Monday with President Bush will help break an impasse on allowing U.S. missile defense interceptors to be based on Polish soil."

THE V.P. TODAY: Headlines the Georgia State Republican Party's President's Day Dinner.

BOOKERS/PRODUCERS – "SOUTHERN BAPTIST leaders take unusual step of urging fight against climate change," from AP: "In a major shift, a group of Southern Baptist leaders said their denomination has been 'too timid' on environmental issues and has a biblical duty to stop global warming. The declaration, signed by the president of the Southern Baptist Convention among others and released Monday, shows a growing urgency about climate change even within groups that once dismissed claims of an overheating planet as a liberal ruse. The conservative denomination has 16.3 million members and is the largest Protestant group in the U.S."

TALKER: The New Yorker's Ryan Lizza writes in his five-page "The Iron Lady" that Clinton campaign chairman Terry McAuliffe "indulged in an impromptu we-told-you-so session" with reporters on the night of the big Ohio victory.

"The next day, a Clinton adviser was more candid about what lies ahead," Lizza continues. " 'Inside the campaign, people are not idiots,' she told me. 'EVERYONE CAN DO THE MATH. It isn't like the Obama campaign has some special abacus. We can do these calculations, too. Everyone recognizes how steep this hill is. But you gotta keep your game face on.' "

*** "For Clinton, it will be vital in the weeks ahead to maintain the public perception that she can still win."

In the same issue, Hendrik Hertzberg suggests – sincerely – that Secretary RICE be Senator McCain's shrewdest choice for V.P.:

"Her failures would be buried in an avalanche of positive publicity for a personal story as yet only vaguely known to the broad public. ... Her ascension, though nowhere near as momentous a breakthrough as the election of Obama or Clinton, would be a breakthrough all the same. ... By appointing first Colin Powell and then Rice to the most senior job in the Cabinet, a job of global scope, Bush changed the way millions of white Americans think about black public officials. This may turn out to be the most positive legacy of his benighted Presidency."

ALSO DRIVING THE CONVERSATION:

1) COUNT THE DAYS TILL YOU READ ... a story asking, "Can a Mormon win 'American Idol'?" TWO Church members are in the final 12 – David Archuleta, 17, of Murray, Utah, and Brooke White, 24, of Mesa, Ariz.

Playbook's Bay Area Correspondent writes with tongue in cheek: "America may not be ready for a Mormon in the Oval Office, but we are dominating reality TV."

10/18/2016

2) SCOOP: Greg Miller of the L.A. Times, "Senate verdict is mixed on Bush's prewar claims":

"After an acrimonious investigation that spanned four years, the Senate Intelligence Committee is preparing to release a detailed critique of the Bush administration's claims in the buildup to war with Iraq ... The document criticizes White House officials for making assertions that failed to reflect disagreements or uncertainties in the underlying intelligence on Iraq, officials said. But the report acknowledges that many claims were consistent with intelligence assessments in circulation at the time."

THAT took FOUR YEARS? The LAT adds: "The report focusing on the Bush administration's prewar statements is set to be delivered to members of the committee this week, officials said. But it could be weeks away from public release because members may push for changes, and much of the material cited in the report has yet to be approved for declassification." Republicans will add a rebuttal.

3) The N.Y. Daily News rains on the DREAM TICKET conceit, which made the front pages of both New York tabs yesterday after President Clinton told ABC News in Mississippi that his wife and Senator Obama would be "an almost unstoppable force."

Jake Tapper notes on "Good Morning America" that the Clintons "keep dropping hints": "Obama and his allies feel this is more like an undesired arranged marriage -- a shotgun one, at that."

"HIL'S CHUTZPAH," screams this morning's N.Y. Daily News. Columnist Michael Goodwin says: "Talk about chutzpah! For the third time in a week, the Clintons are pushing the idea of a presidential ticket of Hillary and Barack Obama. ... It's a dream team all right, as in dream on.

"It's a fantasy because, in the Clintons' pitch, naturally, she is on top of the ticket and Obama is her No. 2. That's rich of her, considering that Obama leads in both the delegate race and the popular vote. Forget those pesky voters - Hillary has declared herself the winner! ... She's like a con artist trying to sell a house she doesn't own. Based on the votes so far, she should have suggested herself as the vice presidential running mate. ...

*** "The offer of a joint ticket looks like an olive branch, but it's really a knife aimed at cutting Obama down to size. In the words of one Clintonista, 'It's a way of belittling him' by suggesting he's not ready to be President and would lose the general election as nominee to John McCain. It's the same attack she has been using all along, though now it's presented as a compliment."

4) CRACKING THE CODE -- A Financial Times editorial says: "In spite of his recent demagoguery on the subject, Mr Obama has broadly pro-trade views that he now feels obliged to disguise. Exactly the same is true of Mrs Clinton, who was once an enthusiastic supporter of Nafta (as she was right to be). One of the most damaging charges you can make against a US presidential candidate is that he or she is a hypocrite -- but, unattractive as that trait may be, there are much worse things, and protectionism is one.

5) PRIMER -- As a public service, we're picking up the first three Qs and As from the AP's "Obama-Rezko Q&A: Connections with indicted donor Rezko raise complex questions for Obama," By Christopher Wills in Springfield, Ill.:

"Q: Who is Tony Rezko?

"A: Antoin 'Tony' Rezko is a millionaire Chicago businessman who has long helped young politicians raise money and make connections. Raised in Syria, he moved to Chicago to study engineering but wound up making money in real estate and fast food. He is now on trial in federal court on mail fraud, wire fraud, money laundering and attempted extortion charges.

"Q: What is his relationship to Obama?

"A: He's been friendly with Obama for years, even offering him a job after Obama finished law school. Obama turned down the offer, but a political friendship developed. Rezko and his family donated at least $21,457 to Obama - and helped raise tens of thousands more - for his campaigns in Illinois, though not for his presidential bid. He also advised Obama on the purchase of a new Chicago home and, in his wife's name, purchased a vacant lot next to the new Obama home at the same time.

"Q: Why is Rezko on trial?

"A: Prosecutors allege he tried to shake down companies seeking contracts from Illinois regulatory boards for campaign contributions and payoffs. They say he used his influence with Gov. Rod Blagojevich to get people appointed to the boards and then threatened to have them block contracts unless the companies paid millions of dollars in kickbacks."

6) PEOPLE: U.S. Rep. Bobby RUSH (D-Ill.) was recovering at home Sunday after undergoing surgery recently to remove a cancerous tumor from his salivary gland. -- Chicago Tribune

7) FRENCH ELECTIONS: President Nicolas Sarkozy's backers lost in Paris and other key French cities in the first round of municipal elections seen as a referendum on the increasingly unpopular conservative. -- AP

SPANISH ELECTIONS: Spain's ruling Socialists won a second term in elections Sunday as voters brushed aside concerns over the slowing economy and soaring immigration and backed the party's liberal social reforms. --AFP

8) FEDWATCH – When Bloomberg's John M. Berry writes a Commentary, people listen: "Federal Reserve officials are being forced to consider limiting the size of future interest rate cuts because of the worsening inflation picture. That suggests that when the Federal Open Market Committee meets on March 18 it will reduce its 3 percent overnight lending rate target by a half-point and some officials may be arguing only for a quarter point."

9) BUSINESS BURST, from the Financial Times: "Bank of America will come under increasing pressure this week to rescind its offer to put a top Countrywide executive in charge of the companies' combined mortgage business after reports that Countrywide is the subject of a criminal investigation by US authorities."

10) SPORTS BLINK: It's Championship Week in men's college basketball, with Selection Sunday six days away. So ESPN.com's "Bubble Watch" goes daily.

USA Today says Deckard's comeback Wildcats look good for a bid: "Just a week ago, Ohio State looked like a long shot for the NCAA men's tournament. The Buckeyes shored up their résumé quickly with victories bound to impress the selection committee. They defeated No. 18 Michigan State 63-54 Sunday in Columbus. ... Kentucky (18-11) also is inching closer to a berth. The Wildcats closed their regular season by beating two-time defending NCAA champion Florida 75-70 Sunday, ending a streak of seven losses to Florida and painting a grim picture for the Gators' NCAA hopes."

11) DESSERT, from N.Y. Post's "Page 6": "He's Now O-tip – Q-TIP has gone political. The rapper, formerly of the group 'A Tribe Called Quest,' will debut a solo album this June that's heavy on guest stars, including presidential hopeful Barack Obama, who speaks throughout one song. 'I've got Norah Jones on there, but Barack is the big one. You'll see what happens, I can't reveal too much,' Q-Tip told Page Six Thursday at the Details magazine party at Le Royale for his album, 'The Renaissance,' and a photo shoot he did for the March issue. Spike Lee also makes an appearance on the album in a number with a political twist."

12) SECONDS, from AP – "3 members of Hootie and the Blowfish prepping solo releases": "When Hootie and the Blowfish play at a fundraiser to benefit the Animal Mission this week, the bandmates likely will compare notes on their recent solo efforts. Guitarist Mark Bryan and lead singer Darius Rucker are working on their second solo efforts, while drummer Jim 'Son' Sonefeld is making his solo debut. Bassist Dean Felber doesn't have any solo plans yet."

13) WEATHER – WJLA ABC 7's forecast for D.C.: "A quick-moving clipper system leads to increasing clouds through the day with cool highs near 50 degrees." Goodness – sounds exotic. Take a big coat – it's 35 right now.

Subject: So, John

John --

Right now, in my last year in office, I want to look beyond the next 12 months and focus in on the challenges we as a nation will face in the years and decades ahead.

And John, the progress we make in the next few years is wholly dependent on the choices we make now.

We've got to reaffirm our values and commitments and hold them against a hard reality -- a reality where we have done so much good, but we still see parents struggling to balance doing their jobs and taking care of their families, students being saddled with crippling debt, and women earning less than men in the workplace -- and see how we're measuring up to the legacy of our forebears and the promise of future generations. And when we do that, we'll see that we've come so far, but we've got so much work left to do together.

Today, if you're ready to make these choices and meet the challenges that face us, pitch in $3 or whatever you can to become an official State of the Union Donor. Your support will help elect leaders who embody all the best this country has to offer and who are ready to make the right choices, too.

If you've saved your payment information, your donation will go through immediately.

QUICK DONATE: \$3

QUICK DONATE: \$10

QUICK DONATE: \$25

QUICK DONATE: \$50

QUICK DONATE: \$100

Or donate another amount:

<https://my.democrats.org/State-of-the-Union-Donor>

I want to treat my last year in office just like my first, John, because we're just as hungry for change now as we were seven years ago -- and the truth is, we've got just as much work to do on all the things that matter to hardworking families. I know you feel the same determination I do, and share the same sense of urgency. That passion is what's going to see us through to an America with real opportunity for all.

Thanks for always being with me.

Barack Obama

Subject: Involvement Opportunities at TLISI this May!

JOIN US AT TLISI THIS YEAR!

Opportunities for involvement

The Center for New Designs in Learning and Scholarship \(CNDLS\) invites faculty and staff from all campuses to the 2016 Teaching, Learning & Innovation Summer Institute \(TLISI\), May 23-26, to explore innovative pedagogy, technology-enhanced learning, teaching to the whole person, and the intersections of diversity, inclusion, teaching, and learning. Whether this is your first year or you're a TLISI veteran, we hope you will join us.

There are multiple ways to participate in this year's institute, including individual sessions, keynotes, social hours, lunch presentations, and multi-day workshops. Of particular note are two opportunities for deeper engagement at TLISI through participation in our design seminars, which we call Productive Open Design Spaces (PODS), and new this year, our Doyle Inclusive Pedagogy Colloquium (IPC).

Productive Open Design Spaces

The Productive Open Design Space (PODS) is a team-based opportunity for groups of faculty and staff to explore a curricular or pedagogical project in a flexible, design-centered environment. With the support of a facilitator and CNDLS coaches, participants are provided space and time to think through their project, design model solutions, and plan for continued development. [Proposals for this 4-day studio are due April 15. Limited funding to support post-TLISI project work may be available. Visit our \[website\]\(#\) to learn more and apply.](#)

Doyle Inclusive Pedagogy Colloquium

The Doyle Inclusive Pedagogy Colloquium (IPC) is a 4-day intensive workshop with sessions focused on developing and incorporating diverse teaching strategies, principles of active learning, and other pedagogical approaches to promote an inclusive learning environment in courses of any subject matter. Session topics include self-awareness and implicit bias in the classroom, facilitating difficult discussions, and syllabus design for inclusive learning goals.

The IPC is open to all faculty and there are three ways to participate: You can register to participate in the week-long Colloquium. Or, if you'd like a more extended engagement with the issues, you can apply to be a Doyle Faculty Fellow for the coming academic year. Finally, you can simply join us for some of the exciting talks and workshops that are part of the week. [Our \[website\]\(#\) details more information about registering for the IPC or applying to be a Doyle Faculty Fellow \(deadline April 30\).](#)

Please visit the TLISI website for more information and to view our schedule-at-a-glance. Registration will open later this spring. Stay tuned!

Brian Deese is definitely in. Sounds like he told you he wanted to do it a while ago, but wasn't sure it registered. I'm also working on Amy Rosenbaum, as she's a pretty avid runner. Not sure if I'll get her there or not.

I actually looked at the course the other day for the first time. Didn't look nearly as bad as I thought it would be (will probably regret this statement)

Subject: [big campaign] "McCain=Bush" - worst fears confirmed

<http://www.progressnowaction.org/page/community/post/al/Cqyl>

As it turns out, it wasn't the Secret Service who ordered Denver Police to remove librarian Carol Kreck from the line outside McCain's "public town hall" Monday, her only "offense" being her carrying an inoffensive sign that read "McCain=Bush."

It wasn't the DPD's idea, and the DCPA security guard who claimed on camera that the "Secret Service" had ordered her removal was, um, mistaken. Or maybe he was covering up the far less defensible truth of the matter, which is McCain staff asked for protester's ouster

It was Sen. John McCain's staff who asked security at the Denver Center for the Performing Arts to remove people holding protest signs at the venue -- not U.S. Secret Service agents, who were not involved in Carol Kreck's ouster from the gallery.

A video of the incident circulating widely on the Internet shows a DCPA security guard saying that he was told by the Secret Service to remove Kreck, who was holding a paper sign that said "McCain = Bush."

But Thursday, after two days of being vilified by bloggers, letter writers and others, the Secret Service emphatically denied involvement.

"Contrary to some recent reporting, the Secret Service had no involvement in Ms. Kreck being removed from the area," said Malcolm D. Wiley Sr., spokesman for the Secret Service. "It was not done at our request or suggestion. Any assertion to the contrary is inaccurate and inconsistent with our established policies and procedures."

DCPA spokeswoman Suzanne Blandon said the guard who told Kreck to leave was "simply mistaken" in identifying the Secret Service as the agency that wanted her to leave. Blandon said the guard did not intend to use the Secret Service as leverage and did not mean to mislead anyone...

There you have it. Far worse than the original report that the Secret Service was behind Ms. Kreck's ouster--which they could have 'justified' a dozen different security-related ways, at least initially--it appears that the whole fiasco was instigated by McCain staffers who were concerned about only one thing: the embarrassing message of the sign she was carrying.

Note that today's article states that McCain's staff only requested the removal of attendees with protest signs--dozens of people festooned with pro-McCain schwag were allowed in, contrary to claims from McCain's campaign that nobody was. That's a critical point.

It wasn't a uniform security restriction imposed by the Secret Service, and it was not some unsupportable distinction between "public places" and "not really public public places" arranged between the city and the Performing Arts Center--although that appears to have been the pretext. And not an overzealous DCPA security guard striking out on his own.

No, it was McCain's people who did this. Because they didn't like her sign. As clear and audacious a violation of Carol Kreck's right to free speech as can be imagined.

Click here to make a donation to our fund to defend Carol Kreck, and thanks to all of you who have donated thousands of dollars already. Looks like the money will be well spent, fighting for Ms. Kreck's rights--and yours, too.

Hillary Clinton is heading to Iowa as the politician that most Democrats would choose as their 2016 presidential nominee.

According to a new CNN/ORC poll, 53% of all registered Democrats contacted in Iowa said they would support Hillary Clinton if the 2016 caucuses were held today. That number far outpaces the 15% that would opt for Vice President Joe Biden, 7% who would choose Sen. Elizabeth Warren and 5% who would pick Sen. Bernie Sanders.

Clinton will be visiting Iowa for the first time in six years on Sunday when she headlines the last Harkin Steak Fry. Biden, likewise, will be in the state Wednesday to speak at a liberal Catholic event in Des Moines.

Although Clinton tops Biden with men and women, there is a noticeable gender split between the two politicians. Sixty-three percent of women favor Clinton, compared with Biden's 10%. With men, however, Biden is drawing 21% support -- a number more than twice his support among women.

On the Republican side, Mike Huckabee nearly laps the field with 21% of all registered Republicans contacted in the poll saying they would support the former Arkansas governor if the 2016 Iowa caucuses were held today.

Paul Ryan is second with 12%, and there is a cadre of politicians -- including Sen. Rand Paul, former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie -- with support in the single digits.

Huckabee and Ryan are getting similar support with men -- 15% and 16%, respectively -- but it is with women that the former Arkansas governor jumps ahead of the congressman.

Twenty-seven percent of registered Republican women polled said they would pick Huckabee, compared with 8% who choose Ryan.

As the first-in-the-nation caucus state, Iowa is critically important to presidential hopefuls and can make or break a campaign.

With almost two years until the 2016 presidential election and a little over a year before the Iowa caucuses, most Republicans and Democrats polled have openly admitted that they are toying with the idea of running for president.

The CNN/ORC poll was conducted September 8-10, with 1,013 Iowa adults -- 608 likely voters -- questioned by telephone. The survey's overall sampling error is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

DES MOINES — Hillary Rodham Clinton returns to Iowa this weekend for the first time since her devastating loss in the 2008 presidential caucuses, arriving as the undeclared frontrunner for the 2016 Democratic nomination but still trailed by criticisms about her first campaign here.

The former secretary of state and her husband, former president Bill Clinton, will be in Iowa for Sen. Tom Harkin's (D-Iowa) annual steak fry on Sunday. But if the ostensible purpose of her visit is to pay tribute to Harkin — who is retiring after 40 years of elective office in Washington — she will not escape from the speculation that this is simply one more step toward a formal presidential campaign. At a minimum, it will mark her initial foray on the campaign trail for this fall's midterm elections.

"I don't expect her to talk about her future decisions," said Harkin's wife, Ruth, who is a longtime Hillary Clinton friend and supporter. "They're going to be announced next year. But this is a very significant moment for her to greet Iowa voters."

Clinton's 2008 effort in Iowa was plagued by startup problems and affected by the overall dysfunction of her national campaign team. By the time she corrected her course, Obama had moved ahead of her on the ground.

But it was more than staff problems that hurt Clinton here in 2008. As a candidate, she often chafed at the demands of the caucus process, including the time required to court individual activists across the state. She disliked traveling too far from Des Moines and certain friendly hotels.

Added to that are questions raised by this summer's book tour about whether her campaign instincts have dulled. Clinton's time since leaving the Senate has been devoted to foreign policy discussions inside the administration, interaction with world leaders and more than a year of lucrative speechmaking as a private citizen — rather than being in more regular contact with everyday Americans.

At this point, Clinton has no strong challenger in Iowa, for her a welcome contrast to eight years ago when she faced then-senator Barack Obama and a well-entrenched John Edwards, the party's 2004 vice presidential nominee.

Nonetheless, she won't have Iowa totally to herself this weekend. Sen. Bernard Sanders (I-Vt.), who is contemplating running for president, will appear at several events, while Vice President Biden, who was the featured speaker at last year's Harkin steak fry, will be in the state next week. Gov. Martin O'Malley (D-Md.) has been a frequent visitor here.

Still, she remains the dominant prospective candidate in her party. Anticipation of Clinton's appearance (as well as her husband's), and the fact that this is the last of Harkin's 37 steak fry events, will draw a large crowd at a balloon field in Indianola on Sunday afternoon.

Democratic activists and local party officials are eager to see and hear from her, even as they offer suggestions for how she should run differently in 2016.

Walt Piegler, the Democratic chair in Dubuque County, called Clinton "a lead-pipe cinch" if she runs for the nomination, though he has long been a supporter of Biden and would back him again if he were to run in 2016. "There's a great deal of support for her in Dubuque among my central committee," he said. "They like her and they like Bill."

But many of these same activists say Clinton needs to learn from the mistakes of her last campaign, which drew criticism for not understanding the culture of Iowa's caucus politics and because the Clinton entourage often got in the way of her ability to connect more effectively with voters.

Julie Stewart, Democratic chair in Dallas County outside Des Moines, said her personal experience with Clinton has always positive, but she was critical of the Clinton national team of 2008. "She brought people from New York and that just didn't work," she said. "Obama hired Iowans or Midwesterners. Even though she grew up in the Midwest, the people she brought with her, I don't think they connected well."

A conversation with a group of Iowa Democratic activists earlier this year revealed similar complaints. The activists respected Clinton for her experience but still found her less approachable than some others in their party. And they too complained about Clinton's national team.

"The BlackBerry was more important than the contact with [people]," Dale Todd, a developer of affordable house who had backed Obama in the 2008 caucuses, said last spring. "We would be sitting right here, and they would be working their BlackBerry, and you just felt like you weren't getting through."

Bonnie Campbell, who was co-chair of Clinton's 2008 Iowa campaign, said the criticism of Clinton as someone who could not connect with voters in Iowa still baffles her. "I'm mystified by it," she said. "I attended many events where she stayed till the last hand had been shaken. ... There was a really strong, important give and take. I just don't know. I don't think that's accurate."

But Campbell acknowledged the challenges Clinton would face trying to run a campaign close to the ground, given her stature and the security protection that accompanies her. "The hardest challenge of all is putting together a strategy that's true to her personality and style, which I do think the one-on-one is," she said. "Thinking about how you do retail politics when you are such almost a larger-than-life figure is a real challenge."

Neither Clinton nor most of her national staff understood the intricacies of the sometimes-arcane caucus process. By the time the 2008 campaign here ended, both she and her husband were left with a sour taste about the caucuses, which they saw as undemocratic. Caucuses require voters to show up at a specified hour and stay for an extended period, unlike primaries that allow someone to vote at any time during the day.

The former president also was new to the caucus process in 2008. He never had to compete in the caucuses during his campaigns for the White House because he and others ceded the state to Harkin in the 1992 nominating contest, and he faced no primary competition in his reelection campaign. Even now, he is still fixated on what he thinks are the flaws of the process.

This time around, Clinton's allies, with the help of some of those who ran Obama's 2008 operation, are busy trying to avoid the problems of the past. Some are assembling a grass-roots network here that her eventual campaign could inherit while the state Democratic Party is moving to address some of the criticisms of the caucus process.

Ready for Hillary, a pro-Clinton super PAC, began organizing in Iowa in January and has been signing up supporters at fairs and political gatherings in all 99 counties. "It's just like a campaign, absent an announced candidate," Campbell said. She admitted that she was skeptical when she attended the first Ready for Hillary organizing meetings in Des Moines but now is "all in." The groundwork will give Clinton a "huge advantage" in the caucuses.

Ready for Hillary officials said the group recently purchased the Iowa Democratic Party's 2008 caucus voter data, at a cost of $20,000, which includes data about every Democrat who participated in the caucuses and which candidates they supported. The super PAC intends to target voters who caucused for Obama and other candidates to persuade them to support Clinton, as well as reconnect with those who caucused for Clinton the first time.

The Iowa Democratic Party has proposed changes to caucus rules in an effort to make them more accessible to more people. Scott Brennan, the state Democratic chair, said the proposals are the result of recommendations from a process that drew advice from many sources. A Democratic activist, who declined to be identified in order to be candid, said Iowa supporters of Clinton worked to encourage the changes.

The party is trying to make caucus locations more accessible for handicapped voters, improve childcare options for parents of small children, and create options for military men and women serving overseas to participate. Also under consideration is a rule allowing so-called satellite caucuses in which, for instance, a group of laborers in a factory working a shift during the caucus time could assemble their own caucus at their workplace, so long as their employer accommodates them.

"It's all about how can we get more people involved in the process," Brennan said.

Iowa was always a difficult state for Clinton in 2008. Though she held a big lead in national polls throughout 2007 and was running ahead in most other states, she never was able to build that kind of commanding support in Iowa against either Obama or John Edwards.

The state looked daunting enough that Mike Henry, who was the deputy campaign manager, wrote a memo recommending that Clinton skip the state entirely. When the memo leaked, the Clinton campaign disavowed the contents, though in retrospect the advice might have served her well, given her third-place finish here.

This time, Iowa activists say that whether she has real or nominal competition, she should run all-out in Iowa ahead of the 2016 caucuses. And even supporters say they hope she will have competition, if only to sharpen her skills as a candidate.

"If she ultimately decides to run for the White House in 2016, she needs to come here and do the work that everyone does in Iowa," Brennan said.

"In Iowa, shoe leather wins elections better than anything," Pregler said. "Just go greet and meet. . . . I'd just tell her to be Hillary."

The Wire: "Hillary Clinton Returns to Iowa a Mere Mortal"

By Russell Berman

September 12, 2014

Hillary Clinton returns to Iowa on Sunday for the first time in six years, but she'll do so without the same god-like political status she held at the peak of her popularity as secretary of state.

The former first lady and New York senator's poll numbers have come back down to earth after years in the stratosphere – the result of renewed Republican attacks since she left the State Department and, in all likelihood, collateral damage from the unraveling of President Obama's foreign policy.

An NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll released this week found that Clinton's favorability was barely above water; 43 percent of respondents viewed her positively compared to 41 percent who held a negative view of her. That represents a sharp drop from less than two years ago, when 58 percent of registered voters viewed her positively just before she left the Obama administration.

Clinton does remain queen of the Democrats: A CNN poll released Friday of registered Democrats in Iowa found that 53 percent would support her for president, more than three times the level for any other potential candidate. But that finding could say as much about the lack of competition as it does about Clinton herself.

Vice President Joe Biden is the only other Democrat with a national following that is currently giving thought to a 2016 campaign.

Clinton's fall was easily predicted, of course. Her years as secretary of state shielded her from the rough-and-tumble of campaign politics, and even some of Obama's top political advisers have pushed her to stay on the sidelines as long as she could before jumping back into the fray.

Yet Clinton has clearly chosen a middle road. While she hasn't weighed in on every controversy or gone attacking Republican presidential hopefuls, she put herself back firmly in the public eye with a seemingly never-ending book tour this summer.

Now, she'll cross what is likely the last hurdle before becoming a candidate again by speaking at Sen. Tom Harkin's annual Steak Fry, a highly political fundraiser in the first voting state in 2016. Political observers will closely watch her talk for the outlines of a campaign stump speech, and she is expected to hit the road for Democratic candidates in the weeks leading up to the midterm elections.

Republicans will be watching, too, and they are welcoming Clinton back to Iowa by reminding her, in an email blast, of what happened last time she visited the Hawkeye State:

Hillary Clinton Returns To The Site Of Her Most Stinging Political Defeat

The Hill: "Clinton allies target Iowa youth"

The Ready for Hillary SuperPAC is visiting six college campuses in Iowa next week, piggybacking on Hillary Clinton's first visit to the state since her disappointing loss in the 2008 presidential election.

Clinton will appear Sunday at Sen. Tom Harkin's steak fry, a must-stop for any presidential contender that might be even more important this year given Harkin's pending retirement.

She'll have an opportunity to speak — and possibly flip steaks — before a crowd of 5,000 people in the state that will hold the first contest in the 2016 presidential race.

Clinton finished a disappointing third in the Iowa caucuses in 2008 behind not only then-Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), but to former Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.), too.

Sunday's visit and the SuperPAC's work shows she's determined to deliver a better result this year, and her allies are already keying in on young voters.

Twenty-three percent of Democratic caucus goers in 2008 were under 30 years old, highlighting the importance of winning the demographic in Iowa — in the primary and general election, in which Iowa is a swing state.

More than half of the younger voters in Iowa supported Obama over Clinton, according to exit polling data.

The Ready for Hillary SuperPAC — which has already visited all of the Hawkeye State's 99 counties — will stop at Iowa State University, Drake University, the University of Iowa, Cornell College, Grinnell College and the University of Northern Iowa as part of an early effort to promote Clinton — who remains officially an undecided candidate. The visits are spread out throughout the week beginning on Tuesday and running through Friday.

Polls suggest Clinton could do better in Iowa this time.

A new CNN/ORC poll released Friday shows that 53 percent of registered voters in Iowa say they would back her in a caucus, if it were held today. She's well ahead of Vice President Joe Biden — who is set to visit the state on Wednesday — at 15 percent. And Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) received just 7 percent of support in the poll.

Here are four other things to watch for this weekend from both Hillary Clinton and former President Bill Clinton, who will accompany his wife to the steak fry.

1) It's not a rehearsal but a 'soft open'

The Clintons are aware of the stakes involved in Sunday's event.

One former aide to Hillary Clinton said the steak fry amounts to not a rehearsal but a "soft open" for a potential Clinton campaign and an entree to the Hawkeye state.

And as Clinton criss-crosses the country to campaign for various midterm candidates in the coming weeks, she'll have a large entourage accompanying her.

Ready for Hillary aides — along with their bus — are expected to be at many of the midterm campaign stops to maximize the punch of each appearance, just as they are in Iowa.

2) Don't expect either Clinton to say anything about 2016

Yes, it's Iowa. Yes, it's an event with not just one but two Clintons. And yes, it's the first public political event, Hillary Clinton has attended in years.

But don't expect a peep about a run for the White House, or even a joke about coming back for a repeat visit.

Clinton allies say that while there are obviously 2016 overtones to the event, they will keep the focus on Harkin during the visit — and also try to help Rep. Bruce Braley (D-Iowa), who is facing a difficult race in keeping the Harkin seat in Democrats' hands.

Republicans scoff at that notion, however, that the trip by the former secretary of State isn't about 2016.

"Hillary is going to Iowa because she's currently running a campaign for president — a rather unsuccessful one thus far seeing as her favorables have dropped 20 points since leaving State according to the most recent Wall Street Journal poll," said Tim Miller, the executive director of the SuperPAC America Rising.

3) Don't expect her to talk about her 2008 defeat.

Iowa and 2008 is a sore subject for most Clintonites, and Hillary Clinton doesn't like to wallow in the history.

Most aides blame a poor Iowa strategy for the defeat, but would rather put their past dealings with Iowa in the "lessons learned" category.

"We'd like to forget any of that happened and focus on what's ahead," said one former aide to Clinton.

But those who oppose Clinton will want to constantly remind people about her Iowa failings. The Republican National Committee will be sending out a document to allies reminding them of Hillary's third-place showing in 2008's caucus.

4) Iowans will be saturated with Hillary Clinton...starting now

Coming into Des Moines from out of town? Expect to see a Ready for Hillary billboard when leaving the airport. And expect other Hawkeye state billboards — including one in downtown Des Moines — to sprout soon.

It's also set up to be a media circus.

More than a year before the Iowa Caucuses, approximately 200 reporters have been credentialed to cover the steak fry, which C-SPAN will broadcast live.

Wall Street Journal blog: Japan Realtime: "Hillary Clinton Talks Up Paid Family Leave"

By Eleanor Warnock

September 12, 2014, 7:29 p.m. JST

Much has been made of how far Japan still has to go to bring the number of female workers up to the level of its counterparts. But Hillary Clinton—seen as potentially the first female American president—pointed out to Japan's biggest ever conference on women's issues that that the U.S. also has a long way to go.

In a videotaped speech to a largely adoring crowd, Mrs. Clinton highlighted that paid leave is one area the U.S. still lags behind even Japan.

"The United States, unfortunately, is one of a handful of developed countries without paid family leave," the former secretary of state said in a video address to attendees of a Japanese government co-hosted conference on women's issues.

U.S. federal law does not guarantee that leave by workers to care for newborn children or sick family members is paid. In Japan, a portion of pay is guaranteed.

"If we give parents the flexibility on the job and paid family leave it actually helps productivity, which in turn helps all of us," she said.

Mrs. Clinton has expressed her support for the idea before but has said it may take time to achieve, according to U.S. media reports.

Interestingly, one of the biggest pushes by former U.S. president Bill Clinton during his first term in office was signing the Family and Medical Leave Act into law in 1993. The law guaranteed unpaid leave to eligible workers if a family member falls ill or in the case of pregnancy.

In her address Friday, Mrs. Clinton also mentioned that women hold a higher percentage of low-wage jobs in the U.S., and took a swipe at Silicon Valley.

"The situation is even worse in some key industries," she said. "Women account for just 11% of directors on the boards of technology companies" compared with 17% overall.

On that count, however, the U.S. has Japan beat. Only 1.23% of board members in Japan are women, according to the Japanese government.

At a White House ceremony Friday marking the 20th anniversary of the AmeriCorps program, former President Bill Clinton sounded as if he was doing a little early 2016 campaigning for wife Hillary.

Mr. Clinton, who launched the first AmeriCorps class on Sept. 12, 1994, told the audience on the South Lawn that Mrs. Clinton has been a longtime supporter of national service.

"I shared that great day with a lot of people, including Hillary, who campaigned across America with me in 1992, promising that we would create a national service program," Mr. Clinton said.

Then, with President Obama at his side, Mr. Clinton recited a bit of his wife's resume for the mostly young audience.

"She had participated in all kinds of community service; her first job was with the Children's Defense Fund," Mr. Clinton said. "She started the Legal Aid program in Arkansas at our university. We have lived this for a long time."

Mrs. Clinton hasn't announced whether she'll run for the White House in 2016 but is widely expected to become a candidate.

Mr. Clinton said it's "one of the most important things I ever had a role in."

Mr. Obama urged Congress to approve his budget request of $1.05 billion for the Corporation for National and Community Service, a slight increase from fiscal 2014 enacted levels. The budget also calls for a restructuring of AmeriCorps.

The president remembered his days as a community organizer in Chicago and said he wouldn't have become president without that experience.

"It gave me a sense of direction about how I wanted to live my life," Mr. Obama said. "It made me whole. It gave me center. It gave me a compass."

Washington Post blog: The Fix: "Hillary Clinton is going to Iowa this weekend. How she acts will be telling."

By Chris Cillizza

September 12, 2014, 10:56 a.m. EDT

Let's get one thing out of the way: Hillary Clinton is a massive favorite to win the Iowa caucuses -- and the Democratic presidential nomination -- in 2016. (If she runs, of course, which everyone now assumes she will.) Just in case you aren't hip to that reality, CNN and the Opinion Research Corporation released a poll on Friday that made it crystal clear; Clinton led the 2016 field in Iowa with 53 percent followed by Vice President Joe Biden at 15 percent. No one else even got into double digits.

So, when Clinton stops in Iowa for the first time in six years this Sunday -- she and her husband are headlining Sen. Tom Harkin's final Steak Fry -- she will be greeted like a hero. But, it's worth remembering Clinton's problems in Iowa in 2008 when analyzing the approach she takes to all of that adoration.

Clinton finished third in the 2008 Iowa caucuses -- John Edwards narrowly edged her out for second. There were lots and lots of reasons given for her struggles in the state up to and including:

* The Clinton machine wasn't strong in Iowa since Bill Clinton didn't seriously compete in the state in 1992 (native son Harkin made the race non-competitive) and was unchallenged for the Democratic nomination in 1996.

* Clinton was out of step -- particularly on the war in Iraq -- with the liberal activists that comprise the bulk of the caucus vote. Both Obama and Edwards were significantly more outspoken in their opposition to the war than Clinton.

* Clinton fundamentally misunderstood the Iowa electorate. She ran a Rose Garden campaign when Iowa voters wanted her to drop the big entourage and simply talk to them one on one.

It's that last criticism that may be most telling as it relates to 2016. Clinton and former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani were the two most famous candidates in the 2008 race. Both came to Iowa wearing that fame -- cocooned off from average folks, defaulting to larger rallies rather than the hand to hand work that has, traditionally, been rewarded by Iowa voters.

Giuliani quickly realized Iowa wasn't for him, skipping the state to spend more time in New Hampshire. (Giuliani eventually scrapped that strategy too; making Florida his firewall. It became his Waterloo.) Clinton stayed; she had no choice since the frontrunner for the nomination can't pick and choose which states to seriously contest.

The exit poll conducted after Clinton's third place finish in Iowa speaks to the problem she had connecting with the electorate on any level other than celebrity-to-suppliant. One in five Iowa Democratic caucus-goers said that a candidate who "cares about people like me" was the most important characteristic in making their choice. Edwards got 44 percent among that group -- double Clinton's 22 percent. (Obama took 24 percent.) By contrast, among the 20 percent of caucus-goers who said a candidate with the "right experience" to be president was most important to them, Clinton lapped the competition by winning almost half of their votes.

The takeaway from the 2008 exit poll is this: No one doubted Clinton's competence. They doubted her compassion. She was always "Hillary Clinton" and never Hillary Clinton. It seems more than coincidental that when, in the runup to the New Hampshire primary, Clinton let more of her "real self" show, her polls numbers improved drastically.

Clinton hasn't talked extensively about what she thinks she did wrong in 2008. But, she has parted ways with pollster and chief strategist Mark Penn, the leading advocate of a strategy that focused on Clinton's competence not her compassion. And, early indications -- particularly in how she has talked about being a woman running for president -- suggest she will take a different approach this time around.

That said, her post-Secretary of State life has largely been defined by making big-dollar speeches and limiting her exposure to the press and most everyone else. Her trip to Iowa is one of the first major tests of what Hillary Clinton 2016 will look like and how -- if at all -- it will differ from Hillary Clinton 2008.

Washington Post opinion: Sen. Marco Rubio: "Let's reject the veiled isolationism of Obama and Clinton"

By Sen. Marco Rubio

September 12, 2014, 7:31 a.m. EDT

President Obama's call on Wednesday for the United States to lead an international military campaign in the Middle East has the potential to begin a departure from the isolationism that he and former secretary of state Hillary Rodham Clinton have advocated during their years in office. There is a risk, however, that the president's focus on a counterterrorism campaign akin to those waged in Yemen and Somalia, and his reliance on regional partners to deal with the challenge posed by the Islamic State, could lead to the continuation of what has been the most disengaged presidential foreign policy in modern American history.

From his focus on prematurely ending wars in the interest of "nation-building here at home" to his abandonment of America's traditional allies in an effort to placate America's enemies, President Obama has made it clear that he is different from his post-World War II predecessors. The question now is whether, facing this new threat, the president will rise to the occasion and truly reassert American leadership.

Five and a half years of the Obama/Clinton worldview has given Americans a graphic and often horrific view of the chaos that is unleashed in the world when America walks away from its traditional role as the guarantor of global security. From Syria and Iraq to eastern Ukraine and the South China Sea, we are seeing what the world will look like if our leaders continue choosing detachment: more violence, rivals and partners alike taking advantage of our inaction, and a steady increase in threats to our citizens and to our prosperity.

The Obama administration did not advocate this global retreat on its own. Members of my own Republican Party have also at times embraced the Democrats' narrative that too much American leadership is the problem, rather than the solution to global instability. Not too long ago, some neo-isolationists even claimed that America has no significant national interest in the conflicts in Syria and Iraq, and that American support for the Syrian opposition fueled the growth of the Islamic State.

The truth is that, when the Syrian people rose up in 2011 in protest against Bashar al-Assad's brutal rule, our vital national interest was to prevent a protracted civil war in which radical jihadists from all over the world could rush into a vacuum. If they could seize operational spaces, they could use them to plan and carry out attacks against our allies and ultimately America.

In the early stages of this conflict, responsible, bipartisan voices called for U.S. leadership, hoping precisely to prevent the outcome we have now seen play out. I urged Secretary Clinton and President Obama to intervene decisively to oust Assad and to identify and arm the moderate Syrian opposition. Instead, we were told that Assad was a "reformer" and that we should not get involved. At a critical decision point early in the Syrian crisis, when our involvement could have swayed the outcome, the isolationist voices won. America effectively stood on the sidelines, letting the problem fester for more than three years as the moderates opposing the regime were pushed aside by better-funded and better-armed jihadists. Meanwhile, the administration's incoherent policy further empowered Assad, strengthening his grip on power as chaos, violence and refugees spilled across Syria's borders, threatening the entire region.

Some former Obama administration officials, notably Secretary Clinton, have tried to argue that they advocated internally for a different approach, that they saw the train wreck coming. But the fact of the matter is that when they were in positions of responsibility, they failed to prevent the situation that now exists. "What are we going to arm them with and against what?" Secretary Clinton said of the Syrian opposition in 2012. She and other administration officials who found their voices only after they left office were complicit in implementing and publicly defending the president's disastrous foreign policies — and we'll be dealing with the consequences for decades to come.

When President Obama finally proposed intervening militarily in Syria last year, his primary objective was to censure Assad for using chemical weapons. He argued that America should remain disengaged from the core conflict. He presented no viable plan to remove the Assad regime from power, significantly assist the moderate rebels or substantially degrade the radical jihadists.

More than three years into the conflict, we have done very little to support the non-jihadist opposition. After admitting in a late-August news conference that he had no strategy, the president now assures us that he has a plan to destroy the Islamic State. With any time wasted, the challenge only grows.

While the president abdicated leadership, other regional actors irresponsibly armed groups within Syria without regard for their ideology or goals. These nations chose to do so not because of U.S. involvement, but because of the lack thereof. The result is that today, Syria has become a prime operational space for radical jihadists from around the world.

With its base in Syria, the Islamic State is now perhaps the most extreme, powerful and capable terrorist group ever, with the clear intention of establishing an Islamic caliphate to dominate the region and launch attacks against anyone who doesn't share its warped ideology.

The group didn't achieve all this because America was too involved; just the opposite. It rose most quickly in America's absence and is intent on driving us out of the Middle East. It is counting on us to abandon our support of Jordan, Israel and other allies. It plans to terrorize us into retreat.

America and the Islamic State are on an unavoidable collision course — and there will be a price as we finally confront this challenge. We should not think this struggle will be quick or risk-free. But every American should know that the price of further disengagement now would be greater sacrifice later.

To confront the Islamic State terrorists, we need a sustained air campaign targeting their leadership, sources of income and supply routes, wherever they exist. We must increase our efforts to equip and capacitate non-jihadists in Syria to fight the terrorist group. And we must arm and support forces in Iraq confronting it, including responsible Iraqi partners and the Kurds. In addition, we must persuade nations in the region threatened by the Islamic State to participate in real efforts to defeat it.

But we are fooling ourselves if we think that this will be just another counterterrorism campaign like the strategy the United States has pursued in Yemen and Somalia. Those cases are not success stories but containment strategies. The conflict in Syria is impossible to contain. The long-term threat posed by the Islamic State is much greater than that posed by al-Shabab or al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula. If we are serious, as the president said, about ultimately destroying the Islamic State, we cannot rule anything out.

Part of our response should also be reflected in our budgetary discussions here at home. It is no coincidence that those Republicans who would continue the president's failed isolationist policies would also accelerate another grave mistake of the Obama era: the weakening of our defense capabilities through misguided priorities and round after round of defense cuts, even as crises multiply. In their minds, a retreat on the world stage has the benefit of a smaller, less capable military to go along with it.

Taken together, a continued weakening of America's role in the world in word and deed, and a reduction in U.S. military capabilities, would mark a dramatic and almost irreversible change in American foreign and national security policy — a change that would make the current chaos in the world pale in comparison.

As he "bears witness" to their violations of international order, President Obama likes to levy the charge that America's foes, from Vladimir Putin to the Islamic State, are on the "wrong side of history." But presidents are not supposed to be witnesses to history; they are supposed to help shape it in America's favor. Those of us entrusted with public service are called to lead not in the world as we wish it were, but rather in the world as it is. The world is more connected than it once was, and recent history has proved that without American leadership, global instability threatens not only our national security, but also our economy and our very way of life.

Leadership demands shaping public opinion, not chasing it; speaking the hard truths on complex issues; and rallying the American people to confront the difficult challenges of our time. And those who seek to lead our country should understand that the world needs more American engagement, not less. Decisive and targeted use of America's military, diplomatic and economic power will not only defeat the Islamic State and deliver us from this crisis, it will also strengthen America and ensure our long-term security.

A key lesson from President Obama's first 51 / 2 years in office is that isolationism and disengagement, no matter how they're disguised, only put more American lives at risk.

Weekly Standard blog: The Blog: "Hillary Clinton Quietly Scrubs 'Remarks' From Website"

By Jeryl Bier

September 12, 2014, 10:07 a.m. EDT

Hillary Clinton is widely considered, should she enter the 2016 presidential race, the Democratic front runner. But the former secretary of state is shrinking rather than building an already limited website presence.

Sometime within the last two months, Hillaryclintonoffice.com quietly removed the only substantive content featured on her website, a set of remarks from three events from early 2013. The home page of the site that included a "remarks" button in addition to the "contact" button vanished sometime between July 23 and August 27 as these images show:

[IMAGES]

Mrs. Clinton launched the website within a week of concluding her tenure as secretary of state in February 2013. By April, transcripts of remarks from three events in which Clinton took part were added: February 14, 2013, remarks at the Joint Civilian Service Award Presentation; April 2, 2013, remarks at Vital Voices (a non-governmental organization promoting women's leadership); and April 5, 2013, remarks at Women in the World summit. The latter two events chiefly consisted of Clinton's own remarks on a variety of issues related to women's place in societies around the world and their struggles, and Clinton's efforts and actions on those issues as secretary.

The first event, the Joint Civilian Service Award Presentation, included remarks from not only Clinton but also from Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Martin Dempsey, then-Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta, and an unnamed announcer. Dempsey had glowing words for Clinton for "working tirelessly in the aftermath of the Arab Spring and to ensure we had a strong coalition in Libya" and "recogniz[ing] that there are limits to hard power and that we need both hard power and soft power." As Dempsey presented Clinton with the award, the announcer lauded Clinton's "smart power strategy."

Panetta's praise for Clinton was effusive as he recalled working together during Bill Clinton's presidency as well as Hillary's term as secretary of state. He credited her with important roles during the planning for the successful bin Laden raid, as well as issues regarding "Afghanistan and Syria and terrorist attacks, and even on our own defense strategy, including the whole issue of Asia Pacific rebalance," adding that the two of them had together made recommendations to President Obama regarding "difficult choices in Iraq and Afghanistan and Libya and the Middle East." Before presenting Clinton with a second award, Panetta closed his remarks with what could easily be taken for an endorsement of Clinton for future public service:

"Today ... it is now clear that we need to maintain a strong military force to deal with the unstable and unpredictable and undeniably dangerous world that we live in. But it is equally clear that we must enhance our other key levers of power, our economic and diplomatic power, if we are to truly achieve peace in the 21st century. Delivering on that vision will require wisdom, and it will require a will to act, qualities that Hillary Clinton exemplified throughout her career and as secretary of state."

In Clinton's own remarks, she seemed to close the door on future service by referring to herself as a "retired public official" who had "left the State Department in the capable hands of Secretary John Kerry." She said that she was "enormously proud of what we have achieved" using her "smart power approach," having "gone a long way to restore America's global leadership and to make progress on some of the great challenges we face, from taking the fight to the leadership of Al Qaeda to reasserting the United States as a Pacific power."

Clinton's performance in favorability polls has been dropping in recent months, even as her legacy as secretary of state has been called into question with deteriorating conditions across the world stage. Also, in addition to Clinton's own book "Hard Choices" released this summer, several other books came out in recent months examining her life and careers, including Clinton, Inc.

Now that this set of remarks has been removed from Clinton's website, their availability elsewhere appears rather limited. However, the Still4hill.com website documents at least two of the events, even including some photos, and the Daily Beast still has the transcript of the Women in the World event. Clinton's office did not respond to a request for comment about the removal of the remarks from her website.

In Alabama, without an ID, you can't vote. Yet Governor Bentley announced plans this month to close 31 driver's license offices across the state, including in every single county where African Americans make up more than 75 percent of registered voters. The closings would make getting driver's licenses and personal identification cards much harder for many African Americans, putting up new barriers to voting. As many Alabamans have said in recent days, that's just dead wrong.

Governor Bentley is insisting that the closings had nothing to do with race, but the facts tell a different story. The parallels are inescapable: Alabama is living through a blast from the Jim Crow past. Fifty years after Rosa Parks sat, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. marched, and John Lewis bled, it's hard to believe Americans are still forced to fight for their right to vote—especially in places where the civil rights movement fought so hard all those years ago.

Governor Bentley has offered the same excuses we've always heard to justify laws that disproportionately affect people of color—or, for that matter, low-income people, women, young people, and seniors. It reminds me of that old saying: "You find a turtle on a fence post, it didn't get there on its own." Institutionalized racism doesn't just happen. People make it happen.

But for every Republican governor working to dismantle voting rights across our country, there are Americans determined to keep marching forward. I'm proud of everyone in Alabama who leapt to confront this injustice. The outcry has been so strong, it's forced politicians in Montgomery to reconsider. Governor Bentley and the legislature should listen to those voices and immediately reverse the decision to close DMV offices.

But the reforms can't stop there. Alabama is one of 17 states with no early voting. That needs to change. Alabama should make sure those who serve time have their voting rights restored. And they should eliminate the discriminatory requirement that people provide proof of citizenship when they register to vote. Too many people don't have access to their birth certificate or passport—especially college students who are living away from home. We should be doing everything we can to get more people involved in our political process, not turning them away when they try to participate.

Alabama isn't alone. Over the past few years, many states have passed laws that make voting harder. Since the Supreme Court gutted a key provision of the Voting Rights Act, the situation has gotten even worse. And some people—including many Republican candidates for president—would keep pushing our country in this shameful direction.

Jeb Bush says he wouldn't reauthorize the Voting Rights Act because voting conditions have improved since it was passed. As Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg put it, that's like throwing away your umbrella in a rainstorm because you're not getting wet. When asked recently about voter ID laws, Marco Rubio replied, "What's the big deal?" John Kasich restricted early voting in Ohio after the 2008 election, when 77 percent of early voters in the most populated county were African American. What part of democracy are all these candidates afraid of?

Many of the leaders and activists who led the original fight for the right to vote are no longer alive to stop these abuses. But we are. And we have an obligation to act.

First, Congress should put principle ahead of politics and pass the Voting Rights Advancement Act. This bipartisan bill would restore the full protections of the Voting Rights Act.

Second, we should set a standard across this country of at least 20 days of early, in-person voting—including opportunities for weekend and evening voting.

Third, we should enact universal, automatic voter registration, so every young person in every state is automatically registered to vote when they turn 18, unless they opt out. I applaud California for beginning to implement a similar approach last week. More states should follow their lead.

These steps alone won't solve all of the challenges we face. But we owe it to future generations to fight back against attacks on voting. We also owe it to them to make sure our voting system works for a modern America. We need to meet this moment with the bravery and determination of those who came before us. It's time for leaders in every party, at every level of government, to be on the right side of history. And once again, the movement can start right here in Alabama.

So its promise to raise taxes on poor people in order to get your offices back.

So to make the legislature the focus I think would be the right place.

This month, Alabama announced the closing of 31 driver's license offices in counties across the state, including those in eight of the 10 counties with the highest percentage of African Americans. Despite Governor Bentley's insistence that the decision—which came a year after the state's voter ID law took effect—has nothing to do with race, the parallels are inescapable: Alabama is living through a blast from the Jim Crow past.

It's hard to believe that 50 years after Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. marched and Rosa Parks sat and John Lewis bled, Americans are still fighting to exercise the most fundamental right in our democracy. Meanwhile, Governor Bentley is offering the same excuses we've heard for half a century to justify laws that disproportionately affect people of color, low-income people, women, young people, and seniors. It reminds me of a saying from Arkansas: "You find a turtle on a fence post, it did not get there on its own."

But for every Republican governor working to dismantle voting rights, there are Americans determined to keep marching forward. I'm proud of the outcry in Alabama from people who have come together to demand better. It's time for Governor Bentley to listen to your voices and reverse the decision to close DMV offices in the Black Belt and other rural counties. But the reforms shouldn't stop there. Alabama is one of a handful of states with no early voting—that needs to change. Alabama should also eliminate the discriminatory and demeaning state requirement that people provide proof of citizenship along with their voter registration forms—a law modeled on one that has stopped more than 30,000 would-be voters from registering in Kansas. And they should make sure that Americans who have served time should have their voting rights restored once they're released.

Unfortunately (but not surprisingly), Alabama isn't an outlier. Over the past few years, many states have passed laws that make it harder to vote. Since the Supreme Court gutted a key provision of the Voting Rights Act, a dire situation has gotten even worse. And there are those—including many of the Republican candidates for president—who would continue to push our country in this shameful direction.

Many of the people who fought and sacrificed for the right to vote are no longer alive to witness these abuses. But we are. And we have an obligation to stop the systematic and deliberate effort to disenfranchise voters.

First, Congress should put principle ahead of politics and pass the Voting Rights Advancement Act—a bipartisan bill that would restore the full protections of the Voting Rights Act.

Second, we should set a standard across this country of at least 20 days of early, in-person voting—including opportunities for weekend and evening voting.

Third, we should go even further. We need universal, automatic voter registration—so that every young person in every state is automatically registered to vote when they turn 18, unless they choose to opt out. I applaud California for implementing this measure last week—an incredible victory in our most populous state.

These steps alone won't solve all of the challenges we face. The Best of Political Animal

- Jeb Bush thinks that engaging in techno-babble is an excellent way for a reactionary politician to make shilling for deregulated and untaxed capitalist enterprises sound cool. Read it.
- If Oregon's governor John Kitzhaber resigns, he'll be replaced by Secretary of State Kate Brown, the nation's first openly-identifying bisexual statewide elected official. Read it.
- The current Chief Justice of the Alabama Supreme Court's poetry is as good an example as I've seen of the seething hatred harbored by a lot of Christian Right super-patriots. Read it.

Scott Walker is ALL about Jobs

The governor wants to change the mission statement of the Wisconsin university system from "a search from the truth" to meeting the state's "workforce needs." Read it.

The GOP is Clueless on How to Fund the DHS

It's inevitable that the Republicans will be blamed if anything bad should happen while the Department of Homeland Security is trying to operate without funds. Read it.

How College Mergers Can Screw Students

What happened when George Washington University took over the Corcoran School of Art. Read it.

Maureen Dowd Doesn't Define Girlish

There are two ideas here. The first is that it's sexist to accuse her of harboring ill-will towards that president for treating her with scorn, as if this isn't a universal reaction human beings have to being disrespected. The second is that she's been singled out for pariah status because she's a woman. Read it.

Dear John,

We have less than nine days until our key FEC fundraising deadline at midnight on August 25. Kirsten said it best - she may not have the bottomless pockets of these Republicans, but she has something even more powerful: She has you.

We're counting on grassroots donors like you to push back against the self-funders and corporate-backed Republicans. They're going to use their millions to buy air time and spread lies, we have to be ready to take them on before the September 14th Primary Election Day.

Click here to rush your donation of \$250, \$500, or more to Kirsten's campaign. With less than 9 days left before this critical filing deadline, Kirsten is counting on you to help her push back against the self-funded Republicans.

Thanks for stepping up,

Dear Friend,

September 14 is going to be a big day for our campaign. Not only do we have our primary, but we will learn who our Republican opponent is -- our general election will go into overdrive.

Each of the Republicans I could face can self fund and write their campaigns a large check at any time, flooding the airwaves with misinformation. We have to be ready.

That's where I need your help. I've always relied on people like you-the grassroots -- to support my campaign. And with the general election quickly approaching, I need you now more than ever.

August 25 is a key FEC fundraising deadline before Primary Day -- before my opponent really starts pulling out all the stops. I may not have the deep pockets that these Republicans have, but I do have you. Won't you please make a donation today so I can meet my goal of raising $75,000?

Click here to make a donation of \$250, \$500, or more to my campaign today, before the August 25 filing deadline. The only way I can beat back these self-funded Republicans is with your support.

We need more progressives, not believers of Bush trickle-down economics, in the U.S.

Senate. Progressives extend jobless benefits to those struggling to find work and cut middle-class taxes. Progressives fight to provide health care coverage to the uninsured and all our kids. Progressives believe men and women serving in the military shouldn't be expelled solely based on who they love.

I want to return to Washington so I can keep fighting for the things that are important to you – to make sure you have a strong, progressive voice in the Senate. But I can't get there without your help.

You've always been there for me in the past, and I can't tell you how much that means to me. I'm proud of the fact that my campaign is based on the support of thousands of donors and not on the wealth of one individual. Please stand with me today and show these Republicans that their cash can't stamp out the power of the grassroots.

Click here to make a contribution to my campaign before the August 25 fundraising deadline and help me reach my goal of raising \$75,000.

Like I said, September 14 is a big day. I've got to act fast so that I'm prepared to confront my Republican opponent head on. I hope I'll have you there by my side.

Sincerely,

Kirsten Gillibrand

With Republicans Reeling Due to their Association with President Bush, Americans United for Change Announces Bush Legacy Bus - Museum on Wheels Holds Bush, Conservative Allies Accountable for Failure

Tour begins in June, travels Coast-to-Coast Featuring Exhibits on Bush and Conservative Policies That Have Harmed Our National Security, Sacrificed Domestic Priorities

Washington D.C. – With Republicans reeling due to their association with President Bush, and amid what supporters of the President have dubbed his “legacy year,” Americans United for Change announced the upcoming national tour of the “Bush Legacy Bus.” This latest chapter in AUFC’s ongoing Bush Legacy Project, which will cement into history how two terms of failed conservative policies – supported by Bush and his allies including Sen. John McCain - have weakened America’s security abroad while neglecting and undermining important priorities here at home. Click here to view AUFC’s new Bush Legacy Tour homepage: <http://www.bushlegacytour.com>.

This 45-foot long museum on wheels, powered by biodiesel, and weighing in at 28 tons, features interactive exhibits on the worst policy failures that grew out of the conservative agenda. Visitors will be given the chance to reflect on the Administration’s tragically inept response to Hurricane Katrina, mismanaged and endless war in Iraq, ‘trickle-down’ economic policies that favored the wealthiest Americans and more. The tour kicks off in Washington D.C. in late June and travels from coast-to-coast throughout the summer and fall stopping in the hometowns of Bush’s allies in Congress, both national political conventions and symbolic and historic locations like New Orleans and Crawford, TX.

“The Bush Legacy Project is not just about Bush – it is about the conservative ideology he and his allies in Congress, including John McCain, represent,” said Brad Woodhouse, President of Americans United for Change and founder of the Bush Legacy Project. “It’s time to stick a stake in the heart of conservative ideology, which is a failed governing philosophy. The Bush Legacy Bus is just one piece in an ongoing effort to redefine American political values and to create an enduring progressive majority in America. The bus will serve to educate Americans about how the conservative policies President Bush and his allies in Congress have pursued have failed America and why progressive approaches to healthcare, the economy, foreign policy and other issues provide the solutions Americans are looking for.”

The goals of the “Bush Legacy Project” are threefold:

Remind American voters why they have lost faith in President Bush and his conservative agenda.

10/18/2016

Shift the center of the political debate toward progressive solutions to our nation's most intractable problems by demonstrating the failure of Bush's policies and conservative ideology.

This is what I propose on any trade question:

- TAA needs to be an indispensable part of our trade policy, as the President has made clear. So I can't support an outcome that leaves TAA out in the cold.
- This underscores a broader point. We should be negotiating the best possible terms for American workers and companies in our trade deals, but we also have to protect our workers outside our trade deals so they can compete and win in the global economy. The larger context matters. That's why we have to raise the minimum wage, strengthen labor protections, invest in our workers and our education system, etc. etc. etc.

TODAY'S FINANCIAL CRISIS IS THE MCCSAME AS SAVINGS AND LOAN SCANDAL

McCain has been at the center of a circle of greed, special interest favors, and lack of bank and government oversight once before. McCain was reprimanded by the Senate Ethics Committee for his "Poor Judgment" during the Savings and Loan scandal. Years later McCain, along with Phil Gramm, advocated for the aggressive deregulation of Wall Street that led to today's financial crisis.

"The reason why it's topical now isn't just because the federal government is using a similar rescue model to bail out Wall Street but also because of presidential nominee, John McCain's involvement both then and now."

MCCAIN, GRAMM, SUPPORTED WALL STREET DE-REGULATION

Economic experts say that McCain Advisor Phil Gramm and others are to blame for the current crisis that is shaking Wall Street. Gramm's successful effort to pass banking reform laws in 1999, which reduced decades-old regulations separating banking, insurance and brokerage activities, helped to create the current economic crisis. In Next TV Ad, Clinton Pledges to 'Reshuffle Deck' In Favor of Hard-Working Americans

30-Second Spot Will Enter Rotation in NH and Iowa as Part of Previously Announced Ad Buy

Noting that American CEOs earn 300 times the salary of the typical worker, Hillary Clinton vows to "reshuffle" the deck on behalf of everyday Americans in a new television ad set to begin airing this week.

Invoking her own family's story -- and how her mother, despite never attending college herself, was able to see her daughter graduate from law school -- Clinton says she wants to build an economy that rewards hard-working Americans "so being middle class means something again."

"The deck is stacked in favor of those at the top," Clinton says in her campaign's new ad.

"We need to have people believing that their work will be rewarded. So I'm going to do everything I can to get that deck reshuffled," she adds.

The ad's message echoes a major theme of Clinton's campaign. In a key policy speech delivered last month in New York, Clinton declared that increasing middle-class incomes was the defining economic challenge of our time, and would be her chief pursuit as president.

The 30-second spot, entitled "Reshuffle," will hit the airwaves this week in Iowa and New Hampshire as part of the campaign's opening, five-week ad buy, which was first announced last month. It features Clinton speaking direct-to-camera, interspersed with archival photos of Clinton's family and footage of her interacting with workers at their jobsites.

Below is a script of "Reshuffle."

Hillary Clinton:

“When you see that you’ve got CEOs making 300 times what the average worker’s making you know the deck is stacked in favor of those at the top.

“I want it to be back where it was when I came of age. Where my mom who never got to go to college could see her daughter go to law school.

We need to have people believing that their work will be rewarded. So I’m going to be doing everything I can to try to get that deck reshuffled so being middle class means something again.”

Subject: A vote too far

 ProgressNow Colorado C4 Logo

Dear Friend,

Two weeks ago, I wrote asking you to contact our Colorado members of Congress, and demand they reject the right-wing 2012 federal budget proposal. This budget would destroy Medicare in ten years, slash funding for essential, basic functions of government like education and transportation, while giving away even more massive new tax cuts to the richest Americans and corporations. Literally thousands of Coloradans responded and directly contacted your members of Congress using ProgressNow Colorado's innovative online tools: which we can offer because of member support.

Now that four Colorado representatives--Cory Gardner, Doug Lamborn, Mike Coffman, and Scott Tipton--have gone on the permanent record in support of destroying Medicare by voting for the so-called "Ryan Plan," I wanted to share with you just a few of the thousands of letters Colorado voters wrote to them, both before and after their vote.

Jan in Carbondale wrote to her Congressman, Scott Tipton: "Your vote for the Ryan budget did not surprise me but I will not forget it at election time! Folks have worked hard for years and paid taxes for this coverage. As a retired senior I know how important Medicare is to us. We were self employed for over a decade and had to buy health insurance on the open market. It was expensive and was a disaster... As a social worker with the elderly I know that a major factor that has kept our senior population from bankruptcy and/or overwhelming poverty has been Medicare. I would never trust the insurance companies with taking care of our seniors' health! You are a fool to think that they would."

Daniel in Pueblo tells Rep. Tipton: "The budget proposed by Rep. Ryan is a blatant attack on the most vulnerable in our society. It is a way of balancing the federal budget to, at the same time, allow further reductions in taxes on wealthy individuals and corporations. Rep. Ryan's proposed budget relies on unproven gimmicks such as 'tax cuts will increase revenue' and 'further tax cuts for the wealthy and businesses will result in job creation.' Neither of these gimmicks has so far resulted in significant job creation..."

Lisa in Fort Collins has a message for freshman Rep. Cory Gardner: "I am an unaffiliated voter in Colorado. I am appalled at the GOP's total disregard for Americans' well-being. I am and have always been a member of the middle class, and the GOP's behavior has already done so much harm to so many people. Please remember, we elected you and we can and will remove you from office at the next election should you continue to disregard what is best for us and all Americans!"

Cynthia in Fort Collins, to Rep. Gardner: "After working all my life and consistently contributing to welfare of social funds in order to receive Social Security and Medicare, I now have to face an uncertain future at the age of 66? How reckless and arrogant can Congress be to propose cuts that hit the most vulnerable citizens. What about military cuts and equal taxes for the wealthy? My faith in politicians has gone from some to none."

Around the nation as members of Congress went home for Easter recess, Republicans who supported the "Ryan Plan" budget have been greeted with outrage from their angry constituents (House Republicans face backlash at home over budget plan, Los Angeles Times, 4/23/2011). There is a growing sense among many Republicans that they have made a terrible mistake by voting for the privatization of Medicare, and massive cuts to vital government services while giving new tax breaks to the rich. This is not the “fiscal responsibility” they promised Americans.

Now we fight back. For going on seven years now, ProgressNow Colorado has taken the fight to Colorado conservatives when they vote against the best interests of our state. Between now and Election Day 2012, every Colorado voter needs to know what Reps. Gardner, Tipton, Coffman and Lamborn have committed to: just as we’ve done with their right-wing predecessors.

But we can’t do it without you . We never have, actually. Citizen support for ProgressNow Colorado is how we helped stop Bob Beauprez, Marilyn Musgrave, Bob Schaffer, and Ken Buck. If your goal in the next 18 months is to hold the right wing in Colorado accountable for their senseless attacks on the institutions that make our country great, I firmly believe there is no better investment than ProgressNow Colorado.

Don’t take my word for it—ask ex-Rep. Marilyn Musgrave. Please click here to chip in \$20 or whatever you can, either as a one-time or recurring monthly donation.

Because 2012 is going to be a big, big year.

Sincerely,

Alan Franklin

Subject: Greenpeace

Attachments: Greenpeace Pledge.pdf

John - Greenpeace asked us to sign their pledge (attached). We originally told them we are not signing pledges. Then, apparently on the ropeline, HRC signed Tom Steyer's NextGen pledge. When Greenpeace read in the press that we agreed to that pledge, they came back about theirs.

As you know (and suggested), we've been trying to follow a no-pledge-signing policy. Not to mention, Greenpeace's pledge includes a commitment not to accept contributions from fossil fuel interests. I am told they intend to be aggressive in pressuring candidates to sign their pledge, and may be more so with HRC since they will view the NextGen petition as undermining our no-pledges policy.

To address this, our thought was to explain to Greenpeace what happened and say that we are not going to sign their pledge, but that we would give them a statement (see draft below) embracing the principles of their pledge, which is mostly a democracy platform that we agree with.

Given the relationship, we wanted to check in with you before going back to Greenpeace in case you have concerns about going the statement route. Please let me know. Thanks.

I believe it's time to reclaim our democracy, reform our distorted campaign finance system, and restore access to the ballot box in all 50 states.

That starts with reversing Citizens United. As president, I'll appoint Supreme Court justices who recognize that Citizens United is bad for America. If necessary, I'll fight for a constitutional amendment that overturns it. But I won't stop there—I'll also fight to increase transparency in our politics by requiring federal contractors to full disclose their political spending and calling on the Securities and Exchange Commission to require that publicly traded companies do the same. And I'll get rid of the special tax breaks that are going to oil and gas companies and use that money to invest in making America the clean energy superpower of the 21st century.

And I believe nothing is more vital to our democracy than protecting our right to vote. We should be making it easier to vote, not harder. I'll fight to restore the full protections of the Voting Rights Act. I believe all Americans should be automatically registered to vote on their 18th birthdays, unless they opt out. Every state should have at least 20 days of early in-person voting. And no one should ever have to wait more than 30 minutes to cast a ballot.

Citizens United and its aftermath have twisted and perverted our democratic system. Now the deck is stacked even more in favor of those at the top. But as Al Smith, another Democrat from New York, once said, "All the ills of democracy can be cured by more democracy." So that's what we need now: more transparency, more accountability, and above all, more citizens exercising their right to vote.

LCV Launches $1.5 Million "Flat Earth Five" Program to Defeat Five Climate Deniers

The League of Conservation Voters (LCV) announced this week the launch of a new $1.5 million program aimed at defeating five climate change deniers in the House of Representatives this election cycle. Reps. Ann Marie Buerkle (NY-24) and Dan Benishek (MI-1) are the first candidates named to the program, called the "Flat Earth Five." A new House incumbent will be named to the program each week over the next three weeks.

Earlier this week, LCV Senior Vice President of Campaigns Navin Nayak was featured on MSNBC's Hardball with Chris Matthews, where he talked about the "Flat Earth Five." Click here to view the video.

LCV, MCV, and Hunter and Anglers Announce Partnership to Defeat Rehberg

Earlier this month, Montana Hunters and Anglers Leadership Fund, Montana Conservation Voters, and the League of Conservation Voters announced a major partnership to defeat Congressman Dennis Rehberg's bid to represent Montana in the United States Senate. Last week, a $350,000 television ad campaign began airing, targeting Rehberg's record on issues related to Montana's outdoor heritage.

The ad, launched in the Billings, Missoula, and Great Falls markets, is sponsored by the Montana Hunters and Anglers Leadership Fund and will air through July. The League of Conservation Voters has spent an additional $337,053 on door to door canvassing to date in Montana. Click here to view the ad.

LCV Launches Major TV Ad Buy Criticizing Heller Votes

This week, LCV launched a major $150,000 television ad campaign criticizing Nevada Senator Dean Heller for voting to protect tax breaks for Big Oil at the expense of clean energy. The ad, which is running in the Reno market, asks constituents to contact Senator Heller and urge him to vote to end oil industry tax breaks, which continues to be one of LCV's top legislative priorities. Click here to view the ad.

Heller's extreme voting record has earned him an abysmal 14% lifetime score on LCV's National Environmental Scorecard. The non-partisan scorecard is a nationally accepted yardstick used to rate members of Congress on environmental and clean energy issues. For more information, visit <http://www.lcv.org/scorecard>.

Safe Chemicals Act Passes Senate Committee

We are pleased to report that this week the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee passed the Safe Chemicals Act affirming the urgent need to reform the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) in order to protect public health and the environment from toxic chemicals. This week's vote was the first on significant TSCA reform in over 35 years, despite a growing body of scientific evidence that demonstrates the link between chemicals in our everyday products and rising incidences of health problems, particularly in children.

The public can no longer afford to wait while Congressional Republicans and the industry employ tactics of deception and delay. The time for action is now. Click here to urge your senators to pass the Safe Chemicals Act.

GiveGreen: Because not all money is "green"

10/18/2016

With only 100 days to go until Election Day, now is the time to donate to pro-environment political candidates and if you care about the environment, the best giving strategy is to “bundle” your contributions with contributions from others who share your environmental values. Bundling through LCV Action Fund’s GiveGreen magnifies the power of your contribution by calling attention to the environmental values that drive you to support the candidate in the first place. LCV Action Fund has already raised and contributed over $1 million in support of environmental candidates this cycle. Help us reach our goal of raising at least $1.5 million. Brian Deese, a senior adviser to President Barack Obama, will travel to Ottawa, Canada, today to talk to officials in Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's new government about cooperating on climate change and energy issues.

The meeting comes two weeks before diplomats from nearly 200 nations arrive in Paris in hopes of clinching a new international agreement to curb emissions - and it could signal a reset of the U.S.-Canada relationship on climate change after years of tension between Obama and former Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Trudeau, like Harper, supported approving the Keystone XL oil pipeline, a project that Obama rejected earlier this month. But he has signaled that he is open to doing more on climate change than his predecessor.

Indeed, signs are growing that Canada is serious about cooperating with the United States on climate change. Canadian Natural Resources Minister Jim Carr, who is in Paris for a meeting of energy ministers, told the Globe and Mail in an interview late last week that he has been given a "mandate to work with U.S. and Mexican ministers to develop an ambitious North American clean energy and environment agreement."

Subject: [big campaign] Cornyn Can't Say What Republicans Will 'Give In Return' For Concessions From Democrats

Cornyn Can't Say What Republicans Will 'Give In Return' For Concessions From Democrats

<http://wonkroom.thinkprogress.org/2010/02/25/cornyn-concessions/>

This morning, Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX) refused to say what Republicans would be willing to “to give in return” if Democrats accepted GOP proposals after the bipartisan health care summit. Cornyn insisted that the Democrats must scrap the current legislation and start from scratch if they hope to win bipartisan support.

CNN anchor Kiran Chetry twice tried to ask Cornyn if there is “anything Republicans would be willing to give on in return,” but Cornyn responded by criticizing the existing legislation:

CORNYN: Really, I think it's not possible to take this bill or this proposal, this 11 page summary and to work with it around the edges. We're going to have to put it on the shelf. That's what the American people want us to do and start over and we would be glad to do that.

Watch it:

Republicans have long argued, somewhat disingenuously , that placing capping non-economic damages would reduce health care spending and Obama has signaled that he may be willing to accept some of their proposals. It's unlikely that Obama will adopt caps, but he could embrace a 'Sorry-Works' proposal . While in the Senate, Obama also co-sponsored “legislation aimed at reducing both medical errors and lawsuits through a program known as Sorry Works, rooted in the idea that injured patients value an apology as much as money.” That legislation would have given physicians who disclosed their errors “certain protections from liability within the context of the program, in order to promote a safe environment for disclosure.”

I've proposed four other areas where Democrats and Republicans can reach bipartisan agreement here . But if Cornyn's answer is any indication, Republican's are more interested in obstructing reform than passing it.

6 radio interviews and 2 coffee shops this morning. Interviews were all live or taped Detroit stations with the exception of one we did into Flint. Quick hits, mostly centered around getting out to vote. Flint came up in every one, and then education, and ACA. No flags. Every single interviewer was for her. Highlight of the morning was one of the hosts, whose stage name is "Foolish" asked a question, to which HRC replied "Well, Foolish, that is far from a foolish question." Awkward chuckles all around.

We did 2 OTRs, both at very hip coffee shops a couple of miles outside of downtown Detroit.

The first was Avalon, not too far from the Shinola Store. HRC walked in and chatted with the baristas a little, then went to one of two small sitting areas and shook a lot of hands. She had several interesting conversations, one with a woman who has cystic fibrosis, and her friend who also has it had met and chatted with HRC in NH. We'll get the audio and have the exchanges transcribed.

Second OTR was at Astro coffee, near the old Detroit train station, which was pretty striking. HRC shook a lot of hands and ordered yet more coffee. Lots of people seemed to have voted, and lots said they'd voted for her.

Back at the hotel now, likely until we leave for Cleveland this evening.

ICYMI, HRC did a 7 minute pre-taped hit on Face the Nation this morning. Dickerson began by asking if Senator Sanders should stay in the race until the end. She said that's for him to decide, she's proud to have more delegates and to have built a broad coalition that can win in November. He asked about enthusiasm on the Republican side. She said that she was proud to have gotten more votes than anyone in this race, and mentioned that she has more white support than anyone if you exclude Vermont. She got asked about Trump bring people into his coalition, she said she wanted everyone in hers. Asked about emails and played a little offense on the WaPo report this morning that made clear how many state officials, including career, we're sending what's now considered classified. Name-checked Powell and mentioned that he called this all absurd. Final question was about Libya, stemming from the NYT 2-parter last week. Handled it well.

Then we went to church. 3 to be exact.

We began at the Holy Ghost Cathedral, with about 400 congregants I'd guess. The Bishop gave a rousing introduction about how much she loves Hillary Clinton, because HRC is a woman who's been through difficult times and come out on the other side with the Glory of God.

HRC's remarks were powerful, she talked about the need for us to unite. That we need citizenship and stewardship in addition to leadership. Real togetherness message. She told the story of the prodigal son, and used it to talk to the congregation about the discipline of gratitude. She then did Flint, schools in Detroit, and then a litany on breaking down barriers. Ended by talking about the need to never grow weary doing good.

Next up was Russell Street Missionary Baptist Church

Pastor gave a nice intro, started by praising President Clinton, said "today she comes before us standing in her own shoes, with her own record, and her own vision." Mentioned Debra and other strong women from the bible.

HRC opened with love and kindness. Talked about Flint, ended by saying that we need to stand up for each other and our future.

Final church was Triumph Church. The sanctuary was a beautiful wooden dome with stained glass windows. She opened with barriers here, then praised Obama and the ACA. Talked about togetherness, and did Flint at the end.

Very good morning.

On a personal note, I just had two Coney Island hot dogs at the famous Lafayette Coney Island next to the hotel. I highly recommend. Bring your defibrillator, or ask to borrow one from USSS.

Jobs speech was great. She stuck to the script mostly, cut out a few things (didn't mention the /ideas webpage and cut out the story at the end). Only real add was a line at the end about "bad mouthing America" that some tried to seize on as a shot at Bernie, but it was (mostly) about the GOP.

The Harwood interview was a little less substantive than promised, but she did fine. Got clawbacks in there, and a lot of questions about her approach to the economy, but all in the context of Bernie, Trump, what's politically viable. She got emails as well, handled well.

Did an OTR at Kuzzo's Chicken and Waffles with the Mayor and Congresswoman Brenda Lawrence. Lots of enthusiasm, lots of selfies.

We did 4 radio interviews, into Jackson, MS, New Orleans x2, and Detroit. All very positive interviews, disproportionately about college affordability and education writ large.

More tomorrow.

Two OTRs with Governor Mark Dayton complete.

Walked into Mapps Cafe in a trendy neighborhood near U of M, greeted by about 50 patrons and 25 press.

We are now officially no longer 88 days from a press avail, but 0. Merica, Karni, Abby Philipps, and some locals asked her questions. Merica asked her about expectations today, she said were working hard, hope people turn out. Asked about Sanders' path, she declined to comment, said she's going to keep going.

Local asked about message for Minnesota voters today. Talked about breaking down barriers.

Abby Philipps asked her about Trump being the eventual nominee. She dodged. Said they all have deeply troubling views. of the WaPo asked about Trump, she said things like this need to be repudiated. She would continue speak out against bigotry.

Annie Karni asked her another expectations question (I think), she again have a pretty stock answer. She tried to ask about asking for Bernie to get out of the race, she said that everyone has to make their own decisions.

Local asked her about Trump, she talked about speaking out against insults.

She met a Somali woman who wanted to tel her she was going caucus for her through her daughter who was translation. HRC told her she would be the president for everyone.

She met another Somali American on the city council who she was impressed by.

HRC, Dayton, and the Lieutenant Governor made it to the counter ordered coffee (HRC got something called the Big Bang).

A guy came over to her at the counter and told her that he had just received a letter back from her yesterday. He had written HRC about a health problem (I think with his dad). They had a really nice exchange about how useful it was for her to hear stories like his so she can figure out how to help.

Her final real interaction before leaving was with a Somali-American girl, probably 26 or 27, who said that Somali-American youth are being marginalized and experiencing prejudice, and given her comments about the African American community, how do we know she'd be any different now? She mentioned super predator specifically. HRC said she'd used the word one time, and to look at her record. The young woman said she knew what her record was and that it was supportive of the African American community, which is why so many have supported her campaign. She mentioned the Somali-American councilman that she'd just seen, and that she'd met with members of the community last time she was in Minneapolis. The girl responded by saying something to the effect of the councilman doesn't count. HRC told her that if she believes that than maybe she should run for office. At this point the Governor intervened and the conversation ended.

Left the coffee shop for Global Market, and indoor market with food and other stands that sell various things. We got mobbed in the lobby so barely made it to the proper market everywhere. Took some selfies and then out.

Taxiing now to head to Miami.

Tom Joyner, Tom Joyner Morning Show

Roland Martin started off with a question about job growth for small businesses. Sharpton asked her about who she'd appoint as AG to protect voting rights, same with SCOTUS justices. Don Lemon, said she stopped talking about Sanders on the trail. She basically refuted that citing her rallies yesterday and proceeded to draw contrasts. Jacque Reid asked her about what can be done in communities. She talked a lot about breaking down barriers. Finally, Sybil Wilkes asked her about how her presidency would be different than her husbands.

Why is it important to get out and vote, Trump, asked about WJC in the WH. Last question was about Morgan Freeman voice HRC's ads.

Madd Hatta, Host, The Madd Hatta Morning Show (97.9), Houston, TX

"Mista Madd" opened by calling her Madam President, pretending it was a slip of the tongue. Questions were college loans, talked about making America whole again. Final Q was about wages. And then the final final Q was about what she'd do about health care.

We just wrapped up some satellite TV hits into Atlanta, Oklahoma City, Denver, and Little Rock. She got or emails in all but Denver. She didn't go full-bore on her most recent trust answer, but talked about not being a natural politician, had a warm tone, all in all did well. Executive summary: This was one of Hillary's best recent rallies. She looked incredibly comfortable on stage as she spoke about the differences between her and the Republican nominees, our country's economic success under her husband, voting rights, Supreme Court and more.

Reporters noticed Hillary speaking more freely about her husband, referring to him by his first name and to his time as president. Mentions of her time in Arkansas, investment in jobs and infrastructure and debt-free college got the most applause. She got a lot of nods when she said, "its not enough to create opportunities for my granddaughter, I want to create opportunities for everybody."

She gave a similar speech at each, sort of an abbreviated new stump, did togetherness, mothers of the movement, health care, love and kindness. First one was probably a little better organized, but crowd at each was fired up. Lots of applause and lots of individual cheers.

Left there and flew to Nashville, where we joined Tony Goldwyn and the Mayor Megan Barry for a coffee stop at Fido, near Vanderbilt. The place was packed, she ordered some coffee and took lots of photos, spoke to the owner and his son for awhile. On small thing to note: on the way in Tony asked her what she thought of Trump's David Duke comments this morning. She replied that it was "pathetic" under her breath, which has made a little news (in a good way).

The rally at Meharry Medical college was high-energy. Tony Goldwyn did LONG but solid intro. HRC visited an overflow room with about 400. 800 in the main room. She told the story again about the young, affluent white guy that emailed her after her Harlem speech and said he'd been arrested but through connections his parents made the charges go away. All people must be equal under the law.

We left and went to the Statehouse which was electric. Who knew there were that many Democrats in Georgia. She addressed the Democratic Caucus and did a short version of her stump that was pretty crisp. She used a line about spending 10 months crafting policies, and while the press may have thought that was boring, she's very proud of it. People loved it. There were no press in the room.

We took many a selfie while wading through throngs of people, with more pouring over the balconies, and headed to Octane coffee shop for an OTR. Usher was going to join us but got stuck in traffic...

Dan Merica asked her if she was jealous that she didn't get Christie's endorsement, to which she responded with a prolonged smile (you could see the gears turning), and then said "Dan, I really like you. I really really like you." They are basically courting each other at this point.

She got one question from local CBS, general about why she's in Georgia. She gave a stock answer about being a good partner if she's lucky enough to win.

- Fair observation
- We laid out a lot of policy in the beginning
- I wanted people to know my plans, etc
- Now we have some opportunities to talk about values at stake, breaking down barriers.
- Sense of convergence
- We've laid out the work we want to do.
- Now we can build on that about how we unite the country and have conversations about the future again.

3) Ohio/Bernie NAFTA hit

- Americans are asking who can stop other countries from hurting their workers and do a Manufacturing Renaissance...rest of answer we provided- got in both Ex-Im investments in Ohio and name checked the tire factory that benefitted from the New Markets Tax credit in Sumter.

4) Protestor last night

- Poor choice of words
- Wouldnt' use them today's
- Life's work
- Lifting up children and young people
- Never got the chance they deserved
- School to prison pipeline
- Going to keep being a champion
- Break down the barriers, economic and racism

5) Trump/Supporters are former Trump supporters.

- Too soon to make judgements about this.
- NV Caucuses stat on turnout

6) People say their second choice is Bernie, seems to be an appetite for radical change.

- People are disappointed and feel like they've been let down.

Started the day with an interview with Joe Madison, she called him on our way to SC Strong in North Charleston.

Opened with a PBS story on the wealth gap growing. She talked about her plans and inequality in general. Follow up was about Obama's hesitancy to have targeted efforts, instead focusing on the all boats rise with the tide notion, so she skipped the Obama piece and talked about Clyburn's 10-20-30 , her own plans.

Then he played Gwen Carr's comments lasts night, quoted some of her lines including the one about HRC seeking them out, and compared it to Kennedy going to see MLK when he was arrested in Alabama. HRC gave a strong answer about being humbled, being a mother and a grandmother.

Gitmo Q at the end, answer tracked with her statement yesterday.

SC Strong went well. She did some very brief opening remarks, had a couple of the round table participants share their stories, and then we shuffled the press out.

Dropped by the Longshoremen's, she thanked everyone and asked for their vote. Great reception, they were very grateful that she came to the hall.

On the way to the airport we called Rhonda Rawlings for her show.

Rhonda started with minimum wage. HRC stuck to her standard lines, mentioned equal pay, got a follow up on why $12 and defended it well.

College affordability. She said she think debt free public education is achievable. Covered student debt as well.

Breaking Down Barriers forum with the mothers in Greenville...talked about how amazing it was, then asked about policing. HRC talked about their ability to turn grief into action.

Ended with Obama's legacy.

Alpha Kappa Alpha event went well. She did some of her remarks, some ad libbing. She reprised her town hall Q from last night where she was asked about trust and forgiveness, repeated what she said about the importance of forgiveness and cited Mandela as our greatest example. Worked a rope line at the end for a fair amount of time.

Did two local affiliates before headed off to Sumter. CBS and NBC locals. Talked about the state of the race, why she's in SC, Gitmo, and a quick Q about emails and Benghazi in CBS. NBC asked her about SC, Trust, Trump, Bernie supporters and how to bring them around if she wins, and one interesting question about her unique ability to energize rooms with minorities in them.

We're in Sumter now at Moore College. She's been talking for 45 minutes. Covered it all! Possible impending Q&A...

Mothers of the Movement Event

Here's a summary, but for those of you that didn't watch...it was quite something.

She opened by acknowledging Herb Buhl, who she worked with when she was down here working for CDF in the 1960s. Told a funny story about not knowing how to drive a stick shift and him lending her a manual car.

She briefly told the stories of the mothers and the children they lost.

Guns are the leading cause of death among black men, more than the other leading 9 causes of death combined. There was an audible sigh in the audience.

Talked about Gabby Giffords, and the 9 year old girl shot along with the others that day.

No fly list.

Politics are hard, I know that. But sometimes the hard things are sometimes the things that are most important to do. President Obama wants to make guns a voting issue and I agree completely.

Please welcome these remarkable people who are taking this journey on behalf of all of us.

HRC turned it over to the guests.

Sabrina Fulton: "She walked in as a Presidential candidate, walked out as a compassionate mother."

No one took notes for her, she took notes for herself.

Maria Hamilton, mother of Dontre Hamilton, told her story.

Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis.- told her story. I have watched her bring people and countries back into the fold back into the fray, and she has done a good thing.

Gwen Carr- Talked about all the outreach, how HRC came to them. Wondering what the catch was. "There was no catch, she was just genuinely concerned." I endorse her, because she endorsed us first.

Geneva Reed-Veal, Sandra Bland's mom. Did a wonderful rant on the media and how tired she was of them. Go out and vote. We have 9 months to put her in, she's the new baby."There are no secret emails."

Mark Kelly: X percent of children that die from gun violence in the developing world die in the US.

Gabby- Here to talk about Hillary Clinton, who is tough, she is courageous, she will fight to make our families safer. In the WH she will stand up to the gun lobby. Thanks why I'm voting for Hillary. Speaking is difficult for me but come January I want to say these two words...Madame President.

Standing ovation from the room, someone stood up and yelled "Madame President!" Everyone went nuts.

HRC said thanks to everyone, talked about their courage. I hope this is a movement that lasts, and ended to work a rope line.

At the very end, she briefly spoke to Alex Wagner on the rope line who was there with The Circus. I'm not sure it checked the box for us, but they talked briefly about how amazing the mothers were, what a moving event it was HRC met with the United Farm Workers (UFW) and earned their endorsement by the end of the meeting. Julie captured this unexpected moment on video--it was special! We'll be working with UFW to discuss the roll out plan. They've asked their members to hold the news.

- She reiterated her commitment to fight for CIR with a pathway to citizenship; protect and implement DACA and DAPA; and explore other ways to protect undocumented people via executive action ("create new categories").
- She stated support for UFW's legislative proposal to expand overtime pay for farm workers in CA, so overtime is av. after 40 hours/week or 8 hours/day.
- She was asked to help in the dispute between the UFW and CA-based Gerawan Farming. She said she's do everything possible. After the meeting, she had a private conversation with Arturo and expressed caution b/c of campaign.
- She was asked about healthcare for the undocumented community. Stated her support for all undocumented people to be able to buy in the exchange, but acknowledged that most people don't have the resources to afford it. She also said she would work to make the exchanges available to all, including subsidies, but immediately linked it to CIR. Also wants to work with states like CA and the UFW to explore other ways to provide HC
- Re Central American kids, she said government funded legal counsel for UCs and working with El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to take down drug cartels and build the region.
- She was asked if she would appoint Obama to the SCOTUS. She said he would be a very good candidate, but she wouldn't have that power...and he probably wants a normal life. It was a fun exchange bet. her and the farm workers.

Just met with the farm workers for an hour here in Palo Alto. Very positive experience. I'll let Lorella expand, but from outside the room there was a lot of clapping and cheering, and chanting of Sí Se Puede.

Two SC radio interviews today:

1) We did a repeat with Cynthia Hardy that ended up being a very brief conversation HRC joined in progress about health disparities in communities of color.

2) She did a slightly tougher but ultimately very strong interview with Judi Gatson of 103.1 KISS FM. She asked HRC about her recent comments on not being in this for herself, and said that some doubt that. The answer was very strong, and invoked a little reflection on sexism. She asked about youth, but the framing was interesting, which was that BdB and Eric Garner's mom endorse, but children of BdB and Eric Garner's sister do not. The other question most of note was Judi observing that she hears people in the community say that HRC embraces Obama only to pander to the AfAm population. Interesting that that broke through, (Stephanie if you talked to her I'd be curious to hear more about how often she's hearing that), HRC's answer was good, she said that Senator Sanders claiming that was offensive, that she nominated him at the convention, campaigned for him, worked for him for 4 years, and that it "affects" her "personally" to hear Sanders and his supporters say that stuff.

Finance event in Atherton was largely uneventful. She did take questions. She dinged Uber when talking about the Kalamazoo shooter, which thrilled many in the audience here in Silicon Valley, I'm sure. No encryption questions.

One more finance event and then we're off to LA to spend the night.

Left there and dos two back of house visits, Caesars and Harrah's. Bernie was at Harrah's immediately before us, stayed 5 minutes and left. We spent about 25 shaking hands and telling people where to caucus.

Left there and went to 2 caucus sites, the second of which she's working the (long) line at as we speak.

The Bernie folks are definitely here, but our organizers tell us these are very strong locations for us.

We visited the home of Vicki Early, a retired California utility company employee who moved to Nevada to buy her first home, and installed solar panels on the roof, which she could afford with the Public Utility Commission offsets on her fixed income until they got rolled back. She and her boyfriend Tyrone showed HRC the panels in the back yard and told her story. HRC had the press come in closer to listen and then dos brief remarks of her own on the importance of this issue for people like Vicki. Pretty great stuff.

Next we went to Youthbuild, an organization with a Nevada chapter that builds houses for Habitat for Humanity. We walked through a big warehouse where HRC individually met about 15 workers. She was intrigued by how most of them found the place, which was through Craigslist, and probed them on what they were learning and what they wanted to do next. Most wanted to continue in the building trades. She spoke briefly, and invited the Youthbuild and Habitat folks to speak as well.

We've also squeezed in two SC radio interviews. Both went well, talked about the Clyburn's endorsement, support for President Obama, her plans on college affordability.

Headed to the town hall with high school students now.

Women and Families Roundtable:

Very engaging discussion, topics ranged from early childhood education to food deserts to Flint. HRC brought up Flint proactively, and a woman stood up and said that she had family there, appreciated HRC saying that, her work there, and that her assessment was exactly right. Audience was diverse across the board, lots of millennials and lots of young people who work for various NGOs and advocacy groups with a lot of very good questions and passionate comments. At the end HRC commented on her life's work, figuring out how to make difference in people's lives as opposed to promising them the moon, and making sure lives are better when you're done than when you started. Wasn't too hot but poignant and noticeable following 45 minutes of discussing the importance of reading to your children every day.

We're now going to divert course and make a pit stop at a woman's house who has been affected by the Nevada Public Utility Commissions retroactive rate changes on people selling solar back to the grid. Pool is with us.

South Carolina was quite something. Good crowd of about 450/500 at Denmark-Olar Elementary School (home of the Vikings). HRC stuck largely to her remarks and outlined her $125 billion plan to improve underserved communities, and took questions on just about everything: social security, health care multiple times, body cameras, Flint, homeless vets, Trump, student loans, who she's pick for VP, and a little girl who gave her a drawing that said on it: "I'm not bossy I have leadership skills." It was a very engaged, high-energy affair.

Following the town hall and a long ropeline, we did 2 TV stand ups and a print interview. Discussion in both revolved around race relations, the state of the race, and education, which HRC discussed at length in a dilapidated older locker room with paint people off the walls in the background.

Our print interviewer, Princess Williams, was really impressive. She won an award last year for best student journalist in a college under 5000 students from the South Carolina Press Association. She was nervous but did a great job, asked HRC about education, what we can't do beyond government programs to help level the playing field, attracting young voters, and what life is like off the campaign trail.

We're in the air now headed back north to St. Paul for the Humphrey-Mondale Dinner.

Also just did a 10 minute satellite hit with Al Sharpton. They talked about heading to Nevada and her strategy there, he asked her how she would distinguish he civil rights record, then Flint, millennial women, voting rights, and a question about Cruz's comments on Flint and Katrina both being cities with crisis and two very liberal mayors. She didn't engage most of the answer and at the end said "that's not the world I live in, and not the world I'd govern as President."

Strong interview in substance and tone.

They asked her about how she's feeling and expectations, she just talked about how excited she was to be out talking to people and her love for New Hampshire.

We took a few more photos and talked to WMUR for a few minutes, which will air at noon.

Dan O'Neil, former Dodd and O'Malley supporter but '92 Clinton supporter joined them for omelettes. Following breakfast, some more selfie-taking ensued as did a conversation with a couple of vets. Restaurant felt overwhelmingly supportive.

We went back to the hotel and taped 6 TV interviews with local and Boston affiliates. Lots about the state of the race here and the weather. Most asked about Warren which she handled well, a couple of transcripts questions and a good exchange with FOX on sexism in politics.

From there we went to Manchester Community College. Crowd of about 1100, she did a few things differently, including calling Bernie out for accepting DSCC money that came in part from Wall Street.

We taped Rachel Maddow after the event. It opened with the staffing question and then covered the waterfront...Flint, trust, attacks, transcripts. We let it go so Rachel would spend more time on the positive which she did.

After Maddow we went to the Velcro factory. She went table to table in their cafeteria which looked like a Johnny Rockets, shaking hands, sometimes sitting down for brief conversations. Press pool got some good stuff.

We're now back at the Radisson waiting to depart for WMUR where we'll do a quick live hit on WMUR, she'll simply make a one minute pitch to

The crowd was extraordinarily supportive. Her remarks were brief (12/15) but strong, with powerful response.

Afterwards she took photos, she did a very quick local standup in the sanctuary (all about Flint), met with a group of local pastors and went into the stakeholders/electeds meeting with the mayor.

On the way to the airport we called the editor of the National Newspaper Association, quick 5 minute interview on the importance of Flint and their being many other Flints. Transcript to follow.

DRAFT 3-20-15

John Podesta to Receive the Ansel Adams Award from The Wilderness Society

Award recognizes leadership and tireless work to protect America's wild public lands

Contact: Michael Reinemer, 202-429-3949, michael_reinemer@tw.s.org

WASHINGTON, DC (March XX, 2015) – Today the Wilderness Society announced that its Ansel Adams Award is being presented to John Podesta for his tireless work in protecting America's wild public lands. Mr. Podesta served as Counselor to President Obama from January 2014 to March 2015 and as White House Chief of Staff in the Clinton administration, from 1998 to 2001.

The Ansel Adams Award is conferred on current or former federal officials who have demonstrated exceptional commitment to the cause of conservation and the fostering of an American land ethic.

"John Podesta has played a tremendous leadership role in shaping our nation's conservation legacy," said Jamie Williams, president of The Wilderness Society. "In the Obama administration, he led efforts to protect some the most magnificent wild places across the country, and he implemented a critically important action plan to address climate change."

In presenting the award to Podesta, The Wilderness Society cited his key role in major conservation actions over the past two decades. Those actions include the Obama administration's protection of Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks, the San Gabriel Mountains and Pacific Remote Islands as national monuments and the proposed wilderness designation for the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. During his tenure as Counselor to President Obama, John Podesta oversaw the designation and expansion of seven national monuments, protecting more than 258 million acres federal lands and waters. Podesta has also been a champion of the President's efforts to tackle climate change, including EPA's proposed rule to reduce carbon emissions from coal fired power plants and a path-breaking agreement with China to reduce global warming emissions.

During the Clinton administration, he was instrumental in the establishment of the "roadless rule," which protected millions acres of our national forests from logging and road-building. Among his many other conservation achievements in the Clinton administration, he led efforts to establish 19 national monuments, including the California Coastal and the Grand Canyon-Parashant national monuments, which all together protect more than three million acres of invaluable natural and cultural resources. He is the author of The Power of Progress: How America's Progressives Can (Once Again) Save Our Economy, Our Climate and Our Country.

[Mr. Podesta should feel free to add a comment to the release if he's inclined]

The Ansel Adams Award is presented on behalf of the renowned photographer who was an outspoken advocate for defending the nation's natural heritage. Past winners include former Secretaries of the Interior Ken Salazar and Bruce Babbitt, former Arizona Congressman Mo Udall, Earth Day founder Gaylord Nelson, President Jimmy Carter, former Senate Majority Leader George

10/18/2016

Mitchell, and Senators Bill Roth, John Chafee, John Kerry and Joe Lieberman as well as Congressmen Phillip Burton and John Lewis.

The Wilderness Society is the leading conservation organization working to protect wild public lands and inspire Americans to care for our wild places. Founded in 1935, and now with more than 500,000 members and supporters, The Wilderness Society has led the effort to permanently protect 110 million acres of wilderness and to ensure sound management of our shared national lands.

Subject: Welcome to the First Year E-Newsletter

Welcome to the first edition of the First Year 2017 project e-newsletter. By now we hope you've had a chance to sample firstyear2017.org, the Miller Center's ambitious new project devoted to the next president's make-or-break first year.

Starting once each month -- and eventually once each week -- this newsletter will highlight new content and features posted to the First Year website, preview upcoming essays, and give subscribers advance notice of engaging events and forums we will convene in cities across the country in the months ahead.

You are currently subscribed to receive this email newsletter. But if you'd prefer not to receive it, simply scroll to the bottom of this email and click 'opt out.'

Join us Oct. 21 at 3 p.m. for the launch event at Decatur House in Washington, D.C. Two lively panels featuring scholars and experts on the presidency will discuss the promise and perils of a president's first year in office. Then Joshua Bolten, former White House Chief of Staff for President George W. Bush, will keynote a conversation, "How to win the first year."

Read Elaine Kamarck's provocative essay, "Run the Government Before It Runs Over You":

In today's America, the actual government a president leads is an afterthought—until it damages his or her presidency. To head off failure that can affect not just their time in office but also their permanent legacies, new presidents need to become familiar in their first year with two critical aspects of the government they inherit: what it can and cannot do, and what it does and does not know.

Three and a half minutes well spent. Check out this engaging new video that explains why a president's first year is so critical.

Why the GOP Should Like Ike. University of Virginia History Professor Will Hitchcock, the director of academic programs at the Miller Center, has some unexpected advice for the crowded stage of candidates vying for the Republican presidential nomination:

The Republican playbook for winning back the presidency is easy to find. It was written by one of America's most popular presidents. It produced two lopsided victories in national elections. When Republicans use this playbook, they win big. When they ignore it, they lose. The author of this strategy? Not Nixon. Not Reagan. Not Bush 41 or Bush 43. It was Ike.

From: Bruce Darling

Please CALL Senator Harkin's Office NOW to and urge him to support people with disabilities and home care workers

More Info

Tell the Senator to support Senator Johanns' amendment !

TAKE ACTION NOW!

CALL Senator Harkin at (202) 224-3254. Tell the Senator's staff:

Senator Harkin has always been a friend to the disability community. So I am calling to support Senator Johanns' amendment in the Appropriations Committee to the Department of Labor appropriation that would prevent the Department of Labor from finalizing, implementing or enforcing changes to the Companionship Exemption that would hurt people with disabilities and the workers who provide us with services and supports to live independently in the community! Without this amendment there will be devastating effects in New York, where we have no one on the Appropriations Committee to represent us. Please urge the Senator to support this amendment.

The Department of Labor (DOL) has proposed changes in federal labor rules that will hurt people with disabilities and attendants who support our independence. These changes will most seriously impact people who have the most significant disabilities and rely on Medicaid services to live in the community and their attendants.

In short, the proposed changes will:

- Force seniors and people with disabilities into institutions;
- Cut the take-home pay of attendants;
- Reduce the attendant workforce;
- Force people with disabilities to cut the hours of trusted attendants and bring strangers into their homes; and
- Devastate consumer directed attendant programs.

Many national disability organizations -- including ADAPT, the National Council on Independent Living (NCIL), and the National Council on Disability (NCD) -- have raised concerns about these proposed changes and urged the Department of Labor to work with the disability community to resolve them. Instead of acknowledging the issue and working with the Disability Community to resolve it, the Department of Labor has continued to push ahead with these changes. (You can learn more about this issue at www.DOLoffMYbody.org)

TODAY, Senator Johanns will be submitting an amendment to the Department of Labor's appropriation that prevents DOL from finalizing, implementing or enforcing these changes until concerns about the proposed rules have been addressed.

SO PLEASE TAKE ACTION, call Senator Harkin at (202) 224-3254 and tell the staff:

Senator Harkin has always been a friend to the disability community. So I am calling to support Senator Johanns' amendment in the Appropriations Committee to the Department of Labor appropriation that would prevent the Department of Labor from finalizing, implementing or enforcing changes to the Companionship Exemption that would hurt people with disabilities and the workers who provide us with services and supports to live independently in the community! Without this amendment there will be devastating effects in New York, where we have no one on the Appropriations Committee to represent us. Please urge the Senator to support this amendment.

AFTER YOU CALL...

Share this alert with family and friends and urge them to call as well.

Nancy Becker Kennedy I respect you enormously, Linda but We Don't Live in Nirvana. We live in a state where were about to get our IHSS cut 4.4% which is the others shoe dropping from the 8% that was cut last year and the 20% cut to IHSS that the governor tried to cut but was stopped by the courts. The IHSS workers and consumers will get less money to live on this month and would get far less money if the governor had his way. If you read the letter which I will repost here from the National Association of Medicaid directors none of the cash-strapped states could afford this overtime pay. They are currently slashing Medicaid but it just and throwing seniors and people with disabilities into budget junk health plans that don't even have their specialties to cut money. Publicly funded IHSS services are not open-ended. They are finite and determined by the revenues that the state collects that year. Instead of paying overtime, the governor's administration announced in an Olmstead meeting that they will cap IHSS provider hours to 160 hours per consumer to avoid paying overtime. Trailer bill language was already prepared to that effect.

If the D.O. L. really wanted to make this a better job for providers it would provide robust experienced backup services for IHSS consumers so their lives are not thrown up in the air when their providers are sick, that way IHSS workers could have paid sick leave and paid vacations like they have in New York. By cynically asking for overtime pay which they know in state-funded Medicaid IHSS programs can not pay, all it does is give the unions two or three union dues out of a house were they used to get one, as families and people have to hire one and two more providers. If the DOL instead made the job better with quality backup services, sick pay, and vacation pay this would cost a fraction of overtime pay, and would have a real chance of being provided.

70% of California providers are family providers who will see their family income radically cut from 280 hours 160 hours. I was on a phone call with Tony Anderson of the ARC of California, saying that the family providers are greying and they are not professional providers who want to go out and get two and three jobs to supplement the cut they will receive an hours taking care of their family member. And if they have to leave the house to get that income than they will not be able to take care of their disabled family member. There were people on that call who are severely disabled with their providers with relationships that would be severed in the providers hours were cut almost in half.

We live in the real world and this will be the real fallout of the passage of his D.O.I laws as written, with no consultation to the disability community or in-depth talk with the possible ramifications to their own rank-and-file providers, which is why we must stop these rules and insist that rank-and-file providers and the disability community he consulted to work out a compromise. The ADAPT (American Disabled for Attendant Programs Today) / NCIL (National Council on Independent Living) compromise called for an elimination of the companionship exemption in privately funded third-party agencies while leaving government-funded Medicaid IHSS out of it. This is why we need to call and get our friends to call Senator Harkin now and tell him not to hurt people with disabilities and home care providers by approving the D.O I Department of Labor rules as they are written now it will really hurt those of us on Medicaid publicly funded IHSS. And that instead they should wait for a compromise that is reach by consulting with all parties and is harmless to all.

Philip Bennett Hello, Linda L R Roberts. I have been a home care worker for close to 37 years. I'm touched that you want to end my "exploitation" by putting more money into the system.

My question is: where will the money come from? From the federal government which is sixteen trillion dollars in debt? From the states which are struggling also and, like the home care agencies, are under no obligation to pay overtime (outside of emergencies) as long as they can split up workers' hours?

Your Facebook page indicates that you are in the business of providing legal services. So I don't have to explain the Fair Labor Standards Act to you. If the money's not there to pay at overtime rate after the fortieth hour, our hours will be reduced. How does that help us?

Perhaps you think we're being exploited because we work long hours. Yes, often we do, and I'm very thankful for that because, at our low hourly wage, that's how we can support ourselves. I always prefer a case with many hours and the vast majority of my fellow home care workers feel the same. You see, Linda, it's not like we're constantly on our feet lifting people in and out of bed every minute of the day. Once we perform the important tasks of the job as well as the not so important chores which help the person we assist have a comfortable and productive life and, as long as we're ready to stop what we're doing whenever we're asked by our consumer, we can relax with a book, with a computer (which I'm doing now while on the job), watch TV, or whatever. Unless we're working a case that requires constant attention or with a very demanding and emotionally taxing consumer, this is a dream job!

So, in light of the fact that, without the millions or even billions of dollars required to pay this pie-in-the-sky overtime, we workers, as well as the people we assist, will be royally screwed, please explain why you disagree with my petition. Perhaps, instead of pie-in-the-sky, you can work reviving the Community Choice Act or increase our hourly wage so we're on par with nursing home workers or assure that all home care workers get extra vacation and sick pay. I look forward to your response, Linda L R Roberts .

Here's a first cut at HRC's remarks for the IDP dinner. Would love your thoughts. She is reviewing as well. A few notes:

- This opens by recalling previous collaborations with the other Dem candidates. To me, this is a chance to seem big and inclusive when they are likely to be trying to drive wedges. Easy to cut, but might be a nice grace note.
- This draft throws out some red meat early on with Donald Trump to get the crowd jazzed at the top. Then she can do your affirmative agenda and circle back to the fuller contrast later on. Plenty of other ways to organize this, but a good hit at the top seemed important.
- Given the growing controversy over the leaked Planned Parenthood video, with Boehner calling for hearings and other GOPers piling on, we should think about whether this is a good time to join the battle and come to Planned Parenthood's defense, or whether it's wiser to stay away. For now, its in here.
- Finally, you'll see a hit on Governor Branstad for his veto of mental health funding. Matt thinks this is a good fight to pick and I agree. Gives you a chance to make an emotional appeal on an issue you care about so much. The Governor is also riling folks up with his education cuts, so that's in here as well.

Am going to keep working this and punching up the language, but wanted to share early draft in case folks have initial reactions.

Watching the Tea Party stop anything from getting accomplished in Washington has made me cringe since I was elected in 2012.

I am determined that it doesn't have to be this way, which is why I am writing you today. My friends at House Majority PAC are working day and night to kick the Tea Party out of Washington. Washington isn't working. President Obama is trying hard to do so much, but with Speaker Boehner and the Tea Party, something has to change.

Here's what we're up against:

- A Tea Party focused on playing politics by relentlessly attacking the president
- Tea Party radicals pushing for the largest GOP majority in 60 YEARS!
- A Tea Party determined to impeach Obama

Standing up for the president means that we stop the GOP from continuing their assault on a woman's right to choose, stop the GOP's attempts to destroy our environment, and pass the rest of the president's agenda.

But House Majority PAC can't do it alone. Can you click here and donate before their HUGE FEC deadline? Your donation will be put to work instantly stopping the Tea Party and supporting the president's agenda.

Thanks for standing up for the president,

From Leader Nancy Pelosi:

I just left a meeting on the outside spending in some of our tightest races and it's downright SCARY. The latest numbers show that if we don't get a huge surge, we could lose BIG, even in states like New York and California!!!

But, that's where you come in. My friends at House Majority PAC (HMP) need your urgent support before their biggest FEC deadline of the year! HMP was founded after the 2010 elections to counter Koch-fueled attacks and provide Democrats air support. We need 3 more people from Washington to step up NOW.

This Week's To Do List

Dear Fellow Patriot,

The calls and emails you have made are having an impact. Now it is the time to continue the pressure. Read below for a brief update on the status of the bills and what to do next.

The House Bill is still delayed in the House Energy and Commerce Committee. While it is unclear whether the Energy and Commerce Committee will have the votes to pass the bill out of committee, Speaker Pelosi plans to bring the bill to the House Floor this week regardless of what the committee does.

To our knowledge, the Senate Finance Committee has yet to present a bill. There have been many rumors about bipartisan compromises in the Senate Finance Committee. These compromises will still result in government take over of our health care.

In December 2013, the West African Ebola epidemic began in a village near Guéckédou, a trading town in rural Guinea, but the disease wasn't identified until February. The Guineans promptly notified health officials in neighboring countries, and in Liberia a team of researchers immediately set out for Lofa County, just over the border from Guéckédou, where a number of mysterious deaths had recently occurred. The Liberians at first assumed the deaths were caused by Lassa fever, a far less deadly disease with symptoms similar to Ebola. Liberia had no lab capable of testing for Ebola then, so the researchers sent some blood samples to France. When the results finally came back in late March showing that Ebola was spreading in Liberia too, "fear grabbed us," said Tolbert Nyenswah, who now heads the Ebola Task Force in Liberia's Ministry of Health and Social Welfare.

That first outbreak burned out quickly: there were only twelve documented cases in March and April and then none at all for six weeks. However, on May 29, the disease reappeared in Liberia's capital, Monrovia, and this time it exploded. There were cases all over the city. Nyenswah and his Liberian colleagues had never dealt with Ebola before, but doctors from the medical charity Doctors Without Borders and the US Centers for Disease Control (CDC), who had fought numerous previous Ebola outbreaks in Central Africa, were on hand to help.

Together, they warned the public through radio announcements, posters, and billboards, and sent health workers to villages throughout the country to tell people to be on the lookout for the disease. They set up a hotline so people could report cases and trained teams of investigators to visit each caller and make a tentative diagnosis based on symptoms. They also equipped a lab to do blood tests locally and built Ebola treatment centers—tent camps where patients could be isolated and receive basic care. They hired over two thousand contact tracers to identify and isolate everyone—such as close relatives of victims and health workers—who might have been exposed to the virus.

This system had worked to control twenty-four previous Ebola outbreaks in sub-Saharan Africa, but it wasn't working this time. At first five, then ten, then twenty, then forty, then more than sixty cases a day were being reported to the task force. Each infected person had fifteen to twenty “contacts”—usually family members or health workers who might have touched them—and as the epidemic took off in July, half of them went on to develop the disease as well. By early August, the treatment centers were full, the streets were strewn with bodies, and the Ebola hotline was receiving thousands of calls a week. One caller was so distraught that he went straight to the cemetery and rang the hotline from there.

In September, the CDC predicted that 1.4 million people in Sierra Leone and Liberia might succumb to the disease if the epidemic continued its swift spread. This assessment was partly based on the staggering surge of cases in Monrovia. Ebola was also devastating Guinea and Sierra Leone, but the capitals of those countries hadn't exploded with disease as Monrovia had. “The Conakry [the capital of Guinea] outbreaks have been very small, and they haven't exploded in Freetown [the capital of Sierra Leone],” Armand Sprecher, an Ebola expert with Doctors Without Borders, told New York Times reporter Norimutsu Onishi in August. “So something is different in Monrovia.... We've never seen this kind of explosion in an urban environment before.”

The epidemic in Monrovia finally began to subside in September, and today only about twenty new cases a day are being reported throughout Liberia. But over 2,800 Liberians have died from the disease, more than twice as many as in larger Sierra Leone and Guinea, and over six thousand have been infected, ten times more than in any previous Ebola epidemic. Although the number of deaths is far from the apocalypse predicted by the CDC, it's worth asking why Liberia's epidemic has been so bad. Ebola is not transmitted through the air like flu or through food and water like cholera and typhoid. It can be contracted only by touching the vomit, feces, urine, saliva, or sweat of a sick person or corpse.

Until now, controlling it was thought to be so straightforward that when the US government was forced to cut “nonessential” programs in the aftermath of the 2012 “fiscal cliff” standoff, Defense Department research on a promising Ebola drug was among the first things to be axed.¹ The World Health Organization was so sanguine about Ebola that it didn't declare the West African epidemic a public health emergency—a step that automatically mobilizes large-scale fund-raising from donors—until August 8, nearly six months after the first cases were discovered in Guinea, and nearly two and a half months after the explosive epidemic in Monrovia began.²

The virus is no different from those that caused previous outbreaks, and it is difficult to transmit.³ Patrick Sawyer, the Liberian lawyer who flew to Nigeria and died of Ebola there in July, was floridly ill on the plane, but the only people who caught the virus from him were health workers and one other passenger who touched him while helping him off the plane. No one in the household of Eric Duncan, the Liberian who died of Ebola in Texas on October 8, became infected, nor did the girlfriend of Craig Spencer, the New York doctor who contracted the disease in Guinea.

Some have suggested that Ebola had never broken out in a city such as Monrovia before, and this is what made the present epidemic unique. But in 1995, Ebola struck Kikwit, Zaire—a city of 400,000 people—and in 2001 it broke out in Gulu, Uganda, population 100,000. Health authorities then had far less experience coping with Ebola than they did on the eve of the West African epidemic, but in those cases only around 250 people died.

Another hypothesis is that Liberia's health care system, with only a few dozen doctors and fewer than two thousand underpaid nurses in a population of four million, was ill-equipped to cope with Ebola. However, emergency measures to deal with the disease outside of ordinary health care services rapidly contained previous outbreaks in Sudan, Uganda, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, which have similarly terrible health care systems.⁴

What went wrong? In October, I went to Liberia with this question in mind. I came to believe—as others have suggested—that the problem was fundamentally political.⁵ When the epidemic occurred, many ordinary Liberians were so profoundly estranged from their government that they assumed it was lying to them and actively disbelieved the warnings that Nyenswah and others were desperately broadcasting to the nation and the world.

Instead, right up until September, people continued to behave as they usually did when others became ill or died. Entire families perished because they insisted on nursing sick relatives themselves. When a Muslim dies in this part of the world, his or her relatives traditionally wash, dress, and bury the body, and groups of related families were wiped out in this way. Even trained nurses ignored the warnings, and kept administering treatment to their neighbors in order to make extra money. Scores of them died, along with their families, their other patients, and their colleagues.

By late October, the epidemic was coming under control in Monrovia, but was still throwing off sparks into the countryside as people who had contracted the virus in the capital passed it to their families in the villages. Shortly after I arrived, I learned of an outbreak that had recently killed nearly thirty people in a village called Jene Wonde, about fifty miles north of the capital in the lush countryside of palm, coconut, and banana trees near the Sierra Leone border. Ninety people had been quarantined in their homes by the village chief. What had been a lively farming community and trading center was fast becoming a ghost town. Market stalls, once stocked with food and such necessities of village life as soap, candles, matches, and plastic buckets, were empty. People from other communities shunned the villagers and wouldn't even speak to them; motorcyclists sped through, their faces covered in cloth.

The first cases in Jene Wonde occurred in late July. Earlier that month, Ebola had struck a slum on the outskirts of Monrovia, killing about seventeen people. A young Jene Wonde woman who was living there thought the cause was poison, and fled in the direction of her village. On the way, she began to feel sick and stopped in a town on the main road to consult a witch doctor. The witch doctor recognized her symptoms at once, and said there was nothing he could do. Her father, a teacher in Jene Wonde, set out to find her, but she had died by the time he reached the town. He buried her alone there that night and returned to his family the next day. Soon he and his wife and four of their other children were dead. Then a sister who brought them food and washed them died too, along with her entire family, and the families of the women who cared for them. In this way the sickness spread around the village, killing one family after another.

Throughout the summer, health officials had come repeatedly to urge the villagers to call the hotline when people became ill, but they refused. When the local nurse who runs Jene Wonde's small clinic called for an ambulance to collect a pregnant woman she suspected had the virus, the villagers practically rioted. The nurse had gone home by the time the ambulance arrived, but a crowd gathered around her house shouting insults and sent it away.

"The people from the district came and told us all the signs and symptoms, but we did not believe them," the village chief—a woman—explained when I asked her why the villagers reacted this way. "We were thinking the president"—meaning Liberian President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf, who has held office since 2006—"created it"—meaning Ebola—"to kill people."

"Ebola came and they blamed me," I was told by the nurse, who briefly fled the village and had only just returned. "They thought nurses had been given poison by the president to inject into people so they'd die and the UN would send money. Everyone in all the villages around here was believing that."

By now, the villagers had realized their error and set up their own quarantine system, overseen by a local farmer in a blue windbreaker, who carried around a sheaf of reporting forms in a battered cardboard folder. A doctor and an epidemiologist from the CDC had been posted to the area to help the villagers cope and make the quarantine as safe as possible. A special isolation center for Ebola patients opened a few days later.

Mike King

Eventually Ebola will be contained in Liberia, and next time people should be ready for it so fewer will die. Maybe none will die if new medicines are developed by then. But the virus has shed light on a far tougher problem. Many Liberians don't trust their president or her government. Early on in the epidemic, versions of the rumor that Sirleaf invented the crisis so she could dupe foreign aid donors into sending her money were aired in newspapers, on radio programs, and in Liberia's ubiquitous teashops where men gather in the afternoon to talk about politics. Even a Liberian senator claimed that the epidemic was a hoax, although he did not seem to hold the more extreme belief that President Sirleaf had actually assigned nurses to poison people in order to make the ruse more convincing.⁶

Ellen Johnson Sirleaf—Nobel Peace Prize winner, Harvard graduate, former Citibank executive and UN diplomat—is not someone you'd ordinarily suspect of plotting a dastardly scheme to poison her citizens for money. She is a remarkable and, to many, a heroic figure. In 2007, she was awarded a US Presidential Medal of Freedom for helping to end Liberia's notorious twenty-three-year cycle of civil wars.

The fighting had been extreme not only for its brutality but for its bizarre conduct. Until 1980, Liberia's ruling class had consisted almost entirely of Americo-Liberians, descendants of freed American slaves who settled there in the early 1800s. They wore three-piece suits and Edwardian dresses and took pride in what they saw as their own higher degree of civilization compared to the natives. During the civil wars, the rebels—mainly of native African descent—dressed up in Halloween costumes and wedding gowns or stormed around stark naked with Kalashnikovs, as if to dramatize the worst nightmares of the Americo-Liberians. By the time a peace deal was finally signed in 2003, hundreds of thousands of Liberians were dead and the nation was in ruins.

In the 2005 election, and in her successful reelection campaign in 2011, Sirleaf's popularity rested on a professed commitment to clean government—she'd been denouncing Africa's twin plagues of corruption and militarism since her student days in the 1960s—and also her strong American connections, which she promised would bring in far more aid and investment than her opponents. Her first administration included a dream team of Western-educated human rights lawyers and skilled businessmen who had come back to help repair their troubled country. She also enlisted a team of lawyers to negotiate better terms on contracts with foreign oil, agriculture, and mining companies, and the economy was growing briskly until Ebola struck. Donors also generously supported her ministries, and perhaps surprisingly in view of the recent epidemic, the health care system in particular showed major signs of improvement: until Ebola derailed it, rates of malaria and maternal mortality had fallen significantly.

Despite these achievements, disenchantment with Sirleaf's regime began to set in long before Ebola broke out. Late in her first term, Liberia's lively and vociferous press began reporting a series of major corruption scandals. Millions of dollars in donor funds intended for health care, agriculture, and other projects had not been accounted for.⁷ Numerous contracts with foreign gold, diamond, iron, and agriculture companies had been signed without consulting the communities that were to be affected by the projects, and nearly all of these contracts have been found to be so flawed that they violated the country's own laws.⁸ Bribes had been paid to legislators to approve offshore oil concessions, including one involving US oil giant Chevron, but President Sirleaf allowed the contract to stand anyway.⁹

This culture of impunity is partly attributable to the breakdown in public order during the civil wars, but many people I spoke to, including President Sirleaf's supporters, felt she had not done enough to confront it. Commissions of inquiry were appointed to investigate graft and reports were issued, but wrongdoers were seldom seriously punished. Many of her original cabinet members have by now resigned in dismay at the government's tolerance of corruption or been pushed out. In their places, Sirleaf appointed less-qualified associates and even put her son Charles on the board of the Central Bank. Another son, Robert, a suave entrepreneur with a Clark Gable mustache who worked at the North Carolina office of Wachovia Bank until its demise in the 2008 financial crisis, was briefly put in charge of the national oil company. Liberian lawmakers have questioned the financial probity of both sons, as well as Fumba Sirleaf, her stepson. None of them has been indicted or convicted of a crime, however.

Meanwhile, the country's economic growth has done little to improve the lives of most Liberians, over 60 percent of whom still struggle to survive on less than a dollar a day, while battling corruption in their everyday lives. Police routinely steal goods from street vendors and judges take bribes from plaintiffs.¹⁰ University students lamented to me that they had to bribe their professors and administrators with sexual favors, money, or sometimes both. "You canna pay skoo' fees unless you slee' wi' somewah," a beautiful sociology major told me.

In the countryside near Jene Wonde, the Malaysian company Sime Darby staked out a vast palm oil plantation in 2009. Only a few hundred impoverished locals have found very low-wage employment there and many more say they've lost access to sacred burial grounds and farms. In 2011, riots broke out and Sirleaf herself traveled to the area to restore order. "You are trying to undermine your own government," she said sternly. "You can't do that. If you do so all the foreign investors coming to Liberia will close their businesses and leave, then Liberia will go back to the old days."¹¹

A confidential report from the US Agency for International Development was leaked to the press in March, warning that the volatile mixture of mass poverty and unemployment, combined with resentment about elite corruption, threatens the nation's stability.¹² After the civil wars ended in 2003, Liberia never had a real truth-and-reconciliation process. There was an investigation and a report, but no trials, no punishments, and no prison terms. An aid worker who was not involved in the USAID report told me that she sometimes asks Liberians how they see the process of reconciliation. "They tend to respond more in terms of wanting inclusive development, and less in terms of criminal justice."

In other words, it's not simply that the poor want more of what the elites have; rather they see material benefits as themselves a form of justice, and as evidence that Liberian society has changed after nearly two centuries of exclusion. The Ebola rumors suggest that many people, accurately or otherwise, feel that Sirleaf has lately been betraying her promises to them. When poor Liberians see urban elites swishing by in expensive vehicles and hear of new oil deals being signed, they naturally wonder whether all that promised foreign aid and investment isn't going into some corrupt person's pocket.

Thus, when the Health Ministry requested $1.5 million in emergency funds from the Treasury to fight Ebola last spring, many Liberians assumed this was just another scam on the part of a secretive cartel of elites to steal more foreign aid. When the Jene Wondeans heard these speculations on FM radio stations, I was told they took them literally, believing that President Sirleaf had actually created the epidemic by getting government nurses to distribute the poison that caused it.

On August 12, as the Ebola epidemic was reaching its peak in Liberia, Solomon George, the legislative representative for West Point, Monrovia's largest slum and an opposition stronghold, told journalists that the dead bodies of five of his constituents had been lying in the street for four days. If they were not removed the following day, he would deliver them personally to President Sirleaf's office. The next day, the Health Ministry converted a West Point school—which had been closed since July because of the epidemic—into a community care center where Ebola patients could be isolated while awaiting a slot in a treatment unit staffed by doctors and nurses.

Although the care center was constructed to get bodies off the streets, hundreds of angry demonstrators protested outside, some claiming that the epidemic was a hoax and others believing in it but angry that their community was being used as a dumping ground for patients around the city. On the night of August 16, a group of young men raided the building and stole bedding and other supplies. Seventeen Ebola patients fled into the slum.

Four days later, President Sirleaf placed the entire West Point community under quarantine. Police and soldiers in riot gear blocked off all the roads leading in. Food prices soared immediately and angry crowds filled the streets to protest. When Miatta Flowers, the government-appointed commissioner of West Point, began escorting her family out of the slum under armed guard, a riot broke out, and two young men were shot by soldiers.¹³ One later bled to death in a hospital abandoned by its staff because of the Ebola crisis; the other is permanently disabled.

The quarantine was lifted ten days later, but in this land of rumors, questions about why Sirleaf ordered it in the first place were still in the air when I arrived in October. After all, public health officials had warned her that cordoning off such a large area risked alienating the very people whose cooperation she desperately needed to control the epidemic.

It's hard to know where fantasy starts and truth ends in Liberia, but some West Pointers told me they thought the quarantine was really a move to quash an armed rebellion, and had little to do with public health. West Point is home to precisely the people most likely to feel left behind in Sirleaf's Liberia. Most are young, poorly educated, and struggling to get by as fishermen or as traders in food, alcohol, charcoal, or used clothes in the slum's vast warren-like marketplace. Many are also prostitutes, smugglers, thieves, or drug dealers.

Rumors of a coup first emerged last July, when the US suddenly revoked the visas of three senior Liberian government officials. No reason was given, but all of them are on a list of people recommended for war crimes prosecution in Liberia's Truth and Reconciliation Commission report.¹⁴ That report also implicates Sirleaf, who admitted to the TRC commissioners that early in the civil war, she had provided modest support to the notorious warlord Charles Taylor, now serving a fifty-year sentence in a British prison for war crimes committed in neighboring Sierra Leone. In May, Jucontee Thomas Woewiyu, who had been a spokesman for Taylor in the 1990s, was arrested for lying about his involvement in war crimes on a 2006 application for US citizenship, and is now awaiting trial. In the past he has claimed that Sirleaf was far more involved in Taylor's rebellion than she admitted, and some Liberian newspapers have speculated that he could turn state witness.¹⁵

Daniel Berehulak/The New York Times/Redux
 President Sirleaf surrounded by bodyguards wearing protective gloves during a visit to the quarantined neighborhood of West Point in Liberia's capital, Monrovia, August 2014

Then in early August, Liberia's National Chronicle newspaper began publishing a ten-part series about a US-based movement to replace Sirleaf with a caretaker government overseen by the US. Part three of the series, describing a closed-door meeting in Washington between President Obama and Liberian Vice President Joseph Boakai, appeared on a Wednesday. That afternoon, police raided the National Chronicle's downtown office, arresting two journalists and ordering the newspaper shut. Philipbert Browne, the owner and editor in chief, gave a live radio interview during the raid and listeners could hear the police pounding on the doors and the staff running away from tear gas.

That evening, yet another rumor began circulating—that a shipment of weapons had disappeared from Liberia's Freeport, which abuts the northern boundary of West Point. When the president ordered soldiers to quarantine the slum two days later, and then the commissioner and her family began to leave, people panicked. "If the government was getting its own people out, anything could happen," Abdulaziz Kromah, a student who lives in West Point, told me.

Outside of West Point, few people I spoke to believe that Obama is seriously planning to take over Liberia and install a caretaker government, or that shipments of guns were distributed in West Point to stage a rebellion. Vice President Boakai has declined to discuss publicly what he spoke to President Obama about when he saw him in early August, and when I called James Tarpeh, whom the National Chronicle named as the US-based leader of the supposed future interim government, he also refused to comment on the matter.

After the quarantine ended, things settled down for a while. Then, in September, Obama announced that he was sending four thousand US troops to Liberia to fight Ebola—more than we currently have deployed to help Iraqis and others fight ISIS in the Middle East—and rumors began swirling once again. (The number of Ebola troops has since been reduced to three thousand.)

When I arrived in Monrovia, several of these soldiers could be seen tramping around the good hotels wearing camouflage uniforms and patrol boots. Their official assignment is to build more Ebola treatment centers—and that's almost certainly what they will be doing—but the epidemic was already declining by the time they arrived, and many existing treatment center beds were empty. This led to much speculation in this rumor-prone society about what the actual mission of the soldiers might be. One rumor making the rounds was that they were there to prevent corrupt Liberians from stealing Ebola-tainted blood samples and selling them to al-Qaeda; another was that they were there to keep the peace should Sirleaf be pushed out in favor of a—no doubt imaginary—US-backed caretaker government.

The rumor of a US takeover intrigued me, because it echoes through Liberia's history, beginning with the first settlement of freed American slaves in the early nineteenth century. Liberia was never a colony, but American warships would occasionally appear offshore when its French and British colonial neighbors threatened its borders.¹⁶ After World War II, America set up a CIA communication center there as well as a station of the military's OMEGA navigation system—a forerunner of GPS. Liberia hosted Voice of America's Africa service as well as Firestone's vast rubber plantations and American iron, gold, and diamond mines.

In 1971, President William Tubman died and his left-leaning, idealistic vice-president, William Tolbert, took over. Tolbert expanded social services like health care and education and scrapped subsidies on imported rice to encourage Liberian farmers. However, he antagonized the US by renegotiating unfavorable contracts with Firestone and other companies. He also criticized Israel for its treatment of the Palestinians, offered support to the African National Congress and other revolutionary groups, and established diplomatic relations with North Korea, Libya, China, the USSR, and other countries on America's cold war enemy list. He also refused to grant the American military unlimited access to the nation's main airport, which it had been using to send weapons to cold war allies around the continent.

In 1980, Tolbert was murdered in his bed by soldiers allied to Samuel Doe, a young sergeant in the Liberian army. US foreign aid cuts and riots organized by CIA-backed opposition groups over increased rice prices had already weakened Tolbert's regime.¹⁷ Doe himself also claimed to have been recruited into the CIA in 1973,¹⁸ and according to eyewitnesses he called the US embassy the night of Tolbert's murder and received its blessing for the takeover.¹⁹ Ten days later, thirteen of Tolbert's cabinet ministers were paraded around Monrovia in their underwear and then shot dead on the beach before an audience of horrified Western journalists.

Doe promptly dismantled Tolbert's leftist policies, cut ties with Libya, the Soviets, and other enemies of America, renegotiated contracts with US companies, and allowed the US military free rein at the airport. In return, Doe received $500 million in foreign aid from the Reagan administration, far more than any other African country at the time.

By the mid-1980s, the Americans, finally recognizing that Doe was an erratic, corrupt thug, abetted several failed coup attempts, until he was eventually overthrown by the warlord Charles Taylor in 1990. Taylor had been a member of Doe's government, but fled Liberia with $900,000 in stolen cash in 1983. Taylor claims that while awaiting extradition in Massachusetts, he was set free by the guards and driven to New York in a US-government vehicle. From there he made his way to the Ivory Coast, where he launched his invasion of Liberia. Whether Doe or Taylor was ever really linked to the CIA is not known, but in 2006 Taylor told a journalist, "Every move we took, we consulted Washington first."

Between 1990 and 2003, Liberia was caught in a storm of insurgencies and counterinsurgencies involving Taylor's group, a splinter group headed by another warlord named Prince Johnson—who also claims to have received US support—two other American-backed factions known as MODEL and LURD, and a US-backed peacekeeping force made up of troops from Nigeria and Ghana.

In 2003, a peace deal was finally signed, and an interim government took over. Elections were held in 2005, but once again, the Americans were watching closely. A particularly warm relationship had developed between President George W. Bush and Sirleaf, who called each other "Ellen" and "George" even at high-level meetings. When Bush retired and took up oil painting, he made a portrait of her.

After Sirleaf's election, Chevron was awarded an offshore concession in a deal whose transparency has been questioned by both the Liberian General Auditing Commission and the international corruption watchdog group Global Witness. When Sirleaf was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize just weeks before the 2011 election, even though she had been censured in 2009 by Liberia's own government-appointed Truth and Reconciliation Commission for her support of Charles Taylor, opposition groups, imagining that her mysterious American backers had somehow influenced the judges in Oslo, staged violent demonstrations and boycotted the 2011 election.²⁰ Although international observers maintain that the election was nevertheless conducted in a transparent and democratic manner, many Liberians told me that they believed the American government influenced both the 2005 and 2011 elections in Sirleaf's favor. But they could not explain how it could have done so. Now some of them were saying that the Americans were growing impatient with her, just as they had with Doe and Taylor.

On my last day in Liberia, the son of one of President Tolbert's cabinet ministers took me to the prison where his father was held before being executed on the beach by Doe's soldiers in 1980. It's derelict now, and strewn with leaves and trash. The last drops of a rainstorm were falling from the rafters of the caved-in roof. "This is where everything began to go wrong for Liberia," he said, standing in one of the cells.

Liberia's problems long predate Tolbert's murder, but it is true that during his presidency, Liberia made halting progress to extend rights and services to native Africans—progress that was destroyed by Doe's coup and the decades of counter coups that followed. Tolbert was one of a number of left-leaning post-independence leaders—including Congo's Patrice Lumumba, Ghana's Kwame Nkrumah, Uganda's Milton Obote, Burkina Faso's Thomas Sankara, and Mozambique's Samora Machel—whose death or violent overthrow has been linked to Western cold war meddling. The loss of these leaders, flawed though they were, was seen by many as disrupting the development of their countries and leaving deep psychological and cultural scars. In Liberia, when Doe killed Tolbert and the mayhem began, many Liberians may well have concluded that the world was an irrational place. In their desperation, they may have lost their grip on reality, and begun to see plots and conspiracies everywhere.

Nearly every afternoon when I was in Monrovia, US military Osprey helicopters roared across the beach transporting gear for our soldiers fighting Ebola. The receptionist at my hotel told me the helicopters were coming from a US destroyer moored just off the coast. Sometimes, he said, it moved closer to shore and you could see it.

For days, I scanned the horizon trying to catch a glimpse of this destroyer, which every Liberian I spoke to seemed to have either heard about or seen. "It's HUGE!" a waitress at a beachside hotel told me. "I've seen it twice." Finally I stopped a navy officer on the street near the US embassy and asked him where it was.

"A destroyer? Wow, that would be exciting!" he said. The helicopters were flown in from Europe, he explained, refueling in midair. "I can assure you there is no US maritime presence in Liberia."

Like so much else in Liberia, the destroyer was an illusion. But here, even illusions can have serious consequences.

2 Like previous Ebola epidemics, this one must have started when the virus spread from an animal, probably a bat or a monkey, to a person and then began propagating from one person to another. Perhaps someone ate a piece of fruit that an Ebola-infected bat or monkey had drooled or urinated on, or perhaps a hunter became infected while butchering an infected bat or monkey for food. Such infections occur every few years, but what's important in this case is not where the epidemic originated, but why, once that first person was infected, it spread so rapidly from one person to another. BREAKING: GOP leaders in New York just launched a new Super PAC to support Nan Hayworth! Make sure we can fight back. Donate now.

John,

Nan Hayworth just got great news: A brand new Super PAC has launched to help New York Tea Party leaders just like her. They're willing to spend untold millions to defeat me – it'll make the $2.9 million they spent in 2012 look like nothing! Even worse, they already hit the airwaves this week.

And this new Super PAC, New York 2014, was launched to defeat Democrats. Like me. Even worse, they already hit the airwaves in New York this week.

We won't win in November unless we put ads on the air, knock on doors and reach every single voter. This isn't a drill. They're coming – and we've got to raise $3,000 by midnight to fight back.

If you've saved payment information with ActBlue Express, your donation to Sean will go through immediately:

Click to donate \$1000 right away.

Or click here to donate another amount by midnight to help us fight back against the Super PACs lining up behind Hayworth.

Hayworth is going to have loads of money behind her: Bloomberg News already called me one of three vulnerable Democrats in New York and Paul Ryan, Eric Cantor and Jeb Hensarling are all contributing to her campaign. But we know how to win – we've done it before and can do it again.

But we need resources to do it. That's especially important as Super PACs like this come flying in out of nowhere.

I wouldn't ask if it weren't important, but this is. Please click here to donate before midnight to help us raise \$3,000.

I can't do it without you.

Sean

It is not exhaustive and does not cover every subject, but it seeks to get at who HRC is fighting for and who she is standing up against.

We would like to use the call Friday to get your feedback on our general policy frame and your thoughts on the policy areas contained in (and absent from!) the document.

Subject: L&E Colloquium for 10/2: Kate Judge on Shadow Banking

Attachments: Judge Information Gaps 9.17.15.docx

Greetings, colleagues. This Friday's guest at the L&E colloquium will be Kate Judge of Columbia Law School. Kate is presenting a paper called "Information Gaps," a title that seems to me to leave a large information gap about its paper's contents. Where is the colon? The extra three phrases of descriptions? Here's the abstract instead:

A financial system is fragile when small shocks can trigger large effects. The 2007-2009 financial crisis revealed the shadow banking system to be exceptionally fragile and capable of bringing down the rest of the financial system, yet the reasons for this fragility remain incompletely understood. This paper provides new insights into the mechanisms through which small shocks can trigger significant market dysfunction in the shadow banking system and the challenges impeding efforts to design a regulatory regime capable of supporting shadow banking.

This paper argues that information gaps—pockets of pertinent and knowable information that is not actually known to any party, private or public—contribute to fragility and help to explain the systemic risk posed by shadow banking. It makes two claims. First, there are structural reasons to expect sizeable information gaps in the shadow banking system. Second, those information gaps make panics more likely and exacerbate the magnitude of market dysfunction likely to arise from a panic.

In undertaking the structural analysis required to identify information gaps, the paper also sheds light on why attempts to reform the shadow banking system have been so contentious and unproductive thus far. The shadow banking system is a true hybrid. It earns its "shadow" status because it operates in the capital markets, and therefore outside the prudential regulatory regime that governs banks. Yet it also merits its status as a "banking system" because it performs many of the economic functions historically fulfilled by the banking system and poses similar threats to systemic stability. In situating the shadow banking system at the nexus of these two historically distinct regimes, the analysis helps explain why policymakers and other experts often come to the table with different, and sometimes contradictory, assumptions about how markets work and how regulation can most effectively promote market functioning. By laying this foundation, clarifying how shadow banking contributes to fragility, and identifying ways to reduce that fragility, the paper also forges the beginnings of a more productive path forward.

Please join us Friday at noon in Hotung 2001 to discuss the aesthetics of titles, the mysteries of modern finance, and all the points of intersection thereof. Also, please let me know if you would be interested in joining the speaker for dinner at 6 on Friday evening.

Watson and I were talking about this yesterday. We thought we could maybe get someone to draw a line between his vote for the crime bill and Vermont's high incarceration rate -- tied in with the Daily Beast story that he ignored African-Americans in the state.

Don't think he's answered for it and don't think he ever sought to do anything about it.

Tony - can we confirm he didn't push any CJ reform in VT? If he hasn't taken leadership, we can ask Zerlina to push around to our Twitter friends.

Arkansas is in the bottom ten lowest states for black male incarceration rates

HILLARY CLINTON'S STANDARDS FOR THE TRANS PACIFIC PARTNERSHIP

Statement of Hillary Clinton Campaign, April 17 2015

Hillary Clinton believes that any new trade measure has to pass two tests: First it should put us in a position to protect American workers, raise wages and create more good jobs at home. Second, it must also strengthen our national security. We should be willing to walk away from any outcome that falls short of these tests. The goal is greater prosperity and security for American families, not trade for trade's sake.

*She will be watching closely to see what is being done to crack down on currency manipulation, improve labor rights, protect the environment and health, promote transparency, and open new opportunities for our small businesses to export overseas. As she warned in her book, Hard Choices, we shouldn't be giving special rights to corporations at the expense of workers and consumers.*

Hillary Clinton: TPP Needs To Protect American Workers, Raise Wages And Create Jobs, And Be In Our National Security Interests. "I think I have a pretty good idea of what we could do to meet the tasks that I believe any trade agreement—especially TPP must meet. It needs to number 1, protect American workers. Number 2, it needs to raise wages and create good jobs at home. Number 3, it needs to be in our national security interests. I've been saying that for months." [Iowa Remarks, 6/14/15]

Pope Francis has obliquely but sharply criticized how financially stable nations lend aid to developing countries, saying they sometimes require concessions that strike echoes of 20th century dictatorships.

The pontiff has also made what appears to be an unprecedented statement that Catholics may have a moral responsibility to limit the number of their children, while reaffirming Pope Paul VI's ban on artificial means of birth control.

Francis' statement about development aid was a clarification of an earlier warning against what he called an "ideological colonization" of family life, made during a meeting with families in the Philippines last week. Speaking to media Monday, Francis recounted a story of a public education minister he knew who was offered money to construct new schools for the poor.

To receive the money, said Francis, the minister had to agree to use a course book with students that taught what the pontiff called "gender theory."

"This is the ideological colonization," said the pope. "It colonizes the people with an idea that changes, or wants to change, a mentality or a structure."

"It is not new, this," he continued. "The same was done by the dictators of the last century. They came with their own doctrine -- think of the Balilla [youth groups of Fascist Italy], think of the Hitler Youth."

"They colonized the people," he continued. "How much suffering -- peoples must not lose liberty."

"Every people has its own culture," said Francis. "But when imposed conditions come from the imperial colonizers, they seek to make [peoples] lose their own identity and make an homogeny."

Francis was speaking Monday in a nearly hour-long press conference aboard the papal plane traveling back to Rome from the Philippines. He was answering a question about remarks he made last Friday, in which he warned against such colonization in an apparent reference to efforts to legalize same-sex marriage and to use of contraception.

During the press conference the pope also confirmed details of his upcoming trip to the U.S. in September. For the second time in a week, Francis too reaffirmed Catholic teaching prohibiting the use of birth control.

Reaffirms prohibition on birth control

Francis said Pope Paul VI, whose 1968 encyclical Humanae Vitae outlined the contraceptive ban, was warning against a "Neo-Malthusianism," a reference to a theories that suggested in the 1960s and '70s that exponential global population growth would lead to an irreversible world food crisis.

Citing the low rates of birth specifically in Italy and Spain, Francis said such Neo-Malthusianism "seeks to control humanity."

At the same time, however, Francis made a statement that seems without precedent for a pope, suggesting that parents may have a responsibility to limit the number of their children, saying: "This does not signify that the Christian must make children in series."

Telling the story of a woman he met in a parish in Rome several months ago who had given birth to seven children via Cesarean section and was pregnant with an eighth, Francis asked: "Does she want to leave the seven orphans?"

"This is to tempt God," he said, adding later: "That is an irresponsibility." Catholics, the pope said, should speak of "responsible parenthood."

"How do we do this?" Francis asked. "With dialogue. Each person with his pastor seeks how to do that responsible parenthood."

"God gives you methods to be responsible," he continued. "Some think that -- excuse the word -- that in order to be good Catholics we have to be like rabbits. No."

"This is clear and that is why in the church there are marriage groups, there are experts in this matter, there are pastors," Francis said. Using the term for a practice that follows church law, he continued: "I know so many, many licit ways that have helped this."

Francis was speaking about birth control in response to a question from a Filipino journalist. Use of contraception in the Philippines is a contentious issue, as the Philippine government only recently approved contraceptive access against forceful opposition from Catholic bishops.

The pope's responses regarding birth control and ideological colonization were part of a wide-ranging conference that touched on a number of other subjects, including: Corruption in church structures, the place of women in church leadership, and global mistreatment of the poor that the pontiff said could be likened to a new form of "state-sponsored terrorism."

'Ideological colonization'

Continuing to clarify his concept of "ideological colonization," Francis said he heard concerns about the matter from African bishops during last fall's Synod, who told him they often face difficult choices when presented with conditions of acceptance on much needed financial aid.

"I say to many that I have seen this," said the pope.

Francis compared such colonization to criticisms he has frequently made about the process of globalization -- saying that the homogenizing of peoples is "the globalization of the sphere -- [where] all the points are equidistant from the center."

"It is important to globalize but not like the sphere -- like the polyhedron," he continued. "Namely, that every people, every part, conserves its own identity without being ideologically colonized."

Francis on Monday also revealed more concrete plans for his trip to the U.S. in September, confirming reports that he is planning to visit Philadelphia, New York, and Washington but saying it is unlikely he will be able to travel to the West Coast or to the U.S./Mexico border.

Mentioning his earlier announcement that he will canonize Franciscan Fr. Junipero Serra on the trip, an 18th century missionary in the Western U.S. and Mexico, Francis said: "I would like to go to California for the canonization ... but I think there is the problem of time. It requires two more days [to the trip]."

It is more likely, the pope said, that he will formalize the canonization during a liturgy at Washington's Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Francis said he might also host some sort of event to mark the occasion at the U.S. Capitol building, which contains a statue of the future saint.

Francis has been invited to address a joint session of Congress during his visit, which he is primarily making to attend the Sept. 22-27 World Meeting of Families in Philadelphia. The pontiff is also likely to address the United Nations in New York.

Francis also said on Monday he would have preferred to make a visit to the southern border of the U.S., but joked that he could not do so without visiting the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City.

No visit to border on U.S. trip

"To enter the United States from the border of Mexico would be a beautiful thing, as a sign of brotherhood and of help to the immigrants," he said. "But you know that going to Mexico without going to visit the Madonna is a drama. A war could break out!"

"I think there will only be those three cities," he continued. "Later, there will be time to go to Mexico."

Speaking briefly of the role of women in the church, Francis said Monday that women bring new perspectives to church communities.

"When I say it is important that women be held in higher consideration in the church, it's not just to give them a function as the secretary of a dicastery," he said, referring to the general name for second-in-command positions of the different Vatican offices before adding: "But this can be OK."

"No, it's so that they may tell us how they feel and view reality," he continued. "Because women view things from a different richness, a larger one."

Addressing a question about corruption in the church, Francis recalled a time as a auxiliary bishop in Argentina when he was offered about $400,000 for use towards ministry for the poor -- under the condition that he accept the money under the table and allow the benefactors to keep half the sum.

With rather colorful language, the pontiff said: "In that moment I thought about what I would do: Either I insult them and give them a kick where the sun doesn't shine or I play the fool."

Emphasizing that he thinks of the church as a community of sinners, the pope continued: "Let's remember this: Sinners, yes; the corrupt, no; the corrupt, never."

"We must ask pardon for those Catholics, those Christians who scandalize with their corruption," said Francis. "It's a wound in the church, but there are so many saints, so many saints -- and sinner saints, but not corrupt [ones]."

On the Dalai Lama

Later in the press conference, Francis also rebutted news reports that he had refused to meet with the Dalai Lama while the Buddhist leader was in Rome late last year because the pope did not wish to harm relations between the Vatican and China.

While formal ties between the Holy See and the Asian country have been severed since 1951, Francis has said several times he would like to repair the relationship and would be willing to travel to China.

"I saw that some newspapers said I didn't receive him out of fear of China," said the pope. "That's not true."

The refusal to meet, said Francis, was due to a protocol of the Vatican's Secretariat of State that the pope does not meet "people at that level" when they are in Rome for conferences.

"The motive was not a refusal of a person, or fear of China," he said, mentioning that he also had not met with officials of the UN's Food and Agricultural Organization when they met in Rome last year.

More foreign trips planned

Francis also tentatively confirmed Monday that he is planning to visit three Latin American countries later this year -- Ecuador, Bolivia and Paraguay -- and two African countries: The Central African Republic and Uganda.

Saying he was speaking "hypothetically," the pope said he and organizers have to determine when would be best to go to Africa because of hot weather in the region during the summer and the continuing Ebola epidemic.

Francis also added that in 2016 he would like to travel to Chile, Argentina and Uruguay but said as yet no firm plans have been made for those visits. He added that he also wanted to visit Peru, but said he and organizers "don't know where to put it" in his schedule.

Announcement of all the trips led Jesuit Fr. Federico Lombardi, who was moderating the press conference, to interject with "everything is provisional" before joking: "We already have quite a precise and ample program of the travels of the next years."

Francis was visiting the Philippines Thursday-Sunday as the second trip in a two-part Asian voyage that saw him first visit Sri Lanka.

Speaking of his time in the Philippines, Francis said Monday that he was profoundly moved by an outdoor Mass he celebrated in Tacloban, an area of the country that was severely devastated by 2013's Typhoon Haiyan.

Francis celebrated the Mass amidst a tropical storm in the area, which was pouring rain on a crowd of some 300,000 and buffeting the area with 60 mile-an-hour winds.

To see the people there despite in those conditions, said the pontiff, "I felt as though I was annihilated. I almost couldn't speak."

Francis also said he was struck by how many in the crowds -- which grew to an estimated record-breaking 6 million for an outdoor Mass with the pope in Manila on Sunday -- were holding up children above their heads to receive a papal blessing.

It was a gesture, said the pope, that "this is my treasure, this is my future, this is my love, for this one it's worth working, for this one it's worth suffering."

"It's the way they did this that struck me," he said. "The gesture of motherhood, of fatherhood, of enthusiasm, of joy."

[Subtitle:] Hillary Clinton and the drawbacks of being the front-runner.

The Sunday before Election Day, Hillary Clinton addressed a crowd of voters at an afternoon rally in Nashua, New Hampshire. The state has long served as a source of political renewal for the Clintons. Early in 1992, during Bill Clinton's first Presidential run, he was hobbled by allegations of womanizing, but he finished a strong second in the New Hampshire primary, and his campaign rebounded. In 2008, Hillary lost to Barack Obama in the Iowa caucuses but defied the polls in New Hampshire, which showed Obama far ahead, and won the state, setting up a marathon nomination fight that lasted into June. On Sunday, she was ostensibly in the state to boost the campaigns of Governor Maggie Hassan and Senator Jeanne Shaheen, both threatened by the surging Republican tide. It was also an ideal opportunity for Clinton to advertise her unofficial status as the Democrat to beat in the 2016 primaries.

"It's really hard for me to express how grateful I am, on behalf of my husband and myself, to the people of New Hampshire," Clinton said. "Starting way back in 1991, you opened your homes and your hearts to us. And in 2008, during the darkest days of my campaign, you lifted me up, you gave me my voice back, you taught me so much about grit and determination, and I will never forget that."

Many of the candidates for whom Clinton campaigned throughout the summer and fall lost on Tuesday. Shaheen, though, was one of the clear Democratic winners. She asked at the rally what many were thinking: "Are we ready for Hillary?" The crowd chanted Clinton's name, and she mouthed a thank-you. In national surveys this year, Clinton's support among Democrats has been as high as seventy-three per cent. That makes her the most dominant front-runner at this stage of a Presidential contest in the Party's modern history. Media pundits and political strategists agree overwhelmingly that Hillary's lead within the Party is unassailable. Tuesday's results, which gave Republicans control of both the House and the Senate, may solidify her standing, as Democrats close ranks around her in an effort to hang on to the White House, their last foothold on power in Washington. But the election results could also lead to an entirely different outcome: a Republican Party that overinterprets its mandate in Congress and pushes its Presidential candidates far to the right, freeing Democrats to gamble on someone younger or more progressive than Clinton.

In every fight for the Democratic Presidential nomination in the past five decades, there has come a moment when the front-runner faltered. "Nature abhors a vacuum, and so does politics," Anita Dunn, a Democratic strategist, told me. Voters in the early states, perhaps spurred by a sense of civic responsibility, begin to take an interest in candidates they had previously never heard of. Those candidates seize on issues, usually ones that excite the left, that the front-runner, focussed on the general election, has been too timid to champion. The press, invested in political drama, declares that the front-runner is vulnerable.

Since the nineteen-eighties, four Democratic-primary contests have featured an establishment-backed front-runner who, early in the race, encountered little competition, but who eventually faced a vigorous challenge from a relative unknown. In 1984, Walter Mondale, Jimmy Carter's Vice-President, loomed over the Democratic field much as Clinton does now. In Iowa, Mondale defeated Senator Gary Hart, a younger candidate whose aim was to modernize the Democratic Party, by a wide margin, 49 to 16.5 per cent, but Hart emerged as a serious threat nonetheless. "The only thing anybody gave a damn about that night was who came in second—Who was the other guy?" Joe Trippi, who ran Mondale's campaign in Iowa, told me. But nobody in the Hart campaign had thought to slate delegates in the later primary states, and Mondale's superior organization prevailed.

In 2000, Vice-President Al Gore's ability to raise money and secure Democratic endorsements scared off most competitors, but then Senator Bill Bradley jumped into the race and briefly threatened Gore. Dunn, who worked for Bradley, said that the campaign used Gore's experience against him "by finding the things that progressives were upset with in the Clinton Administration." In 2004, the dark horse was Howard Dean, an unknown ex-governor of Vermont, who faced four experienced members of Congress: Joe Lieberman, John Edwards, John Kerry, and Dick Gephardt. Kerry emerged as the leading candidate, but Dean briefly surged ahead in the polls when he attacked Kerry and other Democrats for being too supportive of the Bush Administration. Although Dean built a large following, he couldn't organize it.

"In some ways I got captivated by my own campaign," Dean told me. He found it impossible to make the ideological and stylistic shifts that might have transformed him from insurgent into front-runner. "The problem with running against somebody like Hillary—or my problem running against Kerry—is that, when you make the turn, then you disappoint all your followers."

In the fall of 2007, Obama had a respectable national following as a senator, but Hillary Clinton led by more than thirty points in some national polls. Like Hart, Obama ran on a simple message of new versus old—"Change"—but he was prepared for a long fight over delegates when the press anointed him Clinton's main challenger. As Bradley had done with Gore, Obama attacked Clinton on matters that liberals cared about, but his main issue—the war in Iraq—was more powerful than anything available to Bradley, who had focussed on gun control and universal health care. And, like Dean, Obama energized new voters, including many African-Americans, a key voting group in Democratic primaries. But Obama had a sophisticated plan to get them to the polls. These three ingredients—message, demographics, and organization—were just enough to defeat Clinton in the primaries. For the first time in modern history, a Democratic insurgency defeated the establishment.

Could it happen again? "There is going to be a challenge," Trippi said. "And I would never underestimate the challenge if I were the Clinton campaign." Dean has said that he will support Clinton if she runs. "I think the chances are fifty-fifty the Republicans are going to nominate a nutcase, and Hillary's the perfect foil for a Rand Paul or a Ted Cruz," he told me. But he also endorsed the idea of a strong debate: "I actually don't think a primary is a bad thing. I think coronations are bad things." Another Democratic strategist described the effect that even a losing challenger could have on the race. "If you get a deft insurgent, they may not win. But an insurgent could torture this poor woman."

"Hi, I'm Martin O'Malley, the governor of Maryland. Are you guys Iowans?"

O'Malley, who is fifty-one, is one of several candidates who are considering running for the Democratic nomination. A two-term governor of Maryland, he is youthful-looking despite a receding hairline. In January of 2013, he briefly became an Internet sensation when photos emerged of him participating in a polar-bear plunge, wearing a bathing suit and revealing six-pack abs. One Sunday morning in mid-October, he was scanning the crowded tables at the Drake Diner in Des Moines. He was hungry—"Smelling all these eggs, it's killing me!"—but he had work to do before he could eat. He pirouetted around a waitress delivering omelettes and descended on a family of four to introduce himself. Like most of the restaurant's patrons, they had no idea who he was.

Historically, the longer a party remains in power, the more emboldened its activist base becomes. Many liberals are frustrated with Obama's inability to enact more progressive change, such as assertive policies against global warming and income inequality, comprehensive immigration reform, or a less hawkish foreign policy. Democratic-primary voters are always eager to see a fresh potential candidate. "Seventy or eighty per cent of people want to hear from a new perspective before they make a decision about whether to go with what they know," O'Malley told me. "A person becomes very famous in this country very quickly."

O'Malley isn't new to politics. His parents met in 1954, in Washington, where they worked together on a Young Democrats newsletter. In 1965, when he turned two, they frosted his birthday cake with the words "Martin for President 2004." He's been running for one office or another since he was in grade school, at Our Lady of Lourdes, in Bethesda, Maryland. In the past twenty-four years, he has served at just about every level of government in his state: Baltimore city councilman for eight years, mayor of Baltimore for eight years, and governor of Maryland for eight years. In January, facing term limits, he'll be out of a job. There's only one other elective office he wants to pursue.

In Des Moines, at the diner, O'Malley eagerly introduced himself to patrons and asked them to vote for Iowa's Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Jack Hatch, who was not known for his flash or political skills. A longtime Democratic state legislator, Hatch was running fifteen points behind, in an ultimately doomed campaign against Terry Branstad, the state's Republican chief executive. O'Malley was one of the few Democrats who had bothered to campaign for him. It was an odd scene: a little-known governor from a state a thousand miles away, introducing the candidate to his own voters. "He's running for governor, and he needs your help," O'Malley said, then dashed to another table to greet more Iowans.

Clinton can't present herself as a novelty. She'll be sixty-nine on Election Day in 2016 and has been a national figure for a quarter century. The last politician to become President after a similarly long and distinguished career was George H. W. Bush. Since then, the office has been won by relative newcomers: Bill Clinton, George W. Bush, and Obama. "The one time in my political life that we've gone back a generation was Carter to Reagan," Dean said. "Once you change the page on generations, you don't go back." He added that Clinton could be the exception.

O'Malley has been thinking about the political dynamics of new versus old for a long time. In 1984, he took a semester off from Catholic University to volunteer for Hart, who represented a new generation of Democratic thinking, even though he was only eight years younger than Mondale. O'Malley and a friend signed on with the campaign. "We made the decision at the age of twenty that we weren't going to defeat Reagan after one term by offering up the same old leadership from yesterday," O'Malley told me.

The conventional wisdom heading into the Iowa caucuses, he reminded me, was that "Mondale was totally inevitable, and the only person with a chance of beating him was astronaut John Glenn." The story that unfolded instead "was that Glenn totally imploded, pancaked, and Gary Hart got sixteen per cent, and it was that distant second place that was heard around the world."

The Hart campaign's organizational failure was an education for O'Malley. "It was like a 'Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe' experience for me," O'Malley said. "I walked into the wardrobe, I got about twenty years of adult experience in management and being under deadlines and high pressure, and then I came back and I was still twenty-one."

The history of Democratic primaries suggests that an insurgent can't expect to gain recognition with only a fresh face and a superior organization. Inevitably, the candidate must attack the front-runner from the left. O'Malley is not necessarily a natural candidate to pursue this strategy, but he is trying.

As a mayor and as a governor, he has been known for bringing a McKinsey-esque reform to Baltimore and to Annapolis, instituting programs that use computer-aided metrics to judge government performance. In 2002, when he was mayor, Esquire called him one of the "best and brightest"; in 2009, as governor, he was honored by the magazine Governing as one of the "public officials of the year." He applied his data-driven techniques to crime, and Baltimore's murder rate plummeted to below three hundred per year for the first time in a decade. Until recently, he hasn't offered much to Democrats who are worried that Hillary is too centrist on economics and foreign policy. But in the past two years he has won approval of gun-control legislation, a new state immigration law, the repeal of the death penalty, and an increase in the minimum wage. There was only one warning sign for O'Malley as he canvassed Iowa. His lieutenant governor, Anthony Brown, who was running to succeed him as governor, was in a close race against a local businessman and political upstart, Larry Hogan, who attacked the O'Malley administration for raising taxes.

O'Malley's strategy so far suggests that the 2016 primaries may turn into a debate not so much about Clinton's record as about Obama's effectiveness as a leader—an issue that Republicans used to win races last week, and which they would almost certainly raise in a general election against Clinton. O'Malley told me that Obama's response to the 2008 financial crisis was too timid: "When the Recovery and Reinvestment Act was introduced, it was probably half of what it needed to be, and the congressional parts of our own party watered it down to a half of that, which meant it was about a quarter of what it needed to be." And Obama was too soft on Wall Street, O'Malley said. "The moment was ripe for much more aggressive action. If an institution is too big to fail, too big to jail, too big to prosecute, then it's probably too damn big." O'Malley also talks about inequality, in terms that more populist Democrats, like Elizabeth Warren, who insists she isn't running for President, have embraced, but which Obama and Clinton have generally avoided.

Clinton has said little about economic policy in recent years and could co-opt some of the same arguments without seeming overly disloyal to the President. Many liberals, though, will want concrete promises on policy rather than mere sound bites. Michael Podhorzer, the political director at the A.F.L.-C.I.O., said, "What we learned from the Obama Administration is that if the Presidential candidate surrounds themselves with the usual Wall Street suspects, then, whatever the populist rhetoric is, that's not going to be good enough."

At the Drake Diner, O'Malley sat down briefly with Hatch and Monica Vernon, Hatch's running mate, to discuss the race against Branstad. O'Malley had a tightly scheduled day of events ahead and he ordered the No. 5: scrambled eggs, bacon, hash browns, toast, pancakes, and coffee.

"How's it going?" he asked the two candidates.

Hatch complained that everyone except a few labor PACs had given up on him. Voters weren't giving him a close look, because Branstad seemed like the inevitable victor. O'Malley told Hatch not to give up.

"There's a tremendous David-versus-Goliath Zeitgeist going on out there," he said. In his own underdog races, the key was to figure out "the narrative" to use against the front-runner and to stick to it. "You guys have to be the new."

On Tuesday, Hatch lost by more than twenty points. In Maryland, in one of the biggest upsets, Hogan defeated Brown by five points. The loss will make it difficult for O'Malley to argue that his economic agenda in Maryland is a winning formula for his party nationally. "I wasn't on the ballot," he told me after the election, insisting that the results won't change his plans. "In the last race that I ran, in 2010—not a very easy year—the exact same tax attacks were levelled and the economy was even worse, and we won by fourteen points."

At the diner, O'Malley's aide told the Governor it was time to get to the next event. He looked at her and frowned. "But I ordered the No. 5."

Democratic strategists like to divide the Party's electorate into "wine track" and "beer track" voters. Insurgents typically have done well with the wine track—college-educated liberals—and although that portion of the electorate has grown, it's still not enough to win. (Hart once told me that he did well in all the states that were benefitting from globalization; Mondale, who had union support, did well in all the states where workers were feeling economically squeezed.) It's not clear what major demographic group O'Malley could steal from Clinton; for now, he seems like a classic wine-track insurgent. On Tuesday, the Republican victory in Maryland was fuelled by working-class and suburban voters, who revolted against higher taxes.

Former Virginia Senator Jim Webb, who served one term, from 2007 to 2013, and then retired, has the potential to win the beer-track vote. In early October, I drove from Washington to a residential building that sits high on a hill in Arlington. On the eighth floor, in a condominium with a sweeping view of Washington's monuments, Webb has been plotting his own path to defeating Clinton. "I do believe that I have the leadership and the experience and the sense of history and the kinds of ideas where I could lead this country," he told me. "We're just going to go out and put things on the table in the next four or five months and see if people support us. And if it looks viable, then we'll do it."

Webb is a moderate on foreign policy, but he is a Vietnam veteran from a long line of military men. His condo, which he uses as a study, is filled with antique weaponry and historical artifacts from his ancestors. He showed me a bookcase filled with collectibles. "I've been to a lot of battlefields," he said. He pointed to some sand from Iwo Jima; glass from Tinian, the island from which the Enola Gay was launched before it dropped an atomic bomb on Japan; and some shrapnel from Vietnam. "I have that in my leg," he said.

After the war, Webb became a writer. His most famous book, "Fields of Fire," published in 1978, is a novel based on his own experiences and has been credibly compared to Stephen Crane's "The Red Badge of Courage" for its realistic portrayal of war. Webb has always moved restlessly between the military and politics and the life of a writer. In the late seventies and early eighties, he worked as a counsel on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and later as Ronald Reagan's Secretary of the Navy. He has also travelled around the world as a journalist for Parade. In 2007, I interviewed him in his Senate office weeks after he was sworn in. He noted that he was having a hard time adjusting to life as a senator and missed his writing life. Now, in Arlington, he talked about the unfinished business of his Senate career.

In his senatorial race, Webb did well not only in northern Virginia, which is filled with Washington commuters and college-educated liberals, but also with rural, working-class white voters in Appalachia. In 2008, those voters were generally more loyal to Clinton than to Obama, but Webb believes that he could attract a national coalition of both groups of voters in the Presidential primaries. He laid out a view of Wall Street that differs sharply from Clinton's.

"Because of the way that the financial sector dominates both parties, the distinctions that can be made on truly troubling issues are very minor," he said. He told a story of an effort he led in the Senate in 2010 to try to pass a windfall-profits tax that would have targeted executives at banks and firms which were rescued by the government after the 2008 financial crisis. He said that when he was debating whether to vote for the original bailout package, the Troubled Asset Relief Program, he relied on the advice of an analyst on Wall Street, who told him, "No. 1, you have to do this, because otherwise the world economy will go into cataclysmic free fall. But, No. 2, you have to punish these guys. It is outrageous what they did."

After the rescue, when Webb pushed for what he saw as a reasonable punishment, his own party blocked the legislation. "The Democrats wouldn't let me vote on it," he said. "Because either way you voted on that, you're making somebody mad. And the financial sector was furious." He added that one Northeastern senator—Webb wouldn't say who—"was literally screaming at me on the Senate floor."

When Clinton was a New York senator, from 2001 to 2009, she fiercely defended the financial industry, which was a crucial source of campaign contributions and of jobs in her state. "If you don't have stock, and a lot of people in this country don't have stock, you're not doing very well," Webb said. Webb is a populist, but a cautious one, especially on taxes, the issue that seems to have backfired against O'Malley's administration. As a senator, Webb frustrated some Democrats because he refused to raise individual income-tax rates. But as President, he says, he would be aggressive about taxing income from investments: "Fairness says if you're a hedge-fund manager or making deals where you're making hundreds of millions of dollars and you're paying capital-gains tax on that, rather than ordinary income tax, something's wrong, and people know something's wrong."

The Clintons and Obama have championed policies that help the poor by strengthening the safety net, but they have shown relatively little interest in structural changes that would reverse runaway income inequality. "There is a big tendency among a lot of Democratic leaders to feed some raw meat to the public on smaller issues that excite them, like the minimum wage, but don't really address the larger problem," Webb said. "A lot of the Democratic leaders who don't want to scare away their financial supporters will say we're going to raise the minimum wage, we're going to do these little things, when in reality we need to say we're going to fundamentally change the tax code so that you will believe our system is fair."

Webb could challenge Clinton on other domestic issues as well. In 1984, he spent some time as a reporter studying the prison system in Japan, which has a relatively low recidivism rate. In the Senate, he pushed for creating a national commission that would study the American prison system, and he convened hearings on the economic consequences of mass incarceration. He says he even hired three staffers who had criminal records. "If you have been in prison, God help you if you want to really rebuild your life," Webb told me. "We've got seven million people somehow involved in the system right now, and they need a structured way to reënter society and be productive again." He didn't mention it, but he is aware that the prison population in the U.S. exploded after the Clinton Administration signed tough new sentencing laws.

The issue that Webb cares about the most, and which could cause serious trouble for Hillary Clinton, is the one that Obama used to defeat her: Clinton's record on war. In the Obama Administration, Clinton took the more hawkish position in three major debates that divided the President's national-security team. In 2009, she was an early advocate of the troop surge in Afghanistan. In 2011, along with Samantha Power, who was then a member of the White House National Security Council staff and is now the U.N. Ambassador, she pushed Obama to attack Libyan forces that were threatening the city of Benghazi. That year, Clinton also advocated arming Syrian rebels and intervening militarily in the Syrian civil war, a policy that Obama rejected. Now, as ISIS consolidates its control over parts of the Middle East and Iran's influence grows, Clinton is still grappling with the consequences of her original vote for the war in Iraq.

Although Webb is by no means an isolationist, much of his appeal in his 2006 campaign was based on his unusual status as a veteran who opposed the Iraq war. "I've said for a very long time, since I was Secretary of the Navy, we do not belong as an occupying power in that part of the world," he told me. "This incredible strategic blunder of invading caused the problems, because it allowed the breakup of Iraq along sectarian lines at the same time that Iran was empowering itself in the region."

He thinks Obama, Clinton, and Power made things worse by intervening in Libya. "There's three factions," he said. "The John McCains of the world, who want to intervene everywhere. Then the people who cooked up this doctrine of humanitarian intervention, including Samantha Power, who don't think they need to come to Congress if there's a problem that they define as a humanitarian intervention, which could be anything. That doctrine is so vague." Webb also disdains liberals who advocate military intervention without understanding the American military. Referring to Syria and Libya, Webb said, "I was saying in hearings at the time, What is going to replace it? What is going to replace the Assad regime? These are tribal countries. Where are all these weapons systems that Qaddafi had? Probably in Syria. Can you get to the airport at Tripoli today? Probably not. It was an enormous destabilizing impact with the Arab Spring."

Early on as a senator, Webb championed the idea of the so-called "pivot to Asia," a rebalancing of America's strategic and diplomatic posture from the Middle East to the Far East—an idea that Obama and Clinton subsequently adopted. Webb pushed Secretary of State Clinton to open up relations with Burma, a policy that Clinton includes in her recent book, "Hard Choices," as a major achievement. (Obama is travelling to Burma this week.) When I raised the subject with Webb, he seemed annoyed that he hadn't received adequate credit for the Burma policy. People who know him well suggest that part of what's motivating him to consider a primary challenge to Clinton is his sense that she hasn't expressed the proper gratitude.

It remains to be seen whether Democratic voters will care as much about foreign policy in 2016 as they did about Iraq in 2008. And it's unclear how Clinton's record on the Middle East will look two years from now. If Webb runs, Clinton will face an unpredictable debate about her hawkishness.

At the end of our interview, I noticed a picture of Don Quixote on Webb's wall of military treasures. He laughed when I asked about it. "The beauty of Don Quixote is not that he dreamed impossible dreams," he said. "It's that, because he believed, he caused other people to believe."

Senator Bernie Sanders, a socialist and the longest-serving independent in Congress, is seventy-three; he speaks with a Brooklyn accent that is slightly tempered by more than two decades of living in Vermont, where he was previously the mayor of Burlington and then the state's representative in the U.S. House. One evening in mid-October, he was hunched over a lectern addressing students at the University of New Hampshire in Durham. Supporters selling "Run, Bernie, Run!" bumper stickers milled around the edges of the crowd, along with a local labor leader, Kurt Ehrenberg, who is a regular volunteer with Sanders's potential Presidential team in the state. Long wisps of Sanders's white hair levitated above his head, as if he were conducting electricity.

"The great crisis, politically, facing our nation is that we are not discussing the great crises facing our nation," he told the students. He launched several attacks on billionaires, each one to cheers. "We look at the United Kingdom and their queens, their dukes, and whatever else they have, and say, 'Well, that is a class society, that's not America.' Well, guess what? We have more income and wealth inequality in this country than the U.K. and any other major country on earth." It was time "for a political revolution."

Earlier in the day, Sanders had told me that he was thinking about running for President. If he does, he will be the Democratic Party's Ron Paul: his chance of winning would be infinitesimal, but his presence in the race and his passion about a few key issues would expose vulnerabilities in the front-runner's record and policies, as Paul did with John McCain and Mitt Romney. Sanders recited for me a list of grievances that progressives still harbor about the Clinton Presidency and made it clear that he would exploit them in his campaign.

"The Clinton Administration worked arm in arm with Alan Greenspan—who is, on economic matters, obviously, an extreme right-wing libertarian—on deregulating Wall Street, and that was a total disaster," Sanders said. "And then you had the welfare issue, trade policies. You had the Defense of Marriage Act."

He said that the George W. Bush Presidency "will go down in history as certainly the worst Administration in the modern history of America." But he has also been disappointed by Obama. "I have been the most vocal opponent of him in the Democratic Caucus," he told me. In his view, Obama should have kept the grass roots of his 2008 campaign involved after he was elected, and he should have gone aggressively after Wall Street. "His weakness is that either he is too much tied to the big-money interests, or too quote-unquote nice a guy to be taking on the ruling class."

Sanders, like Paul, has a loyal national following that finances his campaigns. He made life difficult for Democrats in Vermont for many years. In 1988, when he was the mayor of Burlington, he went to the Democratic caucus in the city to support Jesse Jackson's Presidential campaign. One woman, angry with Sanders for his attacks on local Democrats, slapped him in the face. Soon after he won a seat in the House of Representatives, in 1990, some Democrats tried to exclude him from caucusing with them. At a meeting to decide the matter, his opponents humiliated him by reading aloud his previous statements criticizing the Democratic Party.

"I didn't know that they could track back everything you had ever said," Sanders told me. "That did not use to be the case. You could certainly get away with a lot of stuff—not anymore!"

The Democrats eventually welcomed him back as a collaborator. In 2006, when he ran for the Senate, the Party supported his candidacy. He now campaigns for those Democrats who are comfortable having an avowed socialist stumping for them, and raises money for others. But he has never been a member of the Democratic Party, and if he decides to run against Hillary in the primary, he will have to join. The alternative would be to run as a third-party candidate in the general election. "It's a very difficult decision," he said. "If I was a billionaire, if I was a Ross Perot type, absolutely, I'd run as an independent. Because there is now profound anger at both political parties. But it takes a huge amount of money and organizational time to even get on the ballot in fifty states."

Most likely, he said, he will run in the Democratic primaries, if he runs at all. I asked him if he thought there was deep dissatisfaction with Hillary on the left. "I don't think it's just with Hillary," he replied. "I think it's a very deep dissatisfaction with the political establishment." He insisted that he would run a serious campaign against her, not just "an educational campaign" about his pet issues. "If I run, I certainly would run to win."

The 2016 Presidential primaries will be the first fought by Democrats since the Supreme Court opened the door for individuals to spend unlimited sums of money on an election. In 2012, those new rules almost cost Romney the Republican nomination, when nuisance candidates like Newt Gingrich and Rick Santorum, who in previous years would have never survived their early losses, were propped up by rich allies. Before 2012, it would have been difficult to find interest groups that might help fund someone like O'Malley, Webb, or Sanders. Now all it takes is a billionaire who cares about gun control, climate change, war, or inequality.

"What if you decided to have a really strong antiwar person run?" one Democratic strategist told me. "Don't you think four or five crazy rich people from the Democracy Alliance"—a network of wealthy Democratic donors—"would be funding that?"

Democratic voters often like to flirt with other candidates in the primary, before the arranged marriage is made. O'Malley wants Democrats who were demoralized by Tuesday's election results to know that they have a choice. "None of our surrogates from the Party's past were able to affect the results of this wave," O'Malley said, in a veiled reference to the Clintons, who campaigned hard for many candidates who were defeated. "I think a reasonable person could conclude that the nation is looking for new solutions to our problems and looking for new leadership."

In October, at a campaign event in Iowa, O'Malley arrived late to a small gathering of boozy liberals at a fund-raiser for Bruce Braley, the Democratic Senate candidate, who ended up losing by eight points. In his spare time, O'Malley plays in an Irish rock band called O'Malley's March. He strapped on a guitar and sang "Scare Away the Dark," a neo-folk song by the band Passenger about choosing your own path, rather than the one everyone else says you should follow. The white, middle-aged crowd clinked wineglasses and rose to their feet when he belted out the chorus:

To sing, sing at the top of your voice,

Love without fear in your heart.

Feel, feel like you still have a choice.

If we all light up, we can scare away the dark.

O'Malley wandered through the crowd, shaking hands, and ordered a drink at the bar. "People," he said, "want to be inspired."

Washington Post: "Left struggled to move voters with Koch attacks and other big-money messages"

By Matea Gold

November 9, 2014, 5:08 p.m. EST

One clear lesson emerged from last week's midterm elections: Running against big money in politics is hard to do.

Democrats and their allies made the topic one of their central lines of attack this year, featuring the billionaire industrialists Charles and David Koch in nearly 100 different political spots that ran in states from Alaska to Florida. But the issue failed to gain traction, and most of those Democrats lost.

The difficulty they encountered in transforming the public's disgust with rich donors into political action speaks to how hard it is to move voters who view both parties as captives of wealthy patrons.

Even as Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid (D-Nev.) repeatedly railed against the Kochs in speeches on the Senate floor, billionaire hedge-fund manager Tom Steyer commanded attention this year for the tens of millions he poured into a super PAC backing Democratic candidates.

"It's very understandable for voters to feel like there's a pox on both houses," said Nick Penniman, executive director of Issue One, a bipartisan group working to reduce the influence of wealthy interests in politics.

The 2014 campaign should have presented a ripe environment to push a message about money in politics. Super PACs and other groups reported spending more than $550 million on congressional races, a record for midterm elections. Voters complained bitterly about waves of negative ads that were backed by out-of-state outfits.

Across the country, candidates sparred over the influence of their rich contributors, while new reform-minded super PACs sought to make campaign money a potent political issue.

But the argument proved to have its limits.

Mayday PAC, which launched with much fanfare as the “super PAC to end super PACs,” failed to play a decisive role in any race.

Some Democrats argue that the anti-Koch message contributed to their victories in Senate races in New Hampshire and Michigan. But it did not save incumbents in states such as North Carolina, Iowa, Colorado and Arkansas, all of whom highlighted the intense spending against them by the Koch-backed political network.

The answer, some party strategists think, is not to abandon the anti-Koch message but to amplify it.

“The way I view it is that we were just getting started,” said David Brock, founder of American Bridge, the independent pro-Democratic research operation.

Brock’s group plans to dig even deeper into the Kochs as part of an effort to tie them to the incoming class of congressional Republicans, a theme it will then carry into the 2016 presidential race.

“The Kochs themselves were put on the defensive for the first time, and a number of their candidates were put on the defensive when these issues were raised,” he said. “To me, that’s a sign that we’re on to something.”

Top officials in the Koch political operation say Tuesday’s dismal showing for Democrats proved that the left’s strategy was flawed.

“While Harry Reid and Senate Democrats spent their time attacking job creators who spoke out against their failed policies, we focused on the issues voters cared about,” said James Davis, spokesman for Freedom Partners Action Fund, a super PAC financed by the Kochs and other donors. “Americans showed they are tired of the political games — they want solutions.”

Some activists seeking to curb the political power of wealthy interests also see the anti-Koch strategy as problematic.

“I think any time you vilify a single family, you create a too-narrow perspective on the problem in a way that inhibits the bigger conversation that we need to be having,” Penniman said. “It’s not about a single family. It’s about a core dysfunction in the American experiment.”

In Kentucky’s Senate campaign this year, liberal groups sought to cast Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell as beholden to his campaign donors. The Republican fired back by attacking rich Hollywood figures and other liberal contributors who supported Democratic challenger Alison Lundergan Grimes.

His response proved effective: while 46 percent of Kentucky voters named McConnell as the candidate closest to wealthy donors, 39 percent said it was Grimes, according to an election eve poll conducted by Every Voice Action, a super PAC that seeks to give small donors greater influence in campaigns.

“It’s not enough to just beat up on your opponent, because now we’ve seen evidence in this cycle that your opponent can just beat up on you,” said David Donnelly, the group’s president. “You have to have a real policy agenda and you have to point out where your opponent’s solutions fall short.”

Groups on the left tried myriad approaches to the money-in-politics issue this year.

One of the most high-profile efforts was Mayday PAC, a super PAC started by Harvard Law School professor Lawrence Lessig that spent more than $10 million going after candidates opposed to measures that would lessen the impact of wealthy donors.

In the end, the group could not point to a race in which it turned an election. But Lessig maintains it still had influence, noting that Mayday's late campaign against Rep. Fred Upton forced the powerful Michigan Republican to plow millions into what most expected was going to be an easy reelection.

"That was a tax on Fred Upton, and other people should look at this and think, 'Do we want to be in the position to be taxed like Fred Upton if we're on the wrong side of this issue?'" he said.

Most of the messaging about money was focused on the Kochs, a campaign that Reid launched in a speech on the Senate floor. The attack was echoed throughout the year not only by the party's campaign committees but also by independent groups such as NextGen Climate Action, a super PAC largely financed by Steyer.

The Steyer group spent more than $62 million on congressional races, losing the bulk of the campaigns it played in. But Chris Lehane, the group's chief strategist, argued that the success of Democratic Senate candidate Gary Peters in Michigan, where NextGen sought to tie the Kochs to local pollution issues, "provides a paradigm for the future."

The take-away for some Democratic strategists this year was that making an issue out of wealthy donors can work.

"A message completely reliant on who is funding candidate X is not going to work on its own, but I think it can be quite effective as part of a larger framework to show how a candidate is out of touch with the people they represent," said Ali Lapp, executive director of the Democratic super PAC House Majority PAC.

Pollster Geoff Garin, who did work for the super PAC Senate Majority PAC and other Democratic campaigns this year, said he saw evidence that voters were swayed by the anti-Koch message when the ads were at their most intense over the summer.

In one poll of voters in 10 states conducted in early August, 62 percent said they would have a less favorable impression of the Republican Senate candidates if they heard that the Koch brothers were backing them with millions of dollars, Garin said.

"Wherever and whenever those ads ran, they had a breakthrough quality that wasn't true of other negative advertising," he said.

The problem, he thinks, is that Democrats did not keep up the line of attack through Election Day.

"If anything, we let up on the Koch brothers too soon," Garin said.

Some party strategists think the new Congress will provide them with ample opportunities to draw more connections between new GOP lawmakers and their wealthy backers. And they expect the anti-Koch message to continue to dominate in 2016.

There were moments on the campaign trail this fall when Hillary Rodham Clinton, the expected Democratic presidential front-runner, picked up the theme.

At an October rally for Sen. Kay Hagan (D-N.C.), Clinton denounced the "onslaught of out-of-state money and negativity" leveled against the incumbent, urging her supporters to show "that no matter how much money has flooded into this state, North Carolina is not for sale." Hagan lost on Tuesday.

Bill Clinton went even further on the stump. During a swing through Michigan, the former president singled out the Koch brothers, warning: "They're spending so much money, what they want after this is a Congress full of Koch pets."

When high-mindedness collides with reality, reality usually wins. Remember this when you hear talk of making the next two years a miracle of bipartisan comity.

Begin by being skeptical of the lists of what President Obama and the now Republican-controlled Congress should "obviously" agree on. Notice that liberal lists (including mine) start with immigration and sentencing reform while conservative lists focus on free trade and tax reform. Surprise! The election changed no one's priorities.

And don't be fooled by anyone who pretends that the 2016 election isn't at the top of everyone's calculations.

With Washington now so deeply divided philosophically, each side is primarily interested in creating a future government more congenial to getting what it wants. Republicans want to win total power two years from now; Democrats want to hang on to the presidency and take back the Senate.

Therefore, don't misread the internal Republican debate. It is not a fight between pristine souls who just want to show they can govern and fierce ideologues who want to keep fighting. Both GOP camps want to strengthen the conservatives' hand for 2016. They differ on how best to accomplish this.

The pro-governing Republicans favor a "first do no harm" approach. Thus did incoming Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell wisely rule out government shutdowns and debt-ceiling brinkmanship. He's happy to work with Obama on trade because doing so advances a free market goal the GOP believes in — and because a trade battle would explode the Democratic coalition. For Republicans, what's not to like?

The more militant conservatives are more candid about the real objective, which is "building the case for Republican governance after 2016." Those words come from a must-read editorial in National Review, instructively entitled "The Governing Trap."

"A prove-you-can-govern strategy will inevitably divide the party on the same tea-party-vs.-establishment lines that Republicans have just succeeded in overcoming," the magazine argued. Also: "If voters come to believe that a Republican Congress and a Democratic president are doing a fine job of governing together, why wouldn't they vote to continue the arrangement in 2016?"

They're saying, in other words, that spending two more years making Obama look bad should remain the GOP's central goal, lest Republicans make the whole country ready for Hillary Clinton. This is the prevailing view among conservatives. McConnell's main argument with Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Tex.), and his followers is not about ends but means. McConnell is no less focused than Cruz on bringing down Obama and discrediting Democratic governance, but McConnell needs to be more subtle about it.

Where does this leave Obama and the Democrats? The first to-do item on Obama's list must be to repair his currently abysmal relations with his own party on Capitol Hill. He will need his party as the GOP goes after him in one "investigative" hearing after another. He also needs them if he goes ahead, as he should, with executive orders on immigration reform.

Obama has already drawn a red line on immigration from which there is no easy retreat. And exit polls explain why Republicans, particularly House Speaker John Boehner, have little reason to act before Obama's gone.

Overall, 57 percent of voters favored granting illegal immigrants "a chance to apply for legal status," while 39 percent preferred deporting them. But those who favored deportation voted for Republican House candidates by better than 3 to 1. Boehner won't risk alienating this loyal group. Better for Obama to pick a fight in which he is taking action than to give way to passivity and powerlessness.

In the end, Obama needs to govern as best he can even as he and his allies prepare for the longer struggle.

Democrats were tongue-tied about economics in the campaign. They avoided highlighting the substantial achievements of the Obama years for fear that doing so would make them seem out of touch with voters whose wages are stagnating. But neither did Democrats come up with plausible answers and policies to win over these voters. They lost both ways.

A Democratic Party paralyzed on economics won't deserve to prevail. The president and his party — including Clinton — must find a way of touting their stewardship while advancing a bold but realistic agenda that meets the demands of Americans who are still hurting. This encompasses not only defending government's role in achieving shared growth but also, as Obama suggested Friday, restoring faith in how government works.

Solving the country's economic riddle would be a much better use of their time than investing in the fantasy that McConnell and Boehner will try to make Obama look good.

Fox News column: Media Buzz: Howard Kurtz: "Hillary helped by midterm wipeout? Behind the media spin"

By Howard Kurtz

November 10, 2014

You might have thought, after a traumatic and gut-wrenching defeat for the Democrats, that the midterms were a nightmare for Hillary Clinton.

Ah, but you don't understand the sophisticated spin at work. The election was actually her dream come true!

Her team has convinced some reporters and pundits — or they have convinced themselves — that Hillary emerges enhanced from the wreckage.

I'm skeptical of that, but I'm also going to let you in on a secret: The midterms were probably a wash for Hillary. This whole notion that when a big shot goes out and campaigns for candidates and gets some credit for the victories and some blame for the defeats — it's a journalistic construct. Most voters don't care about endorsements. Alison Lundergan Grimes loses to Mitch McConnell by nearly 16 points, and Hillary was supposed to have saved her?

No one wants to say that, because it doesn't get you clicks or ratings. So there's a "debate": Did the midterms help or hurt?

If I had to choose I'd lean toward hurt. But here's what the New York Times says in a front-page story:

"The lopsided outcome and conservative tilt makes it less likely she would face an insurgent challenger from the left." Like Hillary was losing sleep over Bernie Sanders?

“And a Republican-led Senate creates a handy foil for her to run against: Rather than the delicate task of trying to draw a stark contrast with an unpopular president in whose administration she served, her loyalists say, Mrs. Clinton can instead present herself as a pragmatic alternative to what they predict will be an obstructionist Republican Congress.

‘Rand Paul and Ted Cruz and their allies in the House’ will be ‘pushing Republican leadership hard,’ said Geoff Garin, a pollster who succeeded Mark Penn as chief strategist for Mrs. Clinton’s 2008 campaign. ‘When that happens, it will give Hillary Clinton or whoever the Democratic nominee is a better platform to run.’”

An obstructionist Republican Congress? We’ll have to see. Pure spin, of course. But if you’re going to quote the spin from the left, why not include the shots from the right — such as Rand Paul saying the midterms were not only a referendum on President Obama but on Hillary?

Now it’s true that it will be easier for Hillary to run against a Republican Senate and House rather than dancing around Harry Reid. But it’s also true that as a former secretary of State, she is inextricably tied to an administration that was just repudiated at the polls, regardless of how she might try to distance herself.

Yahoo News has also been trumpeting the notion that Hillary is a 2014 winner:

“Even Tuesday’s huge GOP victory shows that Republicans still have some catching up to do if they want to defeat her in 2016.

“Let’s start with the map. Sure, the GOP won a remarkable number of races Tuesday night. But how many purple states did Republicans actually pick up?

“For every Senate seat that Republicans flipped in 2014, there’s one — or more — that’s likely to flip back to the Democrats in 2016. The chances that the GOP will still control the upper chamber of Congress after 2016 are slim.

“How does this help Clinton? By giving her an added boost on an electoral playing field that already favors a Democratic presidential nominee.”

That seems a stretch. The electoral map was always going to favor the Dems in 2016, regardless of last week’s outcome. And to take one example, instead of having friendly Democratic governors in Florida, Illinois and Wisconsin, the machinery will be controlled by Republicans.

The conservative Washington Free Beacon takes the other side:

“The 2014 election was a disaster for Hillary Clinton. Why? Let us count the ways.

“She will have to run against an energetic and motivated Republican Party. If the GOP had failed to capture the Senate, the loss would have been more than demoralizing...

“She would have claimed partial credit for saving the Senate. She would have promised to build on Democratic success. You would have been able to see her aura of inevitability for miles.

“But she has been denied. Instead she must calculate how to salvage the wreckage of 2014. She must convince Democrats that their savior is a grandmother who lives in a mansion on Massachusetts Avenue. It is her party that is shell shocked, not the GOP. Trust me: You don’t want to be in that position.”

The author of the Times piece, Amy Chozick, has reported aggressively on Hillaryland, and she did break the news that the unofficial candidate will stop her paid speeches and go on a listening tour (sound familiar?) before her announcement. Plus, the campaign headquarters will likely be in New York's Westchester County (the better to appeal to suburban voters than, say, Manhattan).

The bottom line is that Hillary will be running for a third Democratic term. Beats me why anyone thinks that task was made easier by the party's midterm drubbing.

MSNBC: "Scott Walker: Hillary Clinton is big loser of midterms"

By Irin Carmon

November 9, 2014, 4:05 p.m. EST

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker, fresh off his third victory in four years, dropped some heavy hints about running for president in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday.

Asked by moderator Chuck Todd about a pledge Walker made in October to serve his four-year term, Walker, a Republican, hedged. "I said my plan was for four years. I've got a plan to keep going for the next four years. But, you know, certainly I care deeply about not only my state, but my country," Walker said. "We'll see what the future holds."

Polls had shown a close race between Walker and businesswoman Mary Burke this year, raising Democrats' hopes that they could take out a champion of conservatism, but Walker won with 52.3% of the vote. He also survived a recall election in 2012.

Todd asked Walker if he would defer to Congressman and fellow Wisconsin Paul Ryan, who was their party's vice presidential nominee in 2012.

"I love Paul Ryan. I've said many times before I'd be the president of Paul Ryan fan club," said Walker. But there is a limit to his love, apparently: "But I do think if we're going to beat Hillary Clinton in this next election, we've got to have a message that says, 'Hillary Clinton is all about Washington.' I think in many ways, she was the big loser on Tuesday because she embodies everything that's wrong with Washington." Pressed by Todd to spell out whether or not that meant he wouldn't defer to Ryan, Walker said, "Paul Ryan may be the only exception to that rule. But overall, I think governors make much better presidents than members of Congress."

But for all of the talk of "executive experience," Todd pointed to indicators suggesting that Walker's economic record isn't all that great. "When it comes to wage growth, it's below the national average, Wisconsin is. When it comes to job growth, it's below the national average. And your tax cut policy has created a larger deficit, a $1.8 billion deficit hole that you're going to have to plug next year. And part of it is because state revenues didn't come in as expected. Is it possible that the idea of cutting taxes as a way to create jobs and assimilate the economy just isn't working in Wisconsin?"

Walker disputed that, claiming that the deficit hole was temporary pending more revenues and budget cuts, and adding, "So the simple answer is, you compare us to Illinois where they raise taxes, we lower taxes by $2 billion in property and income, and we had a much, much lower unemployment rate and a much better economy than they do. Thank God they elected [Republican] Bruce Rauner, because that'll help turn things around down there, just like we have in Wisconsin."

Walker also defended his decision to refuse the federal Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act. A nonpartisan report found Wisconsin would have saved $206 million over two years and $500 million over three and a half years had it expanded Medicaid, covering over 80,000 more people.

Walker suggested the federal government would renege on its obligations. "I mean, think about it. States that have taken the Medicaid expansion are betting on the fact that the Congress and the president, who can't deal with the $17 trillion are going to magically somehow come up with new money. They haven't paid that money for Medicaid even to the states as we speak," he said, adding, "Relying on the federal government for your balancing a budget is really I think a fool's bet."

The law says that the federal government will pay 100% of the cost of new Medicaid enrollees until 2016, then gradually decreasing to 90% of the cost in 2020. Only repeal, the dear wish of Republicans, would stop that money from coming.

The Hill blog: Ballot Box: "Cantor: Democrats have no bench for 2016"

By Sarah Ferris

November 9, 2014, 12:00 p.m. EST

Former House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-Va.) said on Sunday that the Democrats' "lack of bench" for 2016 will likely dent their chances of keeping the White House.

"Look at our bench. I bet there's a dozen people out there looking to run," Cantor, who lost his seat in a primary shocker, said in an appearance on NBC's "Meet The Press."

On the Democratic side, Cantor said he could only point to Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) as someone with the "passion and intensity" to run. Warren has so far declined a bid in 2016.

Cantor said an early frontrunner like Hillary Clinton has kept away other candidates, arguing that the Democratic party is also "out of ideas."

Cantor also cautioned that the 2014 midterms – which targeted President Obama – could hurt the chances for the former secretary of State.

"She's going to have very difficult time disconnecting from the Obama administration," he said.

[Subtitle:] The pipeline's opponents are regrouping after a rough midterm season.

The environmentalists who spent years fighting the Keystone XL pipeline to a standstill are back in a familiar position: against the ropes, Washington abuzz with speculation about their imminent defeat.

They don't mind it. A new congressional clash over the oil pipeline stands to motivate greens' base after a dismal midterm election that left them with an $85 million bill and several longtime allies out of office.

"Republicans want to pick this fight, but it's also been one of our most successful issues," said one official at a major environmental group who's working on the anti-Keystone campaign. "We're gearing up for this, and that's what we're good at, turning people out into the streets. We know how to fight this fight."

The lack of any post-election resignation among climate activists closest to the pipeline fight is especially striking given how confident Republicans are that Tuesday's elections handed them the votes they needed to force President Barack Obama's hand on the $8 billion project. Supporters of the pipeline will have a filibuster-proof majority in the new Senate, and Republicans have said a bill to greenlight Keystone will be one of the first bills they pass in January.

On Thursday, White House spokesman Josh Earnest was noncommittal on how the president would respond to such a bill. When reporters pressed him about the high probability that Republicans can approve a Keystone bill next year, Earnest said, "OK, well, we'll see."

Behind those four words is a back story that greens remember well: Nearly three years ago, Republicans successfully added language to a must-pass tax bill that gave Obama 60 days to decide on Keystone. The president signed that bill — then rejected the pipeline, saying Congress' deadline didn't allow enough time for the State Department to finish its permit review. Keystone developer TransCanada had to reapply.

Obama could carve out a similar rationale if Republicans send him a bill forcing approval of the long-delayed Alberta-to-Texas pipeline. Greens took heart this week after both Obama and Earnest spoke about the integrity of the State Department's review "process."

"We've seen Republicans on the Hill talking a big game, saying they're going to ram this through, but if you look at the way this issue has played out over the last several years, they might be too confident," League of Conservation Voters Senior Vice President of Government Affairs Tiernan Sittenfeld said in an interview.

And even a White House wounded by Tuesday's midterm rout is unlikely to accept Congress prodding Obama on Keystone before he's ready, greens say, given his vow last year to consider climate change in ruling on the pipeline.

"As much as they lost the election, it doesn't mean they like to get bullied and be perceived as weak, which is what will happen if they allow Congress to force them to approve the project," 350.org communications director Jamie Henn said.

The green group official agreed, requesting anonymity to predict that should Republicans attempt "to force the president to make a decision, because of the frame in which he's indicated he'll make the decision, they risk losing the project."

Keystone supporters see the State Department "process" — which has dragged off and on for six years — as little more than political cover for Obama to delay a decision that will bring him flak no matter which side he comes down on. But now, with 2016 in sight, other political considerations could offer an incentive for Obama to dispose of the controversy quickly by striking a deal with the GOP to approve Keystone, eliminating an issue that has already dogged prospective presidential front-runner Hillary Clinton.

American Petroleum Institute President Jack Gerard, calling the pipeline "the first test" of whether Obama can credibly partner with the new Republican Congress, offered to help lower the volume of the Keystone battle.

"We're all ears," Gerard said, "prepared to meet any place, any time to work through a way if the president needs to have further dialogue on this."

But Gerard slammed the administration's stated rationale for pausing its Keystone review in April — the need to wait for the outcome of a Nebraska Supreme Court challenge to the validity of a state law regarding a portion of the pipeline's route. That's a "smokescreen" and a "sideshow" that is "totally unrelated to the president's decision, and the White House knows that," Gerard said.

Depending on how the Nebraska court rules, either late this year or early next year, the State Department has said it would resume its review of whether Keystone would meet the national interest. That analysis was nearing its final moments before last spring's delay.

Further complicating the political calculus of any bipartisan Keystone deal, however, is the chance that even a fast-tracked resolution of that State Department review would take weeks to complete. The White House, then, could face a race to decide on the pipeline next year before congressional Republicans force another Keystone showdown.

Obama has offered few clues about his opinions on the project, aside from public and private remarks in which he cast doubt on both environmentalists' warnings of doom for the planet and Republicans' claims that Keystone would be a major job creator. Energy analysts have interpreted some of his words as hints he may be open to a deal with Canada, including his comments to The New York Times that the Canadians "could potentially be doing more" to counteract the greenhouse gas emissions from Alberta's oil sands.

Republicans remain on the offensive over Keystone, making it a centerpiece of their early agenda planning for 2015. They chastised Obama for saying Wednesday that the pipeline is only "one small aspect of a broader trend" toward greater North American energy production.

"House Republicans agree that our energy strategy should be broader than just one pipeline, which is why we have passed more than a dozen other bills to support the American energy boom and unleash the benefits," House Energy and Commerce Committee aides wrote in a memo Thursday. "But Keystone XL still remains an important part of any comprehensive energy plan so we will keep fighting for its approval."

Environmentalists welcome that fight. They note that Democratic Rep. Gary Peters of Michigan, an unabashed Keystone critic, won his Senate race easily on Tuesday, and they dispute oil industry arguments that Sen. Mark Udall (D-Colo.) lost his seat last week because of his failure to fully support Keystone.

"The mobilized constituency on Keystone is the opponents," Henn said, "not the proponents."

New York Times opinion: David Gergen, co-director of the Center for Public Leadership at the Harvard Kennedy School: "Democrats Need to Show That Government Can Work"

By David Gergen

November 9, 2014, 11:45 p.m. EST

In the short term, Democrats must do the obvious: Settle on a strategy with the president to break the gridlock, build a new farm team of outstanding candidates for the Senate and House and convince voters that a Hillary Clinton presidency can get big things done.

It's the long term that seems harder to figure out. For my money, Democrats must once again become the party of the future. For more than 80 years, their leaders have turned to government as the option of first resort in tackling national problems. That worked well for decades, but now it manifestly doesn't.

One federal institution after another has experienced egregious failures in recent years -- from Federal Emergency Management Agency to the Department of Veterans Affairs, Health and Human Services to the Internal Revenue Service. Public faith in government has plunged, and voters in the midterms blamed Democrats -- especially Obama -- for incompetence.

We live in an era where a spirit of innovation and entrepreneurship is sweeping the country but most federal institutions seem oblivious. Democrats should look to mayors in cities like New York, Boston and Chicago who have been streamlining services and overhauling the way government works. In Boston, Mitchell Weiss, the former chief of staff to our beloved Mayor Thomas Menino, is introducing a course at the Harvard Business School on "public entrepreneurship." Democrats should sign up.

Hillary Clinton actually has a foundation upon which to build -- the initiative her husband and Al Gore introduced to "re-invent" government two decades ago. It didn't go as far as it should and Democrats since have abandoned the idea. Now is the time to revive it. They could start by organizing a blue ribbon panel right now -- to be ready for the 2016 elections -- that comes up with a fistful of ideas to bring innovation and entrepreneurship to Washington.
